Emmy Lou.

DO YOU HAVE A DATE TONIGHT, TAFFY?

YOU KIDDING, EMMY LOU?

Marjorie Links

WELL, ANOTHER SATURDAY NIGHT AND NO DATE AGAIN··

I HAVEN'T HAD A DATE ON A SATURDAY NIGHT IN MONTHS!

SAME HERE, EMMY LOU

I THINK IT'S ALMOST A YEAR FOR ME!

MY MOM SAYS MY ROOM LOOKS LIKE A GOAT'S NEST

THAT MEANS I CAN'T GO OUT THE REST OF THE WEEK UNTIL I CLEAN IT UP!

I WAS LATE GETTING HOME LAST NIGHT. SO I'M NOT ALLOWED TO GO TO ANY MOVIES ALL MONTH!

MY ALLOWANCE NEVER SEEMS TO GO VERY FAR··I GET IT MONDAY MORNING AND IT RUNS OUT BY MONDAY AFTERNOON!

THERE HASN'T BEEN ANY BABY-SITTING JOBS AROUND, SO I HAVEN'T BEEN ABLE TO EARN ANYTHING EXTRA

ALVIN AND I HAVE BROKEN UP

SO NOW I HAVE NOBODY

NEITHER HAVE I

I DIDN'T EVEN HAVE ANYONE TO BREAK UP WITH!

NEXT WEEK WE'RE HAVING A BIG TEST IN HISTORY

I'M GOING TO REALLY HAVE TO STUDY HARD FOR IT

BUT I'M FLUNKING HISTORY NO MATTER WHAT I GET ON THE TEST!

I'M DOING TERRIBLE IN SCHOOL, TOO

I THINK I'M FLUNKING JEWELRY

I LOST ALL MY BOOKS ON THE WAY HOME FROM SCHOOL AND I CAN'T REMEMBER WHERE I LOST THEM!

WOW! THINGS SURE GET COMPLICATED!

HELLO, GIRLS!

JUST CHATTING?

JUST ENJOYING YOURSELF?

THAT'S NICE··

SOME DAY YOU GIRLS WILL LOOK BACK ON THIS AGE AS THE BEST TIME OF YOUR LIFE!

EB FLO

by Paul + Marjie Sellers

I NEVER THOUGHT THE DAY WOULD COME WHEN I'D FEEL LIKE THIS

DO YOU KNOW WHAT I AM, EB? USELESS!

I'M A CABBAGE!

I HAVE NO OTHER PURPOSE IN LIFE THAN TO SIT HERE AND VEGETATE!

DON'T BE RIDICULOUS, FLO!

JUST SAW FORTY-FOUR JOHN—HE WAS TELLIN' TH' BOYS STORIES 'BOUT YOU, WHEN YOU AND HE PROSPECTED TOGETHER—

YEAH? HOPE HE USED A LITTLE DISCRETION···WELL, JOHN'S GOT HIS HALF OF THE MINE BACK···

YES··OLD FORTY-FOUR JOHN IS RICH NOW—BUT IT WON'T CHANGE HIM··REAL FOLKS LIKE JOHN NEVER CHANGE··

"DADDY"··

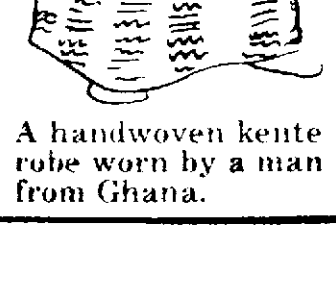
African Clothes

When children visit the Museum of African Art in Washington, D.C., they often try on clothes made just like those worn by native Africans. (Many of today's Africans wear clothes styled just like ours, but others keep the traditional dress.)

A Nigerian man's gown.

A Nigerian woman's dress.



A Nigerian drummer.

A North African migrant's outfit. (Migrants move from place to place.)

A Nigerian woman's three-piece wrapper dress.

A handwoven kente robe worn by a man from Ghana.

Why not color these African dress styles?

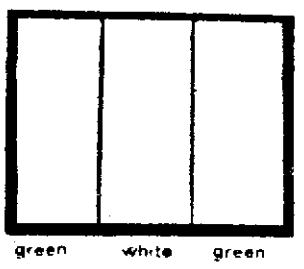
Africa Today



Twenty-six years ago, Africa was a continent divided into colonies ruled by European countries. Today, Africa is made up of over 40 independent countries that rule themselves. Some of the countries are too small to write in the map above.

1. Gambia
2. Guinea-Bissau
3. Sierra Leone
4. Cabinda
5. Lesotho
6. Swaziland
7. Malawi
8. Burundi
9. Rwanda
10. Uganda
11. Afars and Issas

Nigeria

More people live in Nigeria than in any other African country. Nigeria is ruled by military leaders. Most Nigerians are Negroes. Some are Moslems who follow the teaching of Mohammed. Some Nigerians are Christians. Others are members of tribal religions.

To Keep You Posted: Feature material on pages 1 and 4 make this issue of The Mini Page ideal for use as a poster to hang at home or at school. Background information: The countries of Africa can be divided into three categories: Arab nations, White controlled areas and Black Africa. The Arab nations are: Mauritania, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Egypt, Sudan, Somalia. The White controlled areas are the Territory of Afars and Issas (a tiny overseas territory of France), South Africa and Rhodesia. South Africa and Rhodesia have been in the news a lot. The blacks, who make up the majority in these countries, want to run the government. The whites in the minority would like to keep control as long as possible. More whites live in South Africa than in Rhodesia. South Africa has about 4,000,000 whites in a total population of around 21,000,000. The leader of the whites in South Africa is John Vorster (FORCE-ter). The government believes in the practice of apartheid (a-PART-hit) or the separation of the races. Rhodesia has 247,000 whites in a total population of about 5,000,000. The leader of the whites in Rhodesia is Ian Smith. Black Africa includes the other countries not mentioned. Blacks make up about 70 percent of Africa's population. Independent African countries send representatives to the United Nations. This gives these new countries a strong voice in UN affairs.

Understanding a Faraway Continent!

Art Brings Africa to America

A boy studies a wood carving of a figure kneeling and holding a kola nut bowl. Offering kola nuts to visitors is a sign of hospitality to many Africans.

Many school children are learning about the life and customs of Africa by visiting museums.

The Museum of African Art in Washington, D.C., was the first one in the country just for African art.

Sometimes visitors dress up in African costumes and play real African musical instruments.

They touch masks, statues and other works of art.

They listen to storytellers from African countries.

This museum, like many others, puts American children in touch with the continent that has played an important role in our country's history.

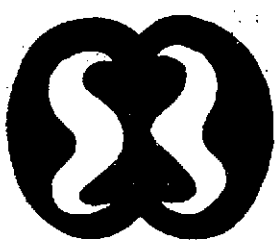
The Symbols of Africa



The people of Ghana, like many Africans, use symbols in their art. They often weave them into their cloth. They also make them into jewelry.

African Recipe: Groundnut Stew

This is a good "Make with Mother" recipe. Since it can be made in an electric frying pan, it is also an excellent one to make in the classroom.

You'll need:
One 4-6 pound chicken, cut into small pieces
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons white pepper
1 tablespoon ground ginger
¼ cup peanut oil
1½ cup peanut (groundnut) butter mixed with juice from canned tomatoes and beaten into a smooth paste.
1 16-ounce can tomatoes
2 medium onions
¼ cup tomato paste
½ green pepper
2 teaspoons paprika or red pepper
1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic.

What to do:
1. Rub chicken pieces with salt, white pepper and ground ginger.
2. In a large heavy saucepan or electric frying pan, heat the oil and brown the chicken, removing chicken from burner when evenly browned.
3. Empty the oil, leaving enough to brown the onions and green pepper. Cook onions and pepper about 5 minutes. Add tomatoes, tomato paste, garlic and red pepper and let it simmer for 5 to 10 minutes. Add the chicken.
4. Stir in peanut butter paste and keep on cooking, uncovered, for about 1 hour. (Chicken may fall off bones, but that's good. Take the large bones out with a spoon.)
5. Serve stew on rice. If you wish, you can serve hard-boiled egg slices, finely chopped onions, pineapple or mandarin orange slices or unsalted peanuts along with it.)

This recipe is courtesy the Frederick Douglass Institute Museum of African Art, Washington, D.C.

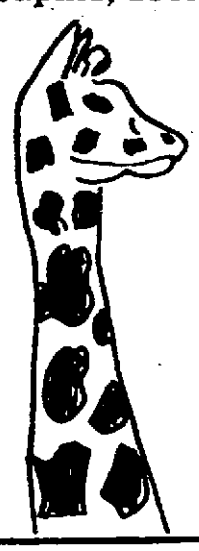
Black History Month

Black History Month is celebrated the month of February. Abraham Lincoln was born on February 12, 1809. Frederick Douglass was born on February 14, 1817.

Frederick Douglass was born a slave. Although it was against the law, a kind owner in Baltimore, Maryland, taught him how to read.

Later, he taught other slaves to read. He ran away to Massachusetts and began making talks against slavery. Then he fled to England. He came back to this country, bought his freedom, and started a newspaper.

When the Civil War ended, he worked for the government in Washington. He served as the Minister to Haiti.



Frederick Douglass

The Museum of African Art in Washington, D.C., is in buildings surrounding a home of Frederick Douglass.

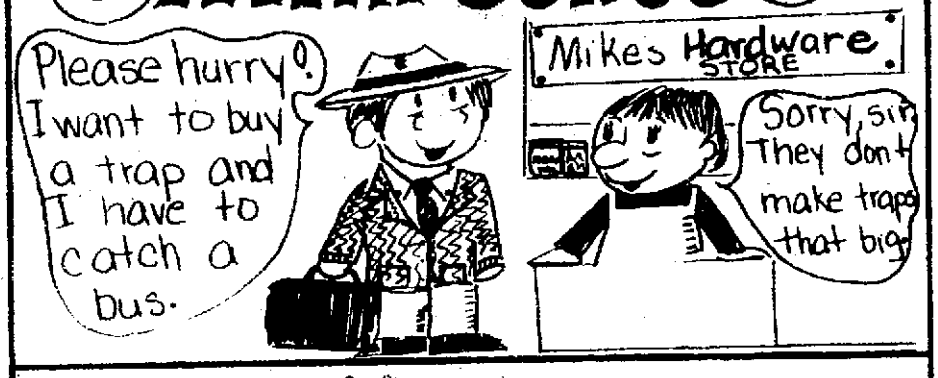
Super Sport: Johnny Bench

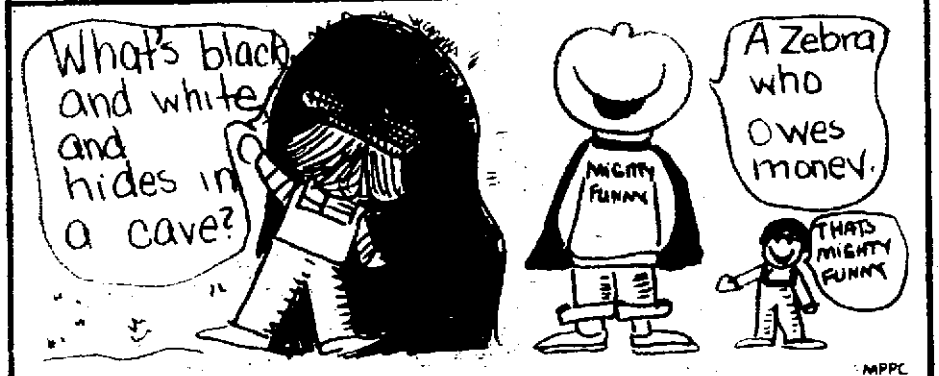
When Johnny Bench gets in the driver's seat, Cincinnati's "Big Red Machine" really rolls.

That was obvious last October as Johnny led the Reds to their second straight World Series title.

The gifted catcher had eight base hits in 15 times at bat. He also played well in the field. His super record won him the Series' Most Valuable Player award.



Johnny got a new car for his fine job, but he gave it to his brother.



He hits with power and is an excellent catcher with a golden arm. Few base runners can steal against him.

Johnny, who grew up in Oklahoma, has other interests outside of baseball. He does some TV commercials and owns a restaurant in Cincinnati.

TWISTING THE FIBERS MAKES THEM CLING TOGETHER TIGHTLY, AND MAKES THE ROPE HARD AND STRONG. THE ROPE FIBERS COME FROM SUCH PLANTS AS HEMP AND JUTE. IN THE ROPEMAKING FACTORY, MACHINES TWINS AND TWIST THE TOUGH FIBERS INTO LONG STRANDS, WHICH ARE THEN TWISTED TOGETHER TO FORM THE FINISHED ROPE.

GEN. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR IN 1946 WITH WIFE JEAN

Q. What does Mrs. Douglas MacArthur think of the film made of her husband, Gen. MacArthur, by a Hollywood studio?—Steve Conkovich, Granite City, Ill.

A. Mrs. Jean MacArthur says she has always been opposed to such a movie, has no connection with it at all, thinks no movie can do justice to the general's career.

Q. Can you tell me the true reason why the Shah of Iran has paid $18 million for the Italian luxury liners Michelangelo and Raffaello? Each of them can carry 1500 passengers. Surely, no man wants two yachts that big.—G.F., Chicago.

A. The Shah did not purchase the two luxury liners for his personal use. He bought them for the purpose of turning them into seagoing hotels for his officers and their families. Upon refitting, they will become part of the Iranian Navy.

JACKIE ONASSIS

Q. If Jackie Onassis is ever foolish enough to marry again, would she lose the $250,000 she gets tax-free each year from the Onassis estate? Also, how much is she worth?—Vinnie Byrd, Montauk, N.Y.

A. Marriage would cost Jackie the bulk of her inheritance from Onassis. She is said to be worth in the vicinity of $3 million.

Q. Sal Mineo, the young actor who was murdered in front of his Hollywood apartment last year—has any progress been made in finding his murderer?—Janice Gershenson, Newark, N.J.

A. To date, practically none.

Q. Is it a fact that H. John Heinz, heir to the pickle and ketchup fortune, spent $5 million to be elected U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania? Has any other senatorial candidate come near spending that much?—G.T., Lancaster, Pa.

A. H. John Heinz (R., Pa.) spent $2.93 million in the 1976 campaign. Of that amount, only $540,000 came from outside contributions. Heinz set a new record for campaign spending since the federal campaign finance disclosure law came into being in April 1972. The previous campaign spending record was established in 1972 by John R. Tower (R., Tex.), who spent $2.3 million getting himself reelected.

Q. There has been so much gossip about the love affair between the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lucy Mercer Rutherfurd, his wife's secretary, that I really do not know how much is truth and how much is gossip. Is there any reliable book that tells the truth?—Mrs. G.H.K., Hickory, N.C.

A. One of the fairest and most authoritative is "My Parents: A Differing View," by James Roosevelt and Bill Libby. Apparently FDR fell in love with Lucy Mercer, the affair endured until his death, and it changed considerably the character of his marriage to Eleanor Roosevelt.

CYRUS VANCE

Q. Cyrus Vance, the Secretary of State—can you tell us what boards and clubs he sits on and whether he will resign from all? —K.L., Larchmont, N.Y.

A. Cyrus Vance sat on the boards of The New York Times, IBM, Pan Am, a Lehman Brothers mutual fund, Yale University trustees, the Rockefeller Foundation, Presbyterian Hospital of New York. He is a member of the Century Association and Links Club in New York, the Metropolitan Club in Washington. He has resigned from all the above boards and says he will resign from any "non-integrated" club.

Q. Can you verify whether Rudolf Nureyev, who defected from the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad 15 years ago, is moving to Hollywood?—Flora H., Miami, Fla.

A. Nureyev, who resides in London, recently finished starring in the film "Valentino." If the picture is any good, he may receive Hollywood offers. In that event, he would consider leaving England, where the tax bite is heavier than it is here.

FIRST WIFE,CYNTHIA, AND BEATLE JOHN LENNON IN 1966

Q. Some weeks ago Cynthia Lennon, first wife of Beatle John Lennon, criticized him as an irresponsible father in a magazine article. Lennon replied in a blistering letter that was made public. What did he have to say about her charges that they took drug trips and so forth?—D.Y., Swampscott, Mass.

A. Lennon wrote: "As you and I well know, our marriage was over long before the advent of LSD or Yoko Ono.

"Your memory is impaired, to say the least. Your version of our first LSD trips is rather vague. You seem to have forgotten subsequent trips altogether.

"You also seem to have forgotten that only two years ago, while I was separated from Yoko Ono, you suddenly brought Julian [Lennon's son by Cynthia] to see me in Los Angeles after three years of silence.

"During this visit you didn't allow me to be alone with him for one moment. You even asked me to remarry you or give you another child 'for Julian's sake.'

"Finally, I don't blame you for wanting to get away from your Beatle past, but if you are serious about it you should try to avoid talking to and posing for magazines and newspapers.

"We did have some good years, so dwell on them for a change."

Cynthia is married to engineer John Twist, lives in North Wales. Lennon, Yoko and their son Sean live in New York City.

Q. Why is Sen. Barry Goldwater getting divorced after all these years, or is it his brother Bob who is getting unhitched?—G.L., Tucson, Ariz.

A. It is Senator Goldwater's son, Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., and his wife Susan who have decided upon a trial separation after four years and one son. Susan, mother of 22-month-old Barry 3rd, is managing Previews, Inc., a real estate firm in Washington, D.C., while Goldwater continues to represent his California district.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

CARTER TO TED KENNEDY: ". . . THERE WILL BE TIME FOR YOU AFTER I'VE SERVED EIGHT YEARS IN THE WHITE HOUSE."

CARTER'S CAMP Political aficionados who like to collect golden nuggets of inside information will find "Convention," a new book by Richard Reeves, a treasury of revealing tidbits.

For example, during the Democratic National Convention, screen star Warren Beatty offered to organize a "Stars for Carter" committee after his first two choices--Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Gov. Jerry Brown of California--were shot down. "Thanks," said Jerry Rafshoon, one of Jimmy Carter's major media advisers, "but we don't take sloppy thirds."

Jimmy Carter's most influential friend at the convention was Charles Kirbo, the slow-talking Atlanta attorney from King & Spalding, who is still his most influential adviser. When Kirbo wanted five tickets to see "A Chorus Line," the Broadway musical hit of the season, "...within 10 minutes the public relations man for the show's producer, Joseph Papp, called back. Five of the best orchestra seats were no problem at all. Mr. Papp would come to the theater himself to make sure that Mr. Kirbo and his party were comfortable...."

When Carter started to search for a running mate, "those closest to him were convinced that he was going to choose Sen. Frank Church of Idaho. But when Carter went through the motions of telephoning '30 distinguished Americans' for their opinions of the men on his list, he kept hearing that Church was something of a windbag--the actual words were more polite. The men he kept getting good reports on were Walter Mondale, [Sen. John] Glenn and sometimes Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine."

Among those who received phone calls from Carter, Kirbo and Hamilton Jordan about possible Vice Presidential candidates were Ralph Nader, John Gardner, Derek Bok (President of Harvard), Kingman Brewster Jr. (President of Yale), James Reston of The New York Times and Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr.

One of Carter's most effective money-raisers was Phil Walden of Macon, Ga., president of Capricorn Records, who used the Allman Brothers and other performers to promote $850,000 for Jimmy.

"On the day Carter announced his candidacy for President, Dec. 12, 1974 --at the time, it hardly seemed a date worth remembering--he stopped by [Ted] Kennedy's office to ask the 42-year-old Senator's plans. Kennedy told Carter the same thing he had been telling the newspapers, that under no circumstances would he run. 'That's good,' Carter replied, 'because there will be time for you after I've served eight years in the White House.'"

Reeves employed a half dozen reporters to help him cover the 1976 Democratic National Convention, and their combined coverage makes for information and titillation.

OLYMPIC GAMES PRESS CENTER To attract newswriters from everywhere, Soviet authorities announced recently that they will build a gigantic press center to accommodate journalists covering the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

According to Tass, the official Soviet news agency, the main press center will be erected on Zubovsky Boulevard, 10 minutes away by bus from Lenin Central Stadium in Luzhniki Park, where about a third of the events will be staged.

The press center will offer a 500-seat auditorium, Tass says, plus TV and radio studios, accreditation offices, photo labs, a TV theater, and a rental and repair shop for equipment. Journalists will also be serviced by an automated computer system, "Olympiad," which will provide them with instant information on all Olympic events. In addition, a vast communications center -- 2000 square yards -- will feed stories to the world via telephone, teleprinter, telex and facsimile facilities.

Foreign journalists who have worked in the Soviet Union say they'll believe the press center when they see it.

WILD VALENTINE FOR YOUR WILD GUY

In his wildest dreams, your man probably wouldn't expect a Valentine's Day greeting like this. Isn't that the best reason in the world to surprise him with the great Wild Turkey?

HALFWAY ROUND THE WORLD, SOLO: MRS. KRYSTYNA CHOJNOWSKA-LISKIEWICZ OF POLAND IN SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, WITH HER SLOOP (IN BACKGROUND)

UNSUNG HEROINE In 1966, when Francis Chichester of England arrived in Sydney, Australia, on his successful round-the-world solo trip in his boat, Gypsy Moth, he was hailed as one of the great sailors of all time and subsequently knighted.

A few weeks ago, a 40-year-old Polish woman named Krystyna Chojnowska-Liskiewicz sailed halfway round the world in her single-masted boat, Mazurek, unnoticed and unpublicized.

The first woman to do it alone, she began her trip in the Canary Islands, sailed across the Atlantic, through the Panama Canal, then to Tahiti, Fiji and Sydney, Australia. Next week she sets out on the return trip from Australia to Europe.

"I had nothing for company," says Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz, who is married to a boat-builder in Gdynia, "except a yellow teddy bear called Albatross and a tiny doll called Seagull."

When she arrived in Sydney this past December, there were no officials to meet her, a marked contrast to the fanfare which greeted Francis Chichester 10 years ago.

Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz is a naval architect herself and was chosen for the trip by the Polish Yachting Federation.

NEW SOVIET WEAPONS Do the Soviets want military parity or military superiority? That is one of the key questions President Jimmy Carter and his intelligence advisers will have to decide upon in the months to come.

The word from U.S. intelligence sources in Europe is that the Soviets are arming their forces in East Germany for the first time with a new antiaircraft missile system designed to destroy low-flying enemy planes.

The Soviet SA-8 radar-guided system fires two missiles simultaneously at a single target.

It is the second advanced weapon the Russians have moved into East Germany in recent months. The first was the T-72 tank, which rolled into East Germany last November. The T-72 is heavily armored against antitank missiles and can fire accurately while on the move, which many U.S. tanks cannot do.

Until a few months ago, the Soviets refused to deploy the SA-8 antiaircraft missile and the T-72 outside the Soviet Union.

What does this mean -- that the Soviets are bolstering their air- and ground-defense systems in East Germany or building up their offensive capability? Probably both.

U.S. INDIANS STERILIZED Thousands of American Indian women have been sterilized by the Indian Health Service (IHS) without properly consenting to their sterilization.

A report by the General Accounting Office reveals that 3400 Indians were sterilized during a four-year period in the four areas surveyed alone and suggests that the total probably goes much higher.

The GAO report covers Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Aberdeen, S. Dak., and Oklahoma City, Okla. Sen. James Abourezk (D., S. Dak.) asked the GAO to look into the situation after receiving many complaints about the surgery. Apparently many Indian women consented to sterilization believing that the operation was mandatory instead of optional. More complete explanations should have been made.

LABOR BEFORE LEISURE In a national referendum, the hard-working Swiss people recently rejected a proposal to reduce their working week from 48 hours to 40. In the same referendum, they supported the government's right to continue supervising prices.

Of all the nations in the world, Switzerland has the soundest currency and one of the best records for continued labor peace.

OIL TANKER SAFETY The trans-Alaska $8 billion pipeline will be finished sometime this year. But questions of oil tanker safety will apparently persist.

As the supertankers ply their way southward from Port Valdez to Washington, Oregon or California, how many accidents are likely?

One study recently completed in Alaska, based on statistical analyses of tanker safety elsewhere, holds that at least 20 major accidents are likely, with spillage of more than 3 million gallons of oil.

Valdez Harbor has a navigation hazard known as "Middle Rock," which is located in the center of the 6000-foot-wide channel and, according to a second report, "poses a psychological barrier" for some pilots.

In December the tanker Argo Merchant, flying the Liberian flag, broke apart off Nantucket, Mass., dumping most of its 7.6 million gallons of heavy industrial oil into the North Atlantic.

Can you imagine what 20 such accidents would do to the Alaska-to-California shoreline?

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in the yard of his villa 15 miles from Cairo and seven minutes by a helicopter that was presented to him by Nixon as a gift.

An Interview With Egyptian President Sadat:

Peace Prospects Are Better Than Ever

by George Michaelson

Sadat with his second wife, Jihan. They have three married daughters and a son. Mrs. Sadat is progressive-minded and tends to be an advocate for women's rights. She is in her third year of studies at Cairo University.

CAIRO, EGYPT.

The dapper, 59-year-old Egyptian President, Anwar Sadat, was strolling through the plush garden of his Nile villa when he stopped suddenly. Leaning over a tall bush of pink roses, the national flower of Egypt, he plucked one and brought it to me. Then, in his deep-voiced, fluent English, he said: "I want the American people to know something. I want them to know that never before have the prospects for peace been better. Not in the last 28 years—since Israel was created—have we had a better chance for a permanent settlement in the Middle East. We must not lose this chance."

It was a dramatic statement, to be sure. And coming in the course of a far-ranging, 80-minute discussion with this writer and PARADE's editor, Jess Gorkin, it was also a statement with a purpose—namely, to convince the American public and the Carter Administration that Anwar Sadat, as key spokesman for the Arab "moderates," is ready to make peace.

Indeed, as the suave and personable Egyptian leader put it himself: "I want Jimmy Carter to hear me. I realize the man has just come into office, and I don't want to hurry him before he has a chance to acquaint himself with our situation. But let's face it, you Americans are crucial to the peace process here, and I think it of the utmost importance that I have an opportunity to talk face-to-face with your President."

Precisely when President Carter will meet with Anwar Sadat is not clear at this writing. But what has become obvious is that the Egyptian leader is staking the future of Middle East peace talks, and possibly his personal future as well, on America's intentions. As noted Egyptian journalist Mohamed Heikal told PARADE: "Sadat has put all his eggs in the American basket and has sold the Egyptian public on the fact that you are going to deliver."

This vital move to put his "eggs in the American basket," it may be remembered, was first made by Sadat in 1973, right at the end of the October War—the first war that Egypt did not lose to Israel. With the Egyptian troops having successfully crossed over the Suez Canal (Sadat is still publicly heralded in Egypt as "The Hero of the Crossing"), but with his army unable to recapture any more of the once-Egyptian Sinai, Sadat openly welcomed the United States' efforts to intervene and bring about a cease-fire.

'My good friend Henry'

And this we did. In the person of Secretary of State Kissinger, whom Sadat continues to refer to as "my good friend Henry," America helped end the fourth Arab-Israeli war. Subsequently, through Kissinger's "shuttle diplomacy," we helped negotiate the two Sinai disengagement pacts (January 1974, September 1975) that have returned to Egypt the oil fields and crucial Sinai passes—though not the bulk of Sinai, which remains in Israel's hands.

Recalls President Sadat of these historic meetings with the former U.S. Secretary of State: "Henry Kissinger came along at a very important juncture for us, and he brought with him the willingness of America to resume its crucial role here. Both my country and Israel desperately needed someone we could trust, because, understandably, neither of us has any trust in the other. Henry Kissinger turned out to be that man. Today, if you ask whether I would like to see Henry Kissinger continue as a special emissary in future negotiations, I can tell you, of course, I like Henry. But whomever you choose will be okay with me, and really what is essential is that the U.S. continue its willingness to help us negotiate a permanent settlement here."

Sadat's terms for Israel

At this point, the settlement that Sadat hopes the U.S. can help him achieve—by using its special influence with Israel—is one that calls for a return to the Arabs of the territories occupied by Israel in the June '67 War: that is, the rest of Sinai to Egypt, the Golan Heights to Syria, and the once-Jordanian West Bank along with the Gaza Strip to the Palestinians. In exchange, Sadat says, he is willing to go to the Geneva Conference and sign "a peace agreement" with Israel which would end the state of war between the two countries.

"I defy the Israelis to state what they are willing to do as I have stated my plan," Sadat told us, his voice rising to the challenge. "They will not do it. Rabin's government has been very weak, and they are afraid of peace. I tell you frankly, I would have preferred it if I were dealing now with Golda Meir [Rabin's predecessor]. Even though she is a 'hawk,' she at least has guts; she has all the guts in Israel. As it is, the Israelis have nobody in power telling them the facts, telling them what must be done. Meanwhile, we are ready here. I have the confidence of my people, and I am putting my plans quite clearly for everyone to see."

'Great political risks'

Whether or not one agrees with Sadat's pointed comments on Israel and its leadership, most observers here would acknowledge that the Egyptian President has put forth his plans "quite clearly"—moreover, that he has demonstrated some courage in doing so. As one U.S. diplomat in Cairo commented to us: "Sadat has taken great political risks in talking as plainly as he has. And, in fact, it is a point of pride with him that he is willing to speak so directly. You see, deep down, Sadat likes to think of himself as still being a simple Egyptian villager, a fellah—that is, a man who holds firm beliefs but is not afraid to tell you straight what he is thinking, with no frills attached."

Nowadays, in his elegant Savile Row suit, the urbane Egyptian leader looks anything but a fellah, though he was born and raised in a typical Egyptian village in the Nile delta, a place called Mit Abu al Kom. To this day he regularly visits there and prays at the village mosque dressed in his galabiya, the traditional peasant outfit. (Sadat is a devout Moslem, and on his forehead is a large callus which comes from bowing his head five times a day in prayer toward Mecca.)

Nasser's boyhood friend

While many of Sadat's relatives are still fellahin, his immediate family—he is one of 12 children—actually left the village for Cairo back when he was a teen-ager. Young Anwar at the time was sent off to the prestigious Abbassieh Military Academy, and it was there that he became friends with a boy a year older than he: Gamal Abdel Nasser. From then on, his personal star was tied to Nasser's.

With Nasser, he became one of the dozen Free Officers who overthrew the feudal monarchy of King Farouk in 1952. Nasser emerged as Egypt's No. 1 man, and his loyal friend Sadat became a publicist and spokesman for the new regime. He represented Nasser at foreign conferences and served for a number of years as editor of the semi-official newspaper Al Goumhouriya. (Sadat is the author of several books.) He was appointed head of Egypt's parliament (1961) and eventually became Vice President to Nasser (1964-67, 1969-70). When the charismatic strongman died in 1970, Sadat was selected to fill Nasser's spot—an assignment that nobody felt he, or anyone else, could ever do.

Mural in downtown Cairo shows Sadat as "Hero of the Crossing," which refers to the crossing of the Suez Canal into Sinai in the 1973 war. This was the first war in four not lost to the Israelis and it bolstered Egyptian morale.

But, as it turned out, Sadat soon emerged as rais (chief) in his own right. Today, with his picture displayed prominently on billboards throughout Egypt, he is the undisputed leader in this country of 38 million people. Moreover, in the 6½ years he has been in power (last September he was elected to a second six-year term as President), he has gradually weaned Egypt away from several of Nasser's most fervently held policies.

Arab 'moderates'

Thus, whereas Nasser was at bitter odds with the conservative oil monarchy of Saudi Arabia, Sadat has patched up this relationship to the point where the Egypt-Saudi Arabia axis along with Jordan and Syria now make up the Arab "moderates" who are pushing for a negotiated settlement with Israel. (A "rejectionist" front made up of Libya, Iraq and some radical Palestinian factions opposes any attempt at negotiations.) In addition, while Nasser sailed staunchly along with the Soviet Union, Sadat has begun to steer a more Western-oriented course—a decision that was presaged back in 1972, when he expelled almost all the 20,000 Soviet military and civilian technicians then in Egypt.

When we asked about his present relations with the Soviets—who, as Egypt's military backer, have provided billions of rubles of war equipment—Sadat answered: "Quite frankly, my relations with the Soviet Union are still very highly strained. They are not sending us military equipment, not even spare parts, and they refuse to reschedule our debts to them. I would prefer to normalize my situation with them, though I have told them I am willing to do so only if they accept me as I am and don't try to make me into what they want. But, for their part, they don't like how I have dealt with Kissinger and

Gum for oil wells. A thickener called xanthan gum is being used with detergents to help free oil that clings to underground rock formations and resists recovery by conventional methods. Once injected into a well, the thickener restricts the detergent to where it will do the most good, keeping it from running all over the place. This and other methods of enhanced recovery may eventually add billions of barrels to America's oil reserves (about two-thirds of the oil ever discovered in this country is still underground, because it's hard to get out). The ultimate problem is economic, not technological. Some experimental recovery methods double the price of a barrel of oil, and others are even more costly.

More regulatory silliness. Too few buses for too many riders in Cairo. The city, it is estimated, contains 10 million of Egypt's 38 million people, of whom some 75 percent live at a subsistence level. Sadat says he needs peace to develop his country and raise living standards.

how I have made such an understanding with the United States."

As a matter of fact, throughout our discussion, it was this understanding with the U.S. that the Egyptian leader continued to stress. And what is more, he made it clear that he wants the rapprochement to go on. Having restored diplomatic relations with the U.S. in 1973 (which Nasser had severed during the June '67 War), Sadat says he now wants to enhance those ties. He stated that a hot line between Cairo and Washington would be "a welcome idea." In addition, Sadat is hopeful that the U.S. will continue, and perhaps increase, its aid to Egypt, which last year amounted to $900 million.

Yet, for all his desire to improve his own relationship with America, Sadat nonetheless is quick to emphasize that he is not trying to drive a wedge between the U.S. and Israel—not now and not in the future peace agreement, either. Says Sadat: "I never asked the United States—and I shall never ask it—to drop its special relations with Israel. On the contrary, I tell you even if every Israeli wants to have a gun and a Phantom [jet], give it to them; but tell them not to use it on us. I even go further: If Israel wants to have a military pact with you, I will not oppose it. I shall not be asking for a pact, but if Israel wants one, give her this guarantee. I don't mind."

U.S. troops in Sinai

In terms of "guarantees," we then asked how Sadat would view the stationing of American troops in a future buffer zone between Egypt and Israel. (Presently, as part of disengagement agreement No. 2, some 200 American civilian technicians are stationed in the buffer zone between the two countries in Sinai, where they are monitoring the truce.) Sadat mulled the question over, puffing deeply on his pipe, and then said: "Well, I shall not oppose the stationing of U.S. troops. I don't think it's the ideal solution. It would be better to have a force made up of all the major powers. But I supported the idea of the U.S. technicians—in fact, I suggested it. And if Israel wants the guarantee of U.S. troops as part of the peace agreement, I will not oppose this. As I say, give her whatever guarantees she wants. I will have no objection."

Closed during the 1967 war, the Suez Canal reopened in June 1975. U.S. minesweepers helped clear it and Japanese dredgers are at work deepening and widening it. The canal raises $500 million a year, but Egypt hopes improvements will increase revenues and cut its annual balance-of-payments deficit of $3 billion.

Army officers taking a group of Egyptian citizens on tour of captured Israeli fortifications in the Sinai. Egyptians have kept the fortifications intact and expect to keep them as a showpiece. They also plan to build two tunnels under the canal to pipe fresh water into the Sinai to irrigate the land for agriculture.

As forthcoming as all this may be, Sadat is aware that the concessions he is offering are less than what Israel wants. For one thing, the Israelis assert that under no conditions will they feel safe enough to return all the territories. And secondly, Israel says that a peace "agreement" is simply not enough. What they desire is a peace "treaty," which will completely normalize relations between Arabs and Israelis and, they argue, indicate that the Arabs "accept" Israel's existence. Specifically, Israel wants a free movement of people and goods across the borders and the exchange of diplomatic envoys.

To this plan for trade and person-to-person exchanges, Sadat told us: "These are conditions that Israel is trying to impose on us in order to block a settlement from being made. I wonder, after 28 years of bitterness and hostility between us, is it logical or practical to talk now about such exchanges? Look, I have already opened the Suez Canal and am letting Israeli cargo pass through. But, as for these other matters, no Arab country, no Arab leader, will agree to them; and you cannot take it as a sign of bad intentions from me that I don't. What I say is: let us first end the state of war, let Israel withdraw from our lands; then we can discuss such things, depending on Israel's conduct."

Rabin's doubts

At that point, we pressed the Egyptian leader on the fact that some people, especially the Israelis, are apt to regard his comments as an unwillingness to "accept" Israel. I recalled, for example, that Israeli Prime Minister Rabin, in an interview with PARADE this past summer, had said: "No Arab leader is willing to accept that we are here to stay."

Sadat listened carefully and then, in a voice tinged with anger, answered: "How could anyone believe this when I am saying that I am ready to go to the Geneva Conference with them? Who are they? A phantom? A ghost? I realize that Israel is a fact and I have said that I am willing to sign a peace agreement with them. This is something that no Arab leader has ever said. . . ."

Sadat paused, shook his head slowly and then, after some moments, added: "Believe me, I am sincere when I say I am ready to end the state of war with Israel; and, goodness knows, they must be ready, too. We in Egypt do not wish to go on like this, spending money and losing our people in war. My country needs peace. We have many domestic problems, and we need peace so that we can grow and develop normally."

Undoubtedly true. And this, perha
more than any other reason, is w

But apart from all this, the major

Western investments here. In the la

A Computer in Every Home

by Theodore Berland

CHICAGO.

When Karl Weller, 14, comes home from school, he leaves his books at the front door, shucks his coat, grabs a snack in the kitchen, and runs up to an attic room. There he sits before a television screen and flips some switches. Letters flash across the screen: TRY YOUR HAND AT GOVERNING ANCIENT SUMERIA SUCCESSFULLY FOR A 10-YEAR TERM OF OFFICE, HAMURABI

Karl replies to the TV screen by means of a typewriter keyboard which is connected to a tabletop computer. For the next hour or so, he will decide how many bushels of grain to sell, how many acres of land to plant, and how much grain to feed his people. When he fails as governor, the screen tells him how many Sumerians have starved and that he has been kicked out of office and declared a national fink. When he succeeds, he is declared a hero like Charlemagne, Disraeli or Jefferson.

"Hamurabi" is just one of many games Karl programs into the computer. Another is a stock market game of buy-and-sell in which he is "given" $10,000 at the start.

But Karl uses the computer-TV setup for more than games. He does his homework on it, plotting complex mathematical graphs in five colors.

Karl Weller is bright but not unique. Across the country, thousands of junior and senior high school students like him are sitting at home before similar typewriter keyboards linked to computers the size of stereo receivers.

Most of these computers are constructed from kits purchased from a new kind of retail business, the computer store—an American phenomenon which sprouted only last summer.

Walking into a computer store for the first time is like walking into a strange, new world where metal boxes bear arrays of pinpoint red lights, television screens glow in fascinating diagrams, and people use odd expressions such as "floppy disc" and "toggling in the bootstrap."

Computer clubs

Already, computer hobby clubs dot the map. California has 23, New York and Michigan seven each, Virginia five, metropolitan Chicago three.

Computer hobbyists love putting the kits together and playing games with their finished products. But more and more people are tailoring their computers to help in their businesses or professions.

Dr. A. Richard Goldman, a young Chicago dentist, is computerizing his office by himself. A few months ago he walked into the "itty bitty machine company" ("Don't call us IBM," I was warned.) near downtown Evanston, Ill., ignorant about computers but knowing what he would like one to do. After a clerk demonstrated an IMSAI computer, Dr. Goldman was hooked.

"Putting the kit together was easy," he explains. Dr. Goldman plans to have his system do all of his accounting, inventory, office scheduling, billing, and tax withholding.

"With this computer capability, I'll also be able to analyze my practice. It should be able to determine, for instance, the correct fees to charge."

Dr. Goldman's experience is typical, since home computers are often sold to people with no previous computer background. Lou van Eperen, president of the Chicago Computer Store in suburban Park Ridge, claims 80 percent of his customers walk in and say they don't know anything about computers.

Van Eperen's typical sale is about $2500—a price tag, he points out, similar to that of a complete stereo system, a fishing boat and rig, or a camper.

The initial purchase

Most first customers buy a basic Altair 8800 computer, a memory bank to store data and instructions, a TV-like display, a typewriter keyboard, and a device for getting information into and out of the computer.

Given the proper equipment and hookups, a small computer can do serious chores, even run a home. A program already in existence would turn up your thermostat at 5:30 a.m., start the coffee at 6:50, begin your bath at 6:53, wake you at 7, start your car at 7:30. It would also turn your lights on while you were away, producing a sequence that would perfectly mimic your evening activities and thus thoroughly fool would-be burglars.

Automated households, however, are easier to plan than realize in existing homes, owing to the complex wiring. Homes are now being designed to incorporate such automation.

But there is still much a microcomputer can do around your home. It can store recipes, help plan meals, compute prices of servings, do bookkeeping, plan budgets, monitor investments.

Computers are already in many homes. The popular TV Ping-Pong games are actually low-grade microcomputers. New radar microwave ovens contain microcomputers that program cooking times and sequences. At least one 1977 model automobile (Oldsmobile) has under its hood a microprocessor for continually regulating fuel-air injection mixtures.

All of this stems from the development of a tiny electronic brain that performs computer functions which a generation ago would have required a roomful of vacuum tubes and an outlay of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Today's version, the size of your fingernail, is sold for $26.

While a handful of electronics manufacturers now make these miniature brains, the largest-selling is the Intel 8080, made by the Intel Corporation of Santa Clara, Cal. It uses the principle of the transistor but is thousands of times more compact. And it makes microcomputers possible by performing 200,000 calculations a second and coordinating the arithmetic and memory activities of units connected to it.

The Intel 8080 miniature brain is the basis of the Altair 8800, which started the computer hobby craze. MITS, Inc., of Albuquerque, N. Mex., introduced the Altair kit for $387 in January 1975. MITS has sold more than 8000 computers and is still No. 1 in sales, although other companies—such as IMS Associates with its IMSAI 8080—have grabbed part of the exploding market.

Many of these computer kits, now available only through manufacturer franchise stores, will soon be sold in stereo stores.

Home-size computers do bookkeeping, monitor investments, run appliances and teach. Karl Weller, 14, learns at home via instructive computer games.

Essential 'software'

To use the hardware, or equipment, you need "software," computerese for the programs of direction. "A computer is capable of doing anything you are capable of directing it to do," says Karl's father, Walter J. Weller, a computer professional. "But," he adds, "it takes your directions literally. It is not like communicating with a human. You can leave words out of a conversation and the other person will know your meaning. A computer can only do what you tell it to—no more, no less. This means careful analysis of every step required in the processing of your data."

To help neophytes into the computer world, Weller and two colleagues have written and published Practical Microcomputer Programming, the first book to explain in simple language the art of writing programs for hobby computers. Their book is but one item in the publication explosion of books and magazines for computer hobbyists. Among its contents are instructions for putting games like "Hamurabi" into the system, for writing poetry, playing tic-tac-toe, creating weird graphic illustrations, composing music, and—a favorite of most—playing the Star Trek game.

Imagination is key

The possibilities of a microcomputer's use are limited only by its master's imagination. Tom Layman, an Intel instructor, likens it to the development of the electric motor. "The first commercial motors were big 50-horsepower jobs which ran elaborate belt-and-pulley systems so that tools could be powered at various locations. Once we knew how to make small motors, we placed them right in the tool or appliance. That permitted the invention of electric drills, vacuum cleaners—all sorts of devices. The same has happened to computers. We used to have big ones feeding many terminals. Now we can have small computers which can be put anywhere we like."

Michael Hunter, assistant to the president of MITS, foresees a microcomputer in every home within a decade. Whether or not he's right, the evidence points to a clear realization: the Computer Age is here.

The One-Dish Cookbook

ABRIDGED VERSION

by Robert Ackart

Packed with delicious and economical meals to please family or guests
Featuring less expensive cuts of Beef • Veal • Lamb • Pork • Poultry • Fish

One-Dish Cookbook

If the cost of meat—not to mention other foodstuffs—has you down, a pleasant surprise is in store for you. It's The One-Dish Cookbook, dedicated to showing how to prepare tasty, appetizing and nutritious meals at a far lower cost than you thought possible.

Written by gourmet Robert Ackart and available to PARADE readers at the bargain price of $1.50 plus 25¢ for handling, this new book shows the way to wonderful low-cost dining step by step—from shopping for the most succulent yet less-expensive cuts at the butcher to preparing them with maximum economy and flavor.

The major thesis of The One-Dish Cookbook is that you don't have to go broke giving your family and guests meals they enjoy and admire. The author tells you, for instance, why beef may be more thrifty a buy than veal and why you'll be just as happy with second- and third-category beef as with first-category. And Ackart has many cooking tips to offer on pork, which he regards as the supreme meat for good eating, notwithstanding its comparatively low cost.

Despite its emphasis on cooking economically, this is a book that has plenty of recipes for stews, roasts, casseroles and other basics, plus unusual gourmet dishes. Many are taken from the cuisines of France, Italy, Greece, the Middle East and other gastronomic centers. The lively text is also sprinkled with historical tidbits—such as the fact that Homer mentions sausage in The Odyssey.

But it's the recipes themselves that are the big thing in the book. Clear, complete and kitchen-tested, they'll enable you to prepare delicious meals for a lot less than you're probably spending now. The One-Dish Cookbook is the one you'll use and cherish most of all.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ for postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "The One-Dish Cookbook" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. T, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery. [GENERAL OFFICES: 1346 39TH ST., BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11218.]

MERIT & MERIT MENTHOL. KINGS & 100's.

We taste-tested MERIT 100's against some of the toughest competition we could find: higher tar 100mm cigarettes.

Here are the results.

Test Data Conclusive

New 12 mg. tar MERIT 100's were taste-tested against a number of major 100mm brands ranging from 17 mg. to 19 mg. tar.

Thousands of smokers were tested.* The results: overall, they liked the taste of MERIT 100's as much as the higher tar 100mm brands tested.

Dogs Help The Deaf To Hear

by Michael W. Fedo

Donne L. Colton of Minneapolis, who is deaf, has a hearing dog trained to act as his "ears."

At the sound of a knock, the dog gives Colton a nudge and starts with him toward the door

ST. PAUL, MINN.

A 15-month-old boy here woke from his afternoon nap and somehow lodged his head between the spokes of the crib rail. Since he had wakened nearly 30 minutes earlier than expected, his agonized cries would have gone unheeded for at least that long, because his mother is deaf. But thanks to Puff, her mix-breed dog, the mother was alerted to the baby's plight and rescued him.

It was no accident that Puff led her to the child. The dog was specifically trained to act as its owner's "ears" in a project begun by the Minnesota Humane Society several years ago and now under the auspices of the American Humane Association (AHA). Puff is one of America's first hearing dogs, and right now there are fewer than three dozen of them. But the AHA, which picked up the pilot project from Minnesota, anticipates that someday hearing dogs will be available to all who need and request one.

Though much effort and money is directed toward handicapped Americans, our 2 million deaf tend to receive minimal attention. Fortunately, the hearing dog program has the potential to be as meaningful to the deaf as the Seeing Eye dogs are to the blind—at a fraction of the cost.

Training is not as extensive for hearing dogs as it is for Seeing Eye dogs, and virtually any dog, regardless of size or breed, can qualify. "We've found that mix breeds will work out well," said Ruth Deschene, executive director of the Minnesota Humane Society and initiator of the project.

Trained to respond

The hearing dogs are trained to respond to all sounds the hearing person would react to—such as a car horn, a doorbell, smoke detector, siren, alarm clock, a crying child, boiling water.

The program began in 1973, when Mrs. Elva Janke, an elderly deaf woman in Minneapolis, wrote to a local action news program that she had lost a dog she had trained to respond to sounds. She was now too old to train another animal but wondered if the news staff knew of a center where dogs were trained to serve the deaf.

The staff turned the letter over to Mrs. Deschene. Then, after a broadcast and a plea for community help, a modest effort was launched and the hearing dog concept was underway. For two years, trainers with no previous experience with hearing dogs worked with the Minnesota Humane Society to define a program. Six dogs were trained, of which five were placed with deaf persons in St. Paul, and one in Lexington, Ky.

The first animal trained was Jody, a small black dog from the St. Paul animal shelter. And Jody's first meeting with Mrs. Janke was a poignant one. Mrs. Janke, her son and husband were seated in the training facility as Jody was brought in with its trainer. Immediately, the dog walked over to Mrs. Janke and put its head in her lap.

A sensitivity

Mrs. Deschene reports that this seems to be a common occurrence when dogs are first introduced to deaf masters. "Maybe it's in the training," she says, "but the dogs develop a sensitivity toward the person around them who cannot hear."

Hearing dogs are now being trained in 20 weeks at AHA headquarters in Denver, Colo. They are first trained in general obedience, then in learning to obey hand signals from the deaf. The next phase is called auditory or sound-awareness training, which teaches the dogs to react to specified sounds.

According to Robert White, director of the AHA program and a specialist in deaf education, "The first priority is to train dogs to respond to alarm clocks and smoke alarms."

The usual response of the animal is to nudge its master, run to the source of the sound, then back to its master.

The training program also involves the National Association for the Deaf, and it is expected that, in two or three years, 10 regional shelters around the country will be training hearing dogs to be provided free to deaf persons.

One special advantage of the hearing dog is that it opens up new vistas of play for deaf children who have been handicapped in developing the social skills and awareness that accompany playing and interacting with other children.

Colton's hearing dog remains with him until the caller at the door is identified. If there were any danger, the dog would try to protect him.

Hearing dogs can notify youngsters if someone or something is behind them, or warn the daydreaming child that a speeding auto is approaching, thus allaying the fears of parents while enabling their children to enjoy the full range of play activities.

Parents relax

The hearing dogs will also free parents of other worries. Prior to acquiring Sparky, the parents of Todd and Philip had to take the 13-year-old deaf twins everywhere or provide a sitter, even when performing routine grocery shopping. They feared that if a fire broke out, or some other emergency arose, the boys would not find out in time. But with Sparky, the parents can relax, secure in the knowledge that the dog will alert their sons to any sound demanding attention.

One of the first deaf persons in Minnesota to receive a dog was Donne L. Colton, a marketing supervisor with a large Minneapolis corporation. He reported that the dog helped in many ways while he was at work. It notified him when someone was at his door and when the phone rang. Colton, who can speak, could answer the phone and tell the caller to phone back when his secretary was in to take the message. He also reported that the animal acted as a guard dog in the home.

Warren Northwood of the AHA says that the program is now training 40 dogs to be placed with deaf mutes and is also developing a training manual.

"The people in Minnesota did an excellent job in bringing this concept to national attention," Northwood said. "It's our job now to make this a national outreach and, in a way, to provide dogs who will be ears to millions of hearing-impaired people."

my favorite jokes

by rodney dangerfield

EDITOR'S NOTE: After seven years of performing in his club, Dangerfield's, in New York, Rodney wanted to break it up a bit—"I found out I couldn't get no respect there, either. I was calling the doorman Mr. Johnson and he was calling me Rodney." So he went to Las Vegas last July to see what would happen. In Las Vegas he got plenty of respect. He opened at the Tropicana Hotel and the engagement was so successful he stayed on for 10 weeks. He returns to the Tropicana for four weeks starting this Thursday.

But life is never easy for Rodney. "Every time I do something I get stuck," he says. "That's how I got my name, Rodney Dangerfield. I went into show business, I wanted to improve myself. I saw an ad in the paper: 'Improve your personality.' I went to see the man, and he told me my personality was OK, but my name was my problem. I said to him, 'How can a name be a problem? Even Shakespeare said, "What's in a name?" '

"He said, 'Who?' I said, 'William Shakespeare.' He said, 'Look, you want to listen to me or you want to listen to your friends?' I said, 'I don't understand. Is it good to change your name?' He said, 'Of course. I always keep changing my own name. Right now I'll give you a deal. I'll let you have a new name for $500.' I said to him, 'That's a lot of money.' And he said, 'It's a great name, and once people hear it they'll start saying it.' I said, 'What's the name?' He said, 'Rodney Dangerfield.' I said, 'Rodney Dangerfield?' He said, 'See, you just heard it, and you're starting to say it.'

"As soon as I got home I thought to myself I made a mistake. I called the guy up. I said, 'Look, I want my money back. This is Rodney Dangerfield.' He said, 'Who?' I said, 'Dangerfield, don't you remember?' He said, 'Oh, yeah, Shakespeare's friend.' I told him, 'I don't want the name.' He said, 'Don't be foolish. Try it for two weeks. I guarantee you'll keep it.' So I tried it. I still didn't like it. I called back. I couldn't find the guy. He changed his name."

Rodney's problems continue:

I get no respect at all. I took my wife to a tunnel of love, and she told me to wait outside.

With animals I never had any luck. When I play the horses, I always go broke. Every time I bet, I hear the same thing: "They're off—except one."

With me nothing works out. I took one of those cheap flights on an airline. I finished eating, I had to do the dishes.

And these guys who fix cars, you gotta watch them, too. Last week I got my car fixed. The guy gave me the bill. The bill said: "Parts $8, labor $55." I figured the bill must be legitimate, there was grease on it.

I went over to the mechanic: "Hey, what's with this labor $55? Must be a mistake. Can you check it out?" So he checked it out. He went over to a car that was being worked on, and he started to talk to two feet. Later I found out there was no one under the car. They're fake feet. You buy 'em, they cost $7 a pair, you slip 'em under a car and you talk to them.

And these guys who work in gas stations, they tell you how hard they work. They put in 14 hours. But they don't work 14 hours, cause they only work when there's people around. When they're alone they don't do a thing . . . "What's that, mister, you got a dead battery? I'm sorry, I can't help you cause I'm all alone here."

I'll tell you, my whole life is psychiatrists. When I was 10 years old, my parents sent me to a child psychiatrist. I went for a year and a half. The kid didn't help me at all.

Nothin' works out. The time I had my fortune told, the gypsy said a big blonde was going to come into my life. The next day my girl left me for a Swede.

With my wife I've got one break. She hates to cook. She's the worst cook in the world. When I go on a picnic I bring Tums for the ants.

I can never enjoy a meal at my house. My wife eats too slow. She had dinner last night—it took her 2½ hours. Who eats alphabet soup alphabetically?

With my wife I don't get no respect, either. The other night she told me to take out the garbage. I told her I already took out the garbage—and she told me to go out and keep an eye on it.

When I was a kid, I was so poor—in my neighborhood the rainbow was in black and white.

It's wonderful to have gray hair. Just ask a man who's bald.

My wife drives me nuts. This week she's mad at her plants. She's talkin' to canned vegetables.

The advice my father gave me when I was a kid—he told me: "Never take candy from a stranger unless he offers you a ride."

I got nothin' from my old man. Once on my birthday he gave me a bat. The first day I played with it, it flew away.

In the park I had no friends. I remember the seesaw. I had to keep running from one end to the other.

I had it rough as a kid. One time on Halloween my old man dressed me as the Pied Piper. In two hours every rat in the neighborhood was following me.

When I started out in show business, it was rough. And they know when you're doing bad. I tried out for a shaving commercial. I didn't get the job, but they told me to keep the razor.

I get no respect from the phone company. Last month they sent me a refund of $3. They told me 30 of my calls didn't make sense at all.

When I was a kid in the nightclub business it was always bad. There was one place—the first night I was arrested for loitering with a microphone.

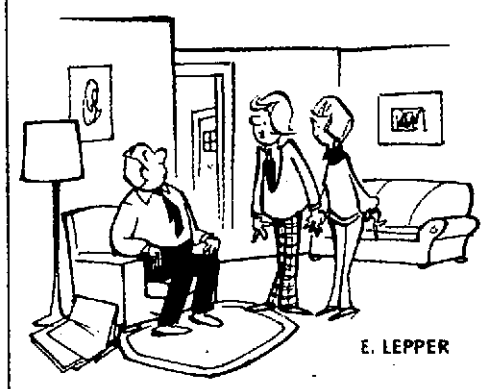
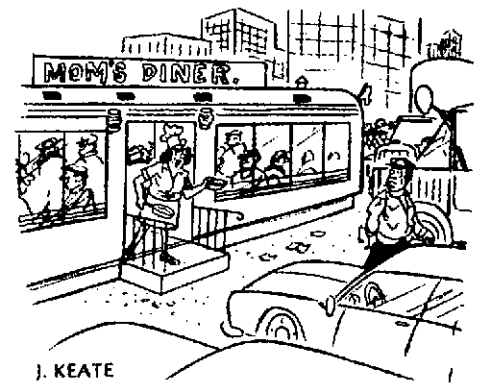
Sometimes I can't take it no more. Last week I was so depressed I wanted to pack my suitcase and run away. Then I thought of my wife and kids—why should I make them happy?

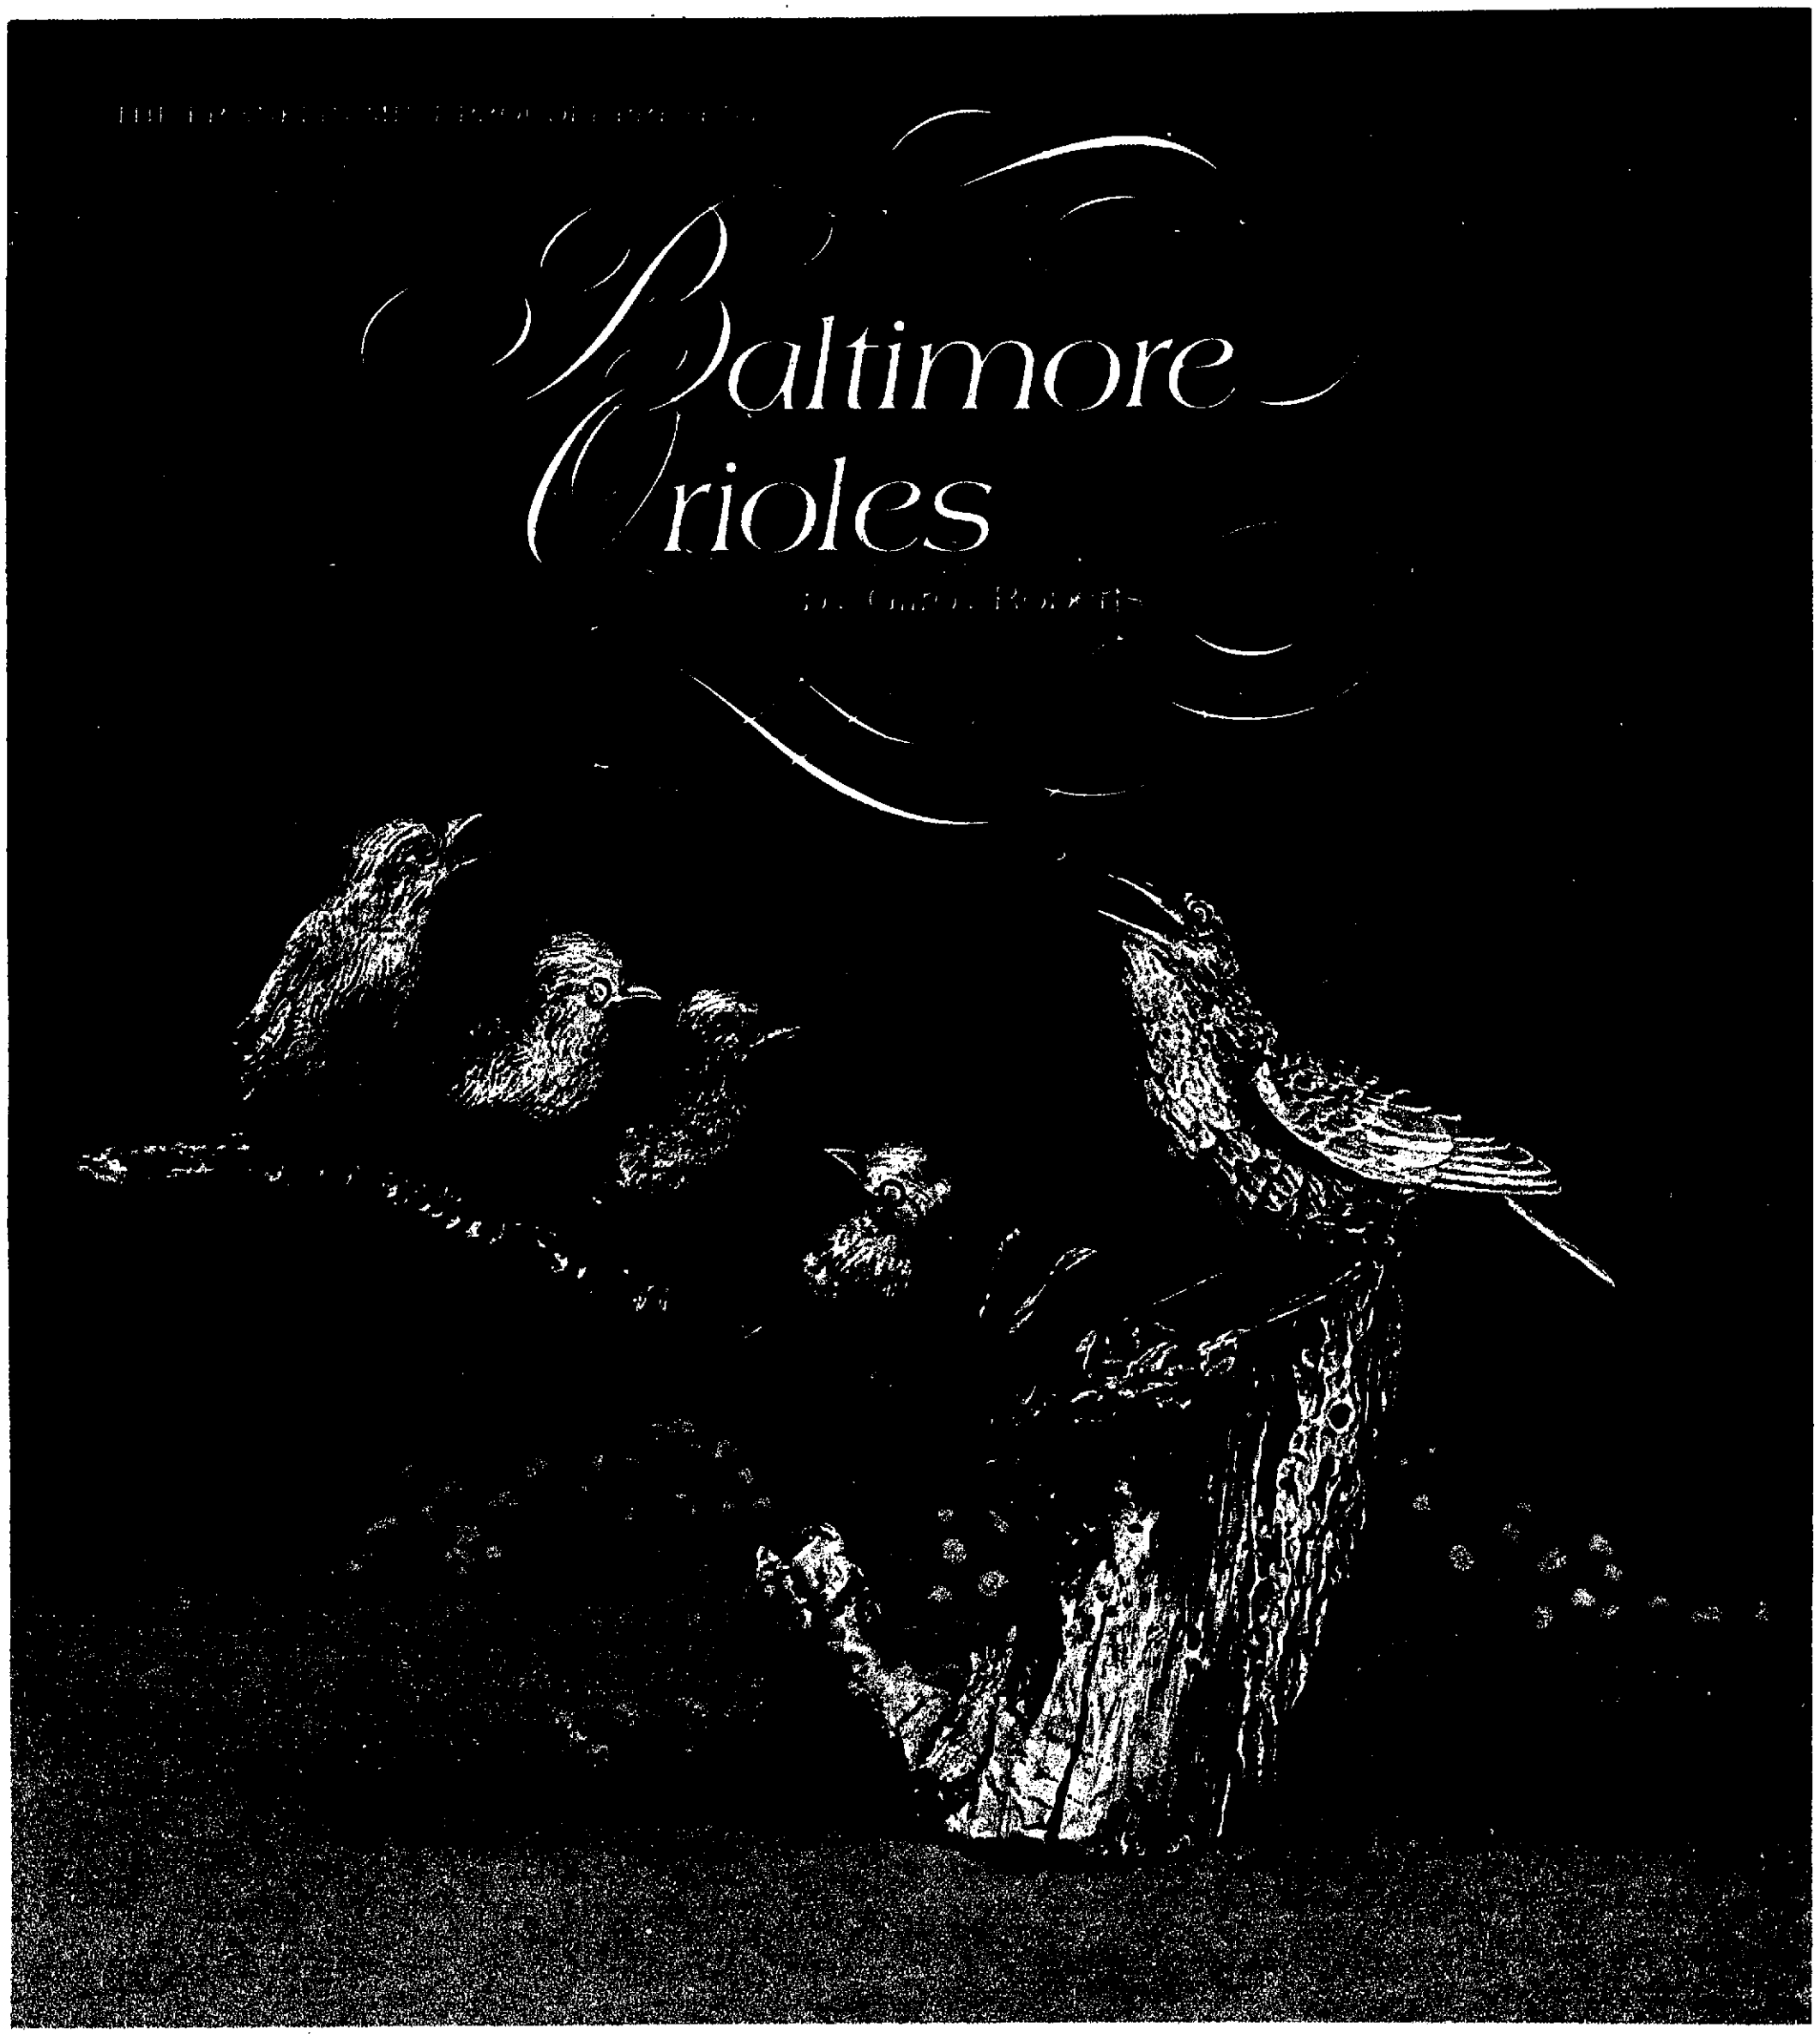


"I need a parrot to talk to my plants while I'm on vacation."



it's to laugh

"You're heading for the last roundup!"



"Don't think of it as losing a daughter, sir. Feel free to keep right on giving her an allowance."

"You didn't finish your oatmeal!"

Baltimore Orioles

An original sculpture in fine pewter, by one of the finest artists of our time.

To be issued only once, in strictly limited edition.

Ordering deadline: February 25, 1977

THE SCULPTOR. Gilroy Roberts is recognized throughout the world as one of America's greatest living sculptors.

For the past twelve years, Mr. Roberts has been Chief Sculptor of The Franklin Mint. Before that, Mr. Roberts was Chief Sculptor-Engraver of the United States Mint—the ninth man in history to have held that post.

His work has been exhibited at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the National Sculpture Society in New York City and in many cities abroad.

To Gilroy Roberts, birds are the most delightful of God's creatures . . . the very essence of all that is beautiful in nature. And for many years, birds have been the subject of many of his most important works. His sculpture of the American Eagle, for example, was personally presented by President Ford to the King of Belgium, Pope Paul VI and other Heads of State.

Now, at the height of his career, Mr. Roberts has created an extraordinary new bird sculpture . . . one of his most beautiful, charming and graceful works . . . Baltimore Orioles.

This lovely work of art is Gilroy Roberts' first sculpture in pewter — a medium chosen for its gleaming luster and enduring beauty.

Each sculpture will be meticulously crafted in fine pewter, then individually finished by hand with a special toning, to bring out every subtle nuance of the artist's work.

Each sculpture will be produced to order, and will bear Gilroy Roberts' famed signature mark (GR).

THE LIMITS OF EDITION. Baltimore Orioles will be produced only once, in a single, strictly limited edition. There is a firm limit of one per person, and an absolute ordering deadline of February 25, 1977.

The sculpture will not be available through even the finest art dealers or galleries. It is available only from The Franklin Mint. The total edition will be equal to the exact number of valid orders postmarked by the February 25 deadline. And, when these orders have been filled, the master sculpture will be destroyed so that this limited edition pewter sculpture can never be produced again. Thus, the rarity of this beautiful work of art will be assured forever.

The price of this important new work of art by Gilroy Roberts is $150. There is no need to send any payment now. You will be notified when your sculpture is ready, and you will be billed at that time for the required deposit of $37.50, with the balance to be billed in three equal monthly installments after shipment.

AN ADDED OPPORTUNITY. Baltimore Orioles is the first in a series of four pewter bird sculptures being created by Gilroy Roberts.

As the owner of Baltimore Orioles you will also have the guaranteed option to acquire the three remaining sculptures in this series at the same original issue price. The three other sculptures will portray Peregrine Falcons, Pelicans and Blackbirds.

There will, however, be no obligation to purchase any of the other three-works. You will receive advance notice of each new sculpture as soon as it is ready, and you will then have thirty days in which to order it if you wish.

AN IMPORTANT REMINDER. The ordering deadline for Baltimore Orioles is February 25, 1977. All orders must be postmarked on or before that date to be eligible for acceptance. The edition will then be permanently closed.

Baltimore Orioles—Shown actual size. The sculpture portrays a female Oriole and her young in a family grouping characteristic of this very domestic bird.

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.
But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.
Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.
So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

A 1962 TAPE OF THE BEATLES MAY GROSS MILLIONS

Lucky Find—Maybe

In 1962 a quartet of young, rough musicians from Liverpool cut a tape while playing in Hamburg, West Germany, for $25 a night.

The group was the Beatles, and the tape included dialogue between John Lennon and his German audience, between John and his barmaid girlfriend Bettina, and such songs as "I Saw Her Standing There," "Kansas City" and "Roll Over Beethoven."

The tape fell into the hands of "King Size" Taylor — now a butcher in Southport, Lancashire, but a friend of the Beatles in their early days—and Alan Williams, the Beatles' first manager.

Along with Paul Murphy, manager of Buk Records, they now plan to turn the old tape into a double LP record, which they reckon should gross about $15 million.

Should the LP go into release, it will undoubtedly lead to a courtroom battle over the question: to whom does the original tape belong?

Taylor says the tape belongs to him. Paul Murphy adds: "The breakthrough on who owns the copyright came when Taylor stumbled on an old letter from Brian Epstein, the Beatles' manager, saying that he would offer Mr. Taylor 20 pounds for the tape even though 'there does not appear to be any commercial value to the recording.'"

Taylor declined the 20 pounds, kept the tape in an old cupboard drawer in his home "until I realized that I had this tape from the old days and that surely it must be worth something in this period of rock 'n' roll revival."

Although the Beatles broke up over six years ago, their records still sell briskly, and they've been offered millions to make at least one comeback tour.

Violence Cure

The way to stop violence in America is to stop spanking children, argues psychologist John Valusek. In a speech to the Utah Association for Mental Health some weeks ago, Valusek declared that parental spanking promotes the thesis that violence against others is acceptable.

"Spanking is the first half-inch on the yardstick of violence," said Valusek. "It is followed by hitting and ultimately by rape, murder and assassination. The modeling behavior that occurs at home sets the stage: 'I will resort to violence when I don't know what else to do.'"

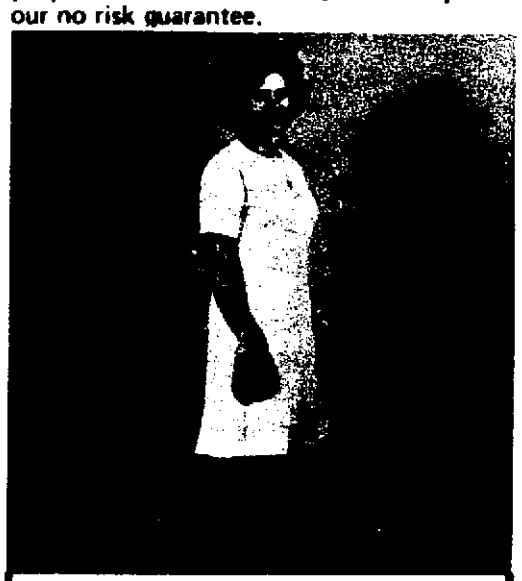
Guidebook Reveals New Plan Called...



THE BRAN DIET

You can shed weight in just 72 hours. Prove it to yourself by ordering our new, comprehensive diet manual now.

I'm Ann Adkins. Here I am before I went on The Bran Diet and lost 110 pounds. Then, people would say, "She has such a pretty face – if only she weren't so fat." Read my full story.

You can lose weight with our new $2.99 Guidebook like some people who report losses of over 100 pounds without hunger. The secret is eating foods that contain a little bit of fiber like bran, the outer fiber coat of grains, and certain other foods with proper caloric reduction. Order today with our no risk guarantee.

Here I am now. Order THE BRAN DIET, and see how easy it will be for you to lose weight too.

"I LOST 110 POUNDS"

— Mrs. Ann Adkins, Westfield, N.C.

"I'd been fat all my life. I had tried all kinds of diet aids, pills and fad diets. I'd lose 20 or 30 pounds and gain it back - plus more. Then, at 31 when I weighed 224 pounds, I put myself on the bran diet. I know it sounds unbelievable, but I stuck with it until I lost 110 pounds. I didn't go hungry at all. It's the kind of food, not the amount, that matters. It's wonderful to be slim. People that I work with are fascinated with what I've done. They used to say, "She has such a pretty face - if only she weren't so fat!" Now, I get lots of compliments.

P.S. - My husband has lost 40 pounds too, and we are able to get out and do things we've never done before.

It's been over 1½ years since I reached 114 pounds, and I have no trouble keeping weight off. I would like to share my newly-found joy in life with others and encourage those who have problems losing weight."

"I WENT FROM 250 TO 178 IN 15 WEEKS."

— Mr. J.C.

The secret: heavy emphasis on one of the choices of The Bran Diet. "My blood pressure is back to normal and I've lost 12 inches around my waist. Now I have will power because this is the diet I enjoy."

"SIMPLE TO FOLLOW"

— Mrs. I.C.

"You made your program quite simple to follow and I do like your recipes. I have already baked the muffins and distributed them among some friends, and they were delectable."

"VERY TASTY DIET"

— Mr. M.S.

"RECOMMENDED BY MY DR."

"I LOST 10 POUNDS IN 2 WEEKS."

— Mrs. F.C.

NO "EMPTY FEELING"

— Mrs. J.S.

"My daughter and I have been on Plan No. 1 for awhile. It's easy to stay on, because you don't have that 'empty feeling.' "

"BEST I EVER ATE"

— Mrs. F.B.

"The macaroni and the meatloaf are the best I ever ate."

NORWALK-DOWNEY (213) 864-8315

THE BIG DIFFERENCE IN SECOND TRUST DEED LOANS ON ANY REAL ESTATE:

17%-21%
OTHER'S TYPICAL ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE—3 to 5 YRS.

RELIABLE'S ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE—8 YRS.

Not all second trust deed loans cost the same. That's why the Federal Government has given you a simple way of comparing the annual cost of any loan . . . the Annual Percentage Rate. The lower this rate, the lower your annual cost.

Most other companies ask you to pay Annual Percentage Rates from 17% to 21%. That's because they charge you 10% interest, a maximum commission and give you a short time to repay. Not us. Through Reliable your interest rate is lower (9%), the commission is lower, and you get more time — 8 years — to fully repay your loan, including principal and interest. There are no balloon payments. We offer you an Annual Percentage Rate of 12.88%. Check around. We believe it's the best rate available . . . and it's available to everyone.

The figures look like this. For every $1,000 you borrow you pay only $14.66 a month for 96 months. The total of payments is $1,407.36. We also offer shorter term loans at the same interest rate and commission, but with proportionately higher Annual Percentage Rates. Naturally, you can pay off your loan at any time by prepaying interest on the balance in accordance with state law.

You may borrow from $2,000 to $50,000 on a first or second trust deed loan — on any real estate anywhere in California. On the average, you'll have your loan in 10 working days.

No gimmicks. No double-talk. We just think it's good business to give you the facts . . . and more money for your money.

Metabolism
may be the key to losing your
FAT

More and more weight loss experts and members of the medical profession are linking METABOLISM with premanent weight reduction.

Dieters will always lose weight. In fact, every diet program (pills, clubs, injections) will help you lose weight, but it is always temporary. The weight loss is soon gained back, and on again to a new diet program. As all dieters know, it is a miserable, never-ending experience.

The problem is not calories, carbohydrates, exercise, etc., but it is how your system METABOLIZES the food you consume. In general, obese people do not eat more than thin people. In most cases, they eat less, therefore, the difference is in the METABOLIC RATE, which converts the food into fat and energy. Thin people eat whenever, whatever they want, without counting anything, yet they stay thin. The reason being, they have a thin-balanced METABOLISM.

At the MARENGO INSTITUTE, after a careful medical examination, you will be instructed on how to re-establish your eating habits without dieting, re-adapting your body's Metabolical rate of food conversion to that of a thin person's, and finally re-adjusting to being thin permanently.

During the weight loss period, having eaten normally without dieting, the weight loss is permanent. Sound too good to be true??? We agree!!! Call now for a complimentary consultation appointment.

Cover: Winning West

It isn't the same as a "Roots" that took 12 hours on eight nights to complete, but it's going to take half that time for James Arness to portray "How the West Was Won" on ABC, starting tonight.

The movie is to be shown in three parts, two hours each tonight, two hours Monday night and the final two hours on Monday, Feb. 14.

Through that six-hour story Arness will be starring as mountain man Zeb Macahan who leads his family westward back in the 1860's. The drama is based on the theatrical motion picture of the same name from a few years ago.

Besides Arness as Zeb, the story revolves around two other main characters. Eva Marie Saint plays his sister-in-law, Kate Macahan, whose husband died leaving her to maintain a home for her daughter and a young son.

Third major character is Luke, her older son, who is pursued by the law as a deserter from the Union Army. Bruce Boxleitner is cast in this role.

The supporting cast assembled for the six-hour movie includes Jack Elam as Cully, David Huddleston as Judson, John Dehner as Benjamin, Brit Lind as Erika, Todd Lookinland as Josh, Royal Dano as Elam, Anthony Zerbe as Capt. Martin Grey, Don Murray as Mr. Anderson, Richard Angarola as Chief Claw and Robert Padilla Mountain-is-Long.

Completing Kate's family as the other Macahan youngsters are Kathryn Holcomb as Laura, William Kirby Cullen as Josh and Vicki Schreck as Jessie.

Tonight's first episode Zeb starts off as a calvary scout but has a difference of opinion with an Indian-hating colonel orders the destruction of an entire Arapaho village.

Zeb decides that's enough of that, and returns to the farm where Kate is barely squeaking through to provide for her family as she waits for Zeb to come back to resume the trek westward to Oregon.

Complicating the move West has been the appearance on son Luke on his flight from the Army. Recovering from a gunshot wound he is being hidden and nursed back to health by a beautiful young member of a religious sect.

Incidentally, tucked away well down in the cast list is a John Denver, playing Bishop Benjamin. At this time you'll have to watch to see whether this might be where the lad first got his love for the mountains.

Shadow Run Phase II Starts In Yorba Linda

Construction of Phase II of the Shadow Run community of single family homes in Yorba Linda is under way.

At the same time, families are beginning to move to their new homes in the initial phase of building. Only nine homes remain to be sold at Phase I prices, according to Bob Mister, vice president sales and marketing for Warmington Development, Irvine.

"Our sales pace continues to be excellent, additional proof that our 'Three-Homes-In-One' concept of distinct sectors for family, formal and private enjoyment meet with homebuyer's approval."

The one and two story, three and four bedroom homes contain up to 2,992 square feet living space and are priced from $83,000.

Exteriors of each home are coordinated and Shadow Run/Yorba Linda has an outstanding choice of styling – handsomely decorated with wood, brick and stone, he said.

Woodburning fireplaces, vaulted ceilings, wall-to-wall carpeting, large master suites with dressing area and private bath, wet bars and open staircases in selected plans and kitchens with shadow-free luminous ceilings and continuous cleaning double oven, range, dishwasher and disposer are price-included amenities.

Schools, major as well as smaller convenience shopping centers, freeway and the other necessities of life are close at hand.

Model homes, decorated by Carole Eichen Interiors, are open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

From anywhere in Orange County, take any convenient way to the Riverside (91) Freeway. Exit at Imperial Boulevard and turn left (north) on Imperial about three miles to Yorba Linda Boulevard. Turn right (east) on Yorba Linda and proceed about two miles to Avenue Rio del Oro and Shadow Run Yorba Linda.

NAHB REPORT

Home Ownership Basic To Sound U.S.

By BARBARA TAYLOR
Register Real Estate Editor

That home ownership is one of the foundations of a healthy, fiscally sound America all seem to agree.

But the means to attaining that goal is split with politicians and social planners calling for more government involvement in the home building business and most builders asking the government to "get off their backs."

This was the general climate during the recently held National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) meeting in Dallas.

Also prevalent were future concerns over the prospect of rent controls, passage of new bills in Congress that may futher affect money supplies, the prospect of situs picketing, rising land costs and futher governmentally imposed restrictions in the name of consumerism that will increase housing costs.

Hard costs now account for less than one-half the cost of building a house, Nathaniel Rogg, NAHB economist and former executive vice president said.

That 1976 had been a good year for the industry most agreed and that 1977 will be even better, most all agreed. Herb Stein, former economic adviser to President Nixon said the building industry "will be the star of the show" during 1977 and predicted 1.9 million starts.

County Story Unique

That California and more specifically Orange County, has a unique story to tell was most evident. The national new home sales price was quoted in the $40,000 range as opposed to the county's $80,000 plus.

One builder from Kansas City told The Register that he was building homes for $44,000 but escalating home prices in his area were being offset by "a 20 per cent appreciation in value over the past 10 years." He was shocked when told that 20 per cent is the annual average in Orange County.

Product marketing was a hot item at the conference with the story of the Irvine Co.'s Woodbridge taking most of the bows. Builders were told that with leadership and assistance of a dynamic and fiscally-able developer, a group of smaller builders could repeat that story anywhere in the U.S.

Douglas Gfeller, Irvine's vice president of residential development said that Woodbridge could be brought to market, four years of preliminary work was carried out and $18 million of front money spent.

Ken Agid, vice president of sales and marketing for Irvine Pacific said that while no homes are presently available for sale, "In order to be continuously successful, you must be in the market continuously. We are selling the future now."

Buyers Changing

One interesting comment Agid made is that buyers are changing fast. "Young families are well-heeled," he said. "They don't have children and don't care to have them. In just one year, our percentage of childless prospects has gone up from 40 to 58 per cent."

Agid's comment was agumented by Ed Akins, one of Woodbridge's builders who said buyers at his firm's project--Woodbridge Crossing--have come close to the target profile with the primary difference being that they have fewer children than expected. "The average size is 2.6 rather than the anticipated 3.1," Akins said.

Energy conservation was another big item with introduction of many new products in that field. Energy source curtailments also were cited as an issue that will dicate future home sizes and design.

NAHB's Rogg, cited the problems in the housing economy. He said the "frontier" has been in the suburbs and no attention has been paid to restoration of existing housing.

"We must develop a program to make cities viable," Rogg said. He termed the situation a "time bomb ticking because of housing costs which should be given top priority otherwise the nation will witness a large economic and social explosion."

To restore cities, Rogg suggests builder incentive, jawboning with leading institutions and as a last result which he termed "not a good way"--regulatory force.

Remove Income Limits

Rogg called for removal of governmentally imposed income limits on assisted housing and more benefit to lendors to compensate for added risks.

He said by removing income limits numerous persons from a wide economic, educational and social range, for one reason or another would move back to the cities thereby making them both economically and socially viable.

Broadmoor Park Final Phase Open

Today, marks the opening of the fourth and final phase of homes at Broadmoor Park, the multi-award-winning residential-recreational neighborhood being built by Broadmoor Homes, Inc. in Orange.

The last phase at Broadmoor Park consists of 56 homes, with three and four bedroom homes ranging in size from 1,722 to 2,592 square feet, with prices from $80,990 to $105,990.

Broadmoor Park, which formally opened in early 1976, received the Grand Award for innovative land planning during the Pacific Coast Builders' Conference last June. It was one of only six grand awards in various categories given to developments throughout the 14 western states.

Last month, during the National Association of Home Builders' conference in Dallas, Broadmoor Park was one of some 25 residential developments to be honored nationally for "Sensible Growth."

Equestrian trails, an equestrian riding ring, two village lakes, one bordered by a park outfitted with barbecues, four tennis courts and a swimming pool are the major amenities at Broadmoor Park. Stabling facilities for horses are available to residents near the equestrian ring.

Four floorplans are offered. The largest of these is the 2,592 square foot Crestview, with four bedrooms and three baths.

A two-story living room is capped by a vaulted, wood beamed ceiling. A massive masonry fireplace contributes to the elegance of the living room setting. A second floor balcony overlooks the living room and the adjoining dining room.

The home's master suite, with its bay window sitting area, is highlighted by Roman-style tub-shower combination in the bath, and a mirrored vanity dressing console, dividing the bath from the dressing area, with its two walls of wardrobes.

Next largest of the Broadmoor Park homes is the 2,319 square foot Brookfield, with four bedrooms and two and one half baths in two stories. The home's "Vista" kitchen, its step-down living room and master suite, and its family room fireplace are popular features.

Both the 1,992 square foot Glenbrook and the 1,722 square foot Woodland are single story homes. Each, however, contains a step-down living room. These three bedroom, two bath homes both have impressive masonry fireplaces in the living rooms.

The Glenbrook has a spacious family room and a versatile service room, while the Woodland contains an atrium that is visible from the entry, and with access from the breakfast nook and the master bedroom.

Fully furnished Broadmoor Park models are open daily from 10 a.m. until dusk. To reach the neighborhood take the Chapman Avenue-east offramp from the Newport Freeway and drive about three and a half miles to the intersection of Chapman and Newport avenues. Turn left on Newport to the community entrance.

Single-Family Detached Adult Homes Now Available In Mission Viejo

Soon-to-retire adults often must give up some of the amenities of a large home, such as formal dining areas and single-story detached design, when they move into a retirement community.

"Fiesta patio homes are the exception," said Jim Leishman, sales manager at Casta del sol, Mission Viejo's retirement community bordering the Casta del Sol public golf course.

"Fiesta homes have the advantages of a high security retirement community and the amenities of a single-family detached home. Three of the four plans offered have both separated formal dining rooms and breakfast areas in the kitchen. The fourth has a dining area adjoining the living room and a breakfast nook.

All single-story detached Fiesta homes have oversized two-car attached garages with direct access into the house, patios accented by low masonry walls, fireplaces, and vaulted ceilings in the living rooms and master suites.

Homes, priced from $58,500 to $67,115, currently are available for sale. The two- and three-bedroom, two-bath homes will be ready for occupancy in April.

Homes in the Fiesta series are built on cul-de-sacs with no more than eight homes on a street.

Models of each of the four Fiesta homes, furnished by Mel Grau Design Corp. of Newport Beach, are open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. The sales complex, on Casta del Sol Road, is above and adjacent to the Casta del Sol public golf course.

To reach the community, take the San Diego Freeway to the La Paz exit and drive east into Mission Viejo. Turn left onto Marguerite Parkway and follow the signs to Casta del Sol.

Features include the guard-gates entries providing 'round-the-clock security and the recreation center which is reserved for the use of Casta del Sol residents. Recreation amenities include a heated pool, hydrotherapy pool, card, craft and exercise rooms, and indoor and outdoor shuffleboard.

The Casta del Sol Homeowners Association maintains landscaping (except for patios and atriums) and building exteriors for a monthly fee of $74.50. At least one buyer must be over 45, and no children under 21 are permitted to reside at Casta del Sol, according to Leishman.

Ranging in size from 1,214 to 1,494, Fiesta homes include shag carpeting in most rooms, vinyl asbestos tile in kitchen, baths and entry, water-saving shower heads and water closets, cedar shake roofs, automatic garage door openers, concrete driveways and gas stubout for the barbecue.

Kitchens feature a five-cycle dishwasher, disposal, gas range, and two continuous cleaning double ovens with black glass doors.

Under present governmental assistance programs, only low-income persons are aided and a homogenous mix is not attained, he said.

Stein said, "I don't think housing economy needs government stimulus. Get rid of the whole government program in housing. It is one of the healthiest sectors of the economy."

Stein said the "way to handle the problem of the extremely poor is not housing, but income. Give them money and let them buy. It's more respectful and more efficient." he said.

Outgoing NAHB president John Hart along with most of the builder speakers struck at governmental involvement in housing.

I am worried that, that partnership (with the government) has changed to one of domination filled with regulations and restrictions," Hart said.

Most of the speakers including builders, Congressmen and quasi-governmental officials called upon a rechartering of FHA and a return of that program to an insurance function rather than a subsidy program for the poor.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Subsequent columns will cover new products, financing, building projections, legislation and other problems affecting both the industry and home buyer.

Timberline Stresses Quality, Environment

Developers, South Coast Community Development Corporation and Hanover Homes, attribute the success of the Timberline in Saddleback Valpey to two main factors.

According to Ray J. Ziccardy, president of South Coast Timberline, homes have been built witn emphasis on quality. The same principle has been extended to the immediate environment.

During initial planning of the Timberline development, it was decided that the undulating topography of the site be retained and exploited. The result is a residential community which has employed multilevel positions for the majority of its homes, greatly increasing visual interest and privacy.

Add to this, say the developers, "the fact that Timberline enjoys the special grace of over 3,000 mature and specimen trees and is rich in landscaped greenbelts complemented by a central park of close to one and one half acres, you begin to see what we consider is a most attractive place in which to live."

Other community pleasures include two swimming pools, one especially for children and adjacent to the pool area is a sun terrace on which a number of gas barbeques are positioned. Picnic areas, pedestrian paths and a children's play lot are included in built-in benefits of family living at Timberline.

Timberline homes, designed by Foster & O'Neill Architecture and Planning of Tustin, offer three of four bedrooms plus two and one half or three bathrooms and are priced from $83,300.

Eight floorplans containing from 1,957 to 2,194 square feet of living space are offered. Up to four level living is featured and the use of vaulted, sloping or cathedral ceilings in all living rooms lends interior excitement.

Kitchens are carefree. Ceramic tile counter tops, custom handcrafted solid-oak cabinetry surround the built-in range, double self-cleaning ovens, dishwasher, waste disposal and double stainless steel sinks. Plumbing for an icemaker is installed. Master suites have been designed with an eye to privacy.

Timberline enjoys easy freeway access and comprehensive amenities are but minutes away.

Laguna Hills Mall provides excellent shopping and additional commercial centers are nearby.

To reach Timberline, take the San Diego Freeway to Alicia Parkway and travel east to Muirlands Boulevard and turn left to Turf Avenue.

Sales representatives from Donald Bird & Associates are on the premises daily from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. during the week and from 10 a.m. to dusk at weekends.

Delinquencies Drop Sharply

Mortgage loan delinquencies at the nation's savings and loan associations and cooperative banks dropped sharply in December to 0.89 per cent from the 0.93 recorded in November, the United States League of Savings Associations reports.

The trade association said that the December figure of 0.89 per cent compared to 0.97 in December, 1975 and 0.88 in December, 1974.

The League bases its delinquency figures on reports from some 900 savings associations and cooperative banks representing more than 51 per cent of the assets of the business. For survey purposes a loan is considered delinquent if payment has not been made within 60 days of the payment date stipulated in the mortgage contract. The League survey includes all types of mortgage loans — conventional, FHA and VA.

League president John A. Hardin, who also is president of First Federal Savings of Rock Hill, So. Carolina, said that a drop in delinquencies is not normally experienced in the month of December.

"It has been our experience that mortgage delinquencies usually rise in December," he said, "probably as a result of Christmas and general holiday season spending. last December's figure offers further evidence that the economy is getting straightened around."

Ponderosa Completes Plans For 3 Northwood Projects

Ponderosa Homes, largest land owner involved in development of Northwood/Irvine, has completed plans for three separate projects, representing over 600 homes, reports E. John Garcia, VP and general manager of the Irvine-based homebuilding firm.

A 130-acre parcel will be developed with two residential communities: Park Place, Ponderosa Homes' popular series of single-family detached homes, and Park Paseo, a patio home project which will be introduced with entirely new floorplans which will be shared by both residential communities.

Additionally, preliminary plans are completed for another 7.3-acre site which will feature the firm's newly-designed Sundance Townhomes. Conceived by award-winning Del Mar architect Paul Thoryk, the community will have 54 units involving both one-and-two story floorplans to continue the popular Park Place concept already established at Lake Forest, Cerritos and Westminster. 287 single-family homes will be available at the new village in Irvine. C R Design of Irvine created these dramatic three-and-four-bedroom homes.

Newest innovation for Ponderosa will be Park Paseo, a 326-home community of patio-styled residences. Four floorplans, designed by Bates-Bassenian-Pekarek, architecture and land planning of Newport Beach, will offer both one-and two-story homes with three of four bedrooms, two or two-and-one-half baths and family rooms.

Site preparation for the three projects is expected to begin within the next month. Decorated models are scheduled to open sometime this summer with the first occupancy slated for late fall.

As a master-planned community, The Village of Northwood also will include neighborhood parks, schools, bike trails, pedestrian paths, shopping facilities and a 20-acre community park.

VP SALES-MARKETING – Corona del Mar resident Robert C. "Bob" Mister has been appointed vice president of sales and marketing for Warmington Development, Inc. Jim Peck, executive vice president, unveiled the new design at a meeting held at the Grand Hotel where more than 350 staff members from Orange and Riverside counties gathered. Rendered in the firm's traditional red and white colors, the new logo was developed over a three-year period when 22 concepts were submitted by three advertising agencies, coordinated by John Bustetter, vice president-advertising, Peck explained.

Bill Schneider of Grubb & Ellis Co.'s South Bay Office represented both the lessee and the lessor, Daon Development Corp. of Newport Beach, Calif., in the long term transaction.

A House-Sold Word

By Ruth Nippe

Many parents are finding living expenses for sons and daughters attending college in the 1970's often costs more than the tuition, so they're searching for ways to reduce these outlays.

Housing in particular has felt the pressure of spiraling inflation, and parents know that money spent for rent or dormitory fees can never be recaptured.

Average rent for a two-bedroom apartment near Cal State Fullerton today is a little over $200 monthly, or projected out over a four year period totals around $10,000.

With the appreciation build-up in real estate for that length of time, some parents now are considering purchasing income property near the schools attended by their children.

If more than one unit is involved they can be rented to help cover the monthly loan payments, with interest and taxes deducted from their income tax.

Even a modest condominium, considering the appreciation factor, would more than defray the cost of student housing when sold several years later. It makes "cents" to overcome college expenses with a sound investment.

FROST HARDY ANNUALS

Many annual flowers are frost hardy including: Alyssum, stock, viola, phlox, candy tuft, sweet pea, bachelor's button, snapdragon, Iceland poppy, pinks, pansy, California poppy and sweet pea.

After transplanting, be sure to bait the area for snails and slugs.

32 River-View Villas Ready For Occupancy

Sundance Shores, a community of 32 river-view villas, is located in an area where there is very little river property available anymore, according to Gordon Reddall, project manager for the Colorado River resort townhomes.

Located on Nevada's Colorado River shore, across from Bullhead City, the resort development features three and four bedroom townhomes with two baths, priced from $39,500 to $44,000. All of the homes are completed and ready for occupancy.

There are cathedral ceilings, wood-burning fireplaces, balconies, private patios and master suites with private baths. Select plans offer family rooms and all homes have smoke detectors, wall-to-wall carpeting, laundry closets and glass tub-/shower enclosures.

Sundance Shores kitchens are designed for convenience and easy care with built-in Hotpoint range and oven, dishwasher, disposal and refrigerator. Generous dining areas also are featured.

The homes' exteriors are complete with shake roofs, landscaped entry courts and covered parking areas with exterior storage. The homeowners association provides professional maintenance of the grounds and the townhomes' exteriors to allow residents maximum enjoyment of the recreation-oriented lifestyle.

Sundance Shores offers an abundance of fishing, boating, swimming and water sports along the river and at nearby Lake Mojave. Bullhead City, provides a golf course, shopping, a private airport and other community services.

Interested buyers are invited to view color photos of the project at the Walker & Lee Home Shoppers Information Center in Anaheim, where full information is available. Located just off the Santa Ana Freeway south of Harbor Blvd., the Center is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Information also may be obtained by writing Walker & Lee, 1477 Manchester, Anaheim, Calif., 92803.

Cal Coast 'Financing' Saves Time

Available financing is making it easier for clients and sales people of Cal Coast Enterprises, Inc., to move property and complete a smooth transaction.

"Because of our private financial connections, an added service to the client is provided by Cal Coast when it is needed to speed a home buyer or seller transactions," said W. D. "Wil" Gower, executive vice-president of the Fountain Valley-based organization flying the Red Carpet Realty banner.

Gower said Cal Coast now is able to provide short term funding at a low discount in emergency circumstances where ready cash will speed the transaction. "This is purely a service to the client. No profit on the loan is realized by the company."

"This is particularly valuable in providing swing loans which makes it possible for buyers to finance purchase of a new dwelling while waiting for their present one to sell," Gower said.

Such available funds are a boon to Cal Coast's sales team, and frequently are used to save a transaction that might otherwise be lost or fall out of escrow.

Nineteen Cal Coast real estate offices, two escrow offices and a license training school now are scattered over Orange, Riverside, Los Angeles and San Diego counties. Last year the organization, a group within Red Carpet, did approximately $200-million in resale volume.

LA LAMP PROJECT

NEED A LIGHT?

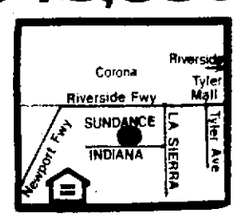
By STEVE ELLINGSON

Here's an easy-to-build lamp any do-it-yourselfer can tackle. It's a contemporary version of the traditional "swag lamp." The curve lines of the wood slats really make this style suitable for most any decor.

We built the prototype pictured here from birch plywood, stained to a walnut finish, but any of the veneered hardwoods may be used.

Measuring 18 inches long by 9 inches in diameter, this hahging lamp allows great flexibility in lighting design. It's equally handy above a chair or end-table for reading, brightening a work area, or simply decorating a problem corner.

With our complete step-by-step instructions, photographs and materials list, the lamp is a snap to build. Just trace the full-size parts onto wood, cut out and assemble (instructions for wiring are included).



To obtain No. 402 Swag Lamp, send $1.50 (includes lst class postage & handling) by check or money order. To obtain our new 100-page book, PATTERNS FOR BETTER LIVING, send $1.50 (includes postage & handling) by check-or money order.

(Address all orders to Steve Ellingson, c/o: Santa Ana Register Pattern Dept. P. O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, California 91409

HANDY TIP: Rubber-coated electrical cords gain a longer life if you rub a fine coat of paraffin or wax on them every six months. It prevents premature cracking and drying out. (If you have a do-it-yourself question, send it to Steve Ellingson at the above address.)

Lyon Opens Final Unit At Sunwood/Santa Ana

The William Lyon Co. is concluding the final sales at Sunwood/Santa Ana, reports Peter Ochs, president of the building company. The firm has opened the last unit of sixteen one and two story, three to four bedroom homes. Prices range from $55,990.

This last group of homes is being constructed approximately two miles away from the original building site of 169 Sunwood units the Lyon Co. developed.

Lyon is offering three different floorplans starting with the Plan 1, a three bedroom, two bath, one story design with a formal entry opening into the living room with its fireplace. The family room has sliding glass doors opening into the garden areas, while the bright and cheerful "Terrace Kitchen" has a pass-through window and patio serving bar. The master bedroom suite includes a private bath.

Expanding on this design is the Plan 2, a four bedroom, two bath home, also on a single level. A fireplace creates a focal point in the living room, while the family room has access to the patio area via sliding glass doors. The fourth bedroom is optionally convertible into a den.

The largest Sunwood home is Plan 3, a two story design with four bedrooms, two full baths plus a donwstairs powder room. Again, the living room has a fireplace and the family room opens onto the garden areas. In addition to the upstairs secondary bedrooms, the master suite has a private bath, dressing area and wardrobe wall.

Some of the quality, "price-included" features are G. E. range with "see-thru" oven, dishwasher and disposal; color coordinated 'easy care' laminated counters; fireplaces with masonry hearths and gas line for log-lighters; wall-to-wall carpeting in the living room hall, stairway and master suite; forced-air gas heating; smoke detection warning system, insulation and full two-car garage with pre-wired and pre-plumbed laundry service area.

To reach the model homes take the San Diego Freeway to the Bristol exit, north to Warner and then left, then left again on Center to 2213 West Flora St. From the Newport Freeway take the Warner exit and drive west to Center; then left to Flora.

Red Hill Hits $8 Million In Sales In 1976

Edward A. Nahigan, president of Red Hill Realty, reports broke its own 17-year record with $84 million in sales volume during 1976, based on a double entry system.

Holder of real estate and escrow educational certificates, and Associate of Arts in Escrow Management, she currently teaches escrow procedure at Orange Coast College and Coastline Community College evenings.

CAMELLIAS BLOOMING

Many camellias are in full bloom and that means it's time to watch out for camellia petal blight. If the petals turn brown from the edges to the center of the blossom, petal blight is suspect. Keep the fallen flowers picked up and disposed of in covered garbage cans. It is also a good idea to remove contaminated mulches beneath the shrubs and apply a new mulch.

Citation Homes, Singer Housing Form Joint Venture-Citation Homes

Citation Homes, a joint venture, has been created between Citation Builders, a new building and development firm, and a subsidiary of Singer Housing Co.'s California housing operations.

APPOINTED – Appointment of James M. Boyar of Rancho Palos Verdes as vice president and Western region marketing manager for Title Insurance and Trust Co. and Pioneer National Title Insurance Co. has been announced by David R. Porter, senior vice president and Western region manager. Based in Los Angeles, Boyar will be responsible for the marketing and sales direction for all direct and agency operations in California, Nevada and Arizona. He hs been with the firm since 1963.

Citation Builders will be the managing general partner of Citation Homes, according to F. Wayne Valley, chief executive of Citation builders.

"The Citation firms will carry on the Singer Housing tradition of developing, building, and marketing quality residential housing," Valley stated.

Citation Homes will be marketing numerous new single family and town home communities in Northern and Southern California.

Valley said Citation Builders is organized into three divisions: The Southern Division, under the direction of Anthony A. Allen, headquartered in Tustin; the Central Division, headed by Stephen C. Schott, and the Northern Division, under the management of Dennis W. Cheney, both operate out of the firms' headquarters in San Leandro.

Valley said Donald Chaiken, Citation Builders' chief financial executive, is responsible for banking relationships and other financial and administrative matters for all divisions.

Valley had been president and chief executive officer of Singer Housing Co. as well as chairman. In addition, he served as a director of the parent organization, The Singer Co.

Allen has served as president of Singer Housing Co., Besco Division, since joining Singer Housing in 1974.

Before affiliating with Singer, Allen had been president of the Robert H. Grant Corp.'s Southern California Division from 1972. Previously, he was president of the McCarthy Co. of Southern California, having joined that firm in 1968. He spent a number of years with his father in a privately held, family operating building company in Southern California.

MARKETING DIRECTOR – Newport Beach resident Kenneth Young has been named director of marketing for Saffell & McAdam. He will head the firm's sales department, coordinating all new business development programs under a "single source" concept of design, financing and construction of buildings.

Sunwood/El Toro Offers 30 Homes

A fourth unit of the William Lyon Sunwood/El Toro homes will open this weekend reports Peter Ochs, president of the statewide building firm headquartered in Newport Beach.

A total of 94 homes in the first three building phases already have sold. Lyon plans to build a total of 237 homes on a 50 acre site on the southeast corner of El Toro and Trabuco Road in El Toro.

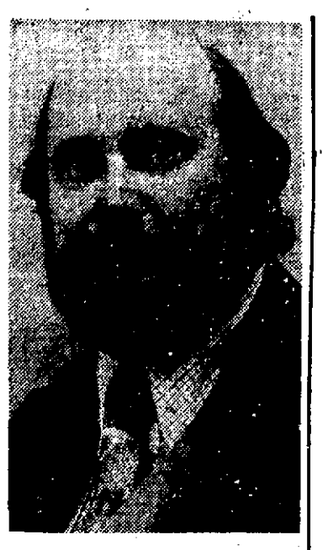
Being offered for sale in the new unit are three floorplans ranging from 1,268 to 1,748 squarefeet of living space. There are both one and two story designs, with three and four bedrooms, and up to two-and-one-half baths. Prices range from $65,990 to $74,990 with conventional financing available.

A "long-line" one story, three bedroom, two bath home is Sunwood/El Toro's Plan 1. It features a formal entry; a large living room with vaulted ceiling; a family room/open kitchen combination which makes an unusually bright and cheerful social center; a master bedroom with private bath, and direct access into the home from the two car garage.

The three elevations available all have long covered entries and buyers have the choices of wood, stucco, brick and natural stone accents.

Sunwood's Plan 2 is another one story home. It has four bedrooms (or an optional plan whereby the fourth bedroom becomes a formal dining room). There are two baths, a formal entry, an unusually large family room/kitchen combination, plus a master bedroom with private bath and dressing room. Again, there is direct access from the two-car garage.

The largest home at Sunwood is Lyon's Plan 3, a two story, four bedroom, two bath and guest powder room design.



This home has a raised entry which leads to both the formal step-down living room with adjacent dining room, and to the step-down oversized family room with fireplace. Upstairs, the master suite runs the full width of the second story. In addition to a private bath and dressing area with double vanities, there is a walk-in closet in the suite.

Price-included features are G.E. kitchen appliances (including a double oven, with one being self-cleaning) as well as an automatic dishwasher with soft food disposer and Tuff Tub interior, custom design wood kitchen cabinets.

Gas line for log lighter in the fireplace is included, as well as wall-to-wall carpeting in the living room, dining room, hall stairs, and master suite in a wide selection of color-coordinated decorator colors.

Smoke detectors, wood shingle roofs, concrete driveways, and wood between-house fencing are offered at no extra cost. There is even a $100 landscape bonus program for homebuyers to assure a beautifully lancscaped neighborhood.

The furnished model complex is reached via the San Diego Freeway south to the El Toro Road exit and then by driving north to Williamsburg Court.

MARKETING DIRECTOR – Laguna Beach resident Richard R. Baker has been named director of marketing for the Robert P. Warmington Co. which was formed in 1975 and presently is building in Lake Forest, Anaheim Hills, Orange and Fountain Valley. Baker's 15 years of experience in the real estate industry embraces residential, commercial and recreational properties throughout California. Prior to joining Warmington he served in sales and marketing for John Lusk Co., Levitt and Sons of California and Great Western Marketing Corp.

WINNER – Kim Lancaster, 10, is the lucky winner of a hand-tooled saddled for her quarter horse, Surprise, awarded by builders Lou Laramore and Al Wutzke. The drawing was held when the first seven units of 250 homes sold out.

Sky Country Prize Won By 4-H'er

Sky Country builders, Lou Laramore and Al Wutzke, have launched Unit 8, consisting of 61 ranch homes.

Grand prize drawing recently held for a hand-tooled saddle was won by Kim Lancaster, 10, who with her parents and younger sisters, moved into their Mira Loma home at Thanksgiving time.

"Surprise", Kim's quarter-horse, will wear the saddle proudly when she is shown by Kim. Kim is a 5th grader at Troth Elementary, active in chino Busy Farmers 4-H Club.

The Lancasters are among the many families who have chosen the Sky Country ranch life, with space for their own horses, animals and gardens on half-acre and larger fenced lots.

Three and four bedroom homes offer pleasant living rooms with fireplaces, patio-oriented dining rooms, kitchens with a full complement of built-in appliances and space for breakfast room.

Amenities include carpeting in living rooms, halls and master bedrooms, decorator lighting fixtures, ceramic tile kitchen counters, furniture-finished cabinets, cultured marble pullmans in main and master baths. Homes are fully insulated, walls and ceilings, equipped with forced air heating, ducted for air conditioning, unit optional.

Bonus areas and expandable plans merit ease of enlargement as family needs increase.

Prices range from $56,950 to $60,950.

Initial phase of Sky Country encompasses over 900 acres of land. Century 21 Crown Realty, Inc., sales agents, report that since opening just over a year ago sales have been exceptionally active.

Apartment Association Starts Tax Campaign

By WAYNE MARKHAM
Knight News Service

A campaign to get state legislation that will provide tax benefits for renters similar to those received by homeowners has been started by the National Apartment Association.

A proposed model state law has been prepared and sent to the governors of all 50 states outlining the plan which calls for a leasehold tax to be levied against tenants.

Owners of rental buildings would be responsible for collecting the tax and would be given a credit against his property taxes equal to the amount paid by tenants.

The tax paid by tenants is already being paid in their monthly rentals; explains Don B. Lawrence, president of the National Apartment Association. In the case of the leasehold tax, however, the amount of property taxes being paid by tenants would be identified and could then be taken as a deduction on federal income taxes, he adds.

"The tenant's total cost for shelter would remain the same with the new rent plus taxes equal to what is now charged only as rent," Lawrence says.

The Washington-based apartment association is pursuing the state legislation as an alternative to federal legislation, which is "very unlikely because the tenant is not personally liable for the tax (property taxes on rental building)," Lawrence says.

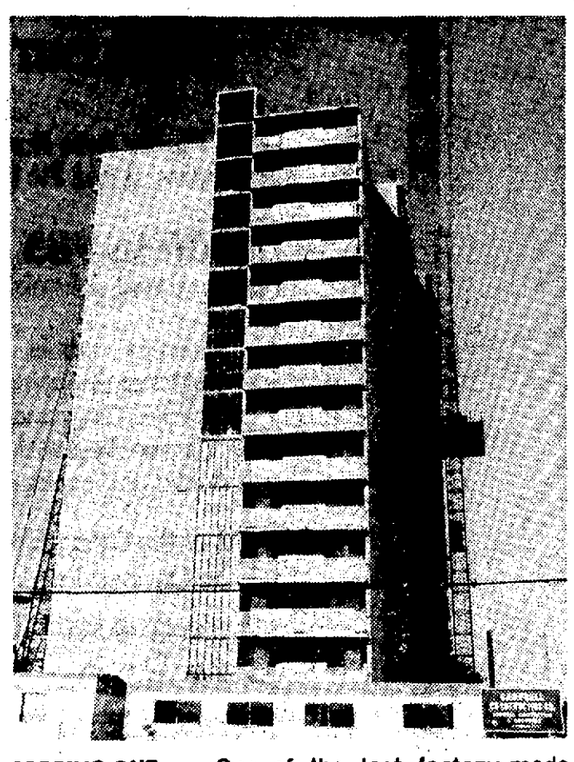
Present property tax deductions claimed by homeowners cost the federal treasury an estimated $4.5 billion in 1975. The proposed tax relief for renters would result in a projected federal tax loss of $811 million, the association reports.

"The economic and social realities of our highly urbanized society have rendered the special favoritism extended home owners in our tax laws an anachronism of a non-urbanized 19th century america," Lawrence says in his appeal to the governors.

"Tenants not only pay real property taxes as part of their rent, they pay a disproportionate amount because of archaic and subjective assessment practices which invariably results in a higher percentage of market value as a basis for apartment taxation than owner-occupied homes."

14-Story Apartment Complex In Orange Topped Out In Only 29 Working Days

A 14-story apartment complex in Orange has been topped out in 29 working days, thanks to an innovative building system which utilizes factory-made modules and precast concrete structural walls and floors.



The building, Community Garden Towers at 3919 Garden Grove Blvd., will house senior citizens in 210 unfurnished, single-bedroom apartments. Each of the 550-square-foot units has its own private balcony and there is a communal recreation area on the first floor.

The $6 million project is owned and operated by the Garden Grove Community Church, with low-cost rents to be subsidized by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The rapid construction process was developed under the auspices of HUD and its "Operation Breakthrough" program. The building system combines factory-made, precast concrete structural walls and floors with four major subsystems – a kitchen and bath module, elevator module, mechanical penthouse, and prefabricated interior and curtain wall systems.

The precast units were manufactured and erected by Forest City Dillon-Tecon Pacific, a partnership. Tecon Pacific, of West Sacramento, is the manufacturer and erector of architectural and structural concrete units, while Forest City Dillon is the largest builder of housing for the elderly in California and Ohio.

The precast concrete units and modules were manufactured at the facilities in Irwindale and trucked to the building site where they were lifted into place by a 310-foot crane.

TOPPING OUT – One of the last factory-made, precast concrete units is set in place as the 14-story Community Garden Towers in Orange is topped out in only 29 working days. The rapid construction was made possible through use of an innovative building system

Once in place, they were quickly joined together by steel reinforcement and concrete.

The factory-made kitchen and bath module is considered the "heart" module, since it comes complete with plumbing, wiring, fixtures, cabinets, showers and even such things as towel bars and soap dishes.

Building elevators are housed in one-story modules which are completely equipped with rails, doors and hardware ready to receive the elevator cars. The elevator penthouse is a light, steel structure, completely equipped prior to installation with all motors, wiring and mechanical parts.

Heating boilers, hot water heaters, air units and other equipment are housed in a mechanical penthouse. These units are also installed, connected, piped and wired prior to installation at the building site.

Community Garden Towers is the 15th project of its kind to be constructed by Forest City the on-Tecon Pacific. Other similar projects built by the partnership include the Wycliffe Plaza in Santa Ana, Little Tokyo Towers in Los Angeles, and Greenfair I and II in Sacramento.

According to a company spokesman, the building system is 10 years ahead of any other method and is being considered by 30 foreign countries as a possible solution to housing problems.

SENIOR VP-CONTROLLER – Appointment of Donald A. Foscato Jr., as senior vice president-controller at Century 21 International Headquarters has been announced. He will assume responsibility for the financial and administrative operations at the firm's corporate offices in Irvine. Prior to joining Century 21, Foscato was vice president of finance and treasurer of a large public computing firm for five years, and worked as a senior accountant at Price, Waterhouse & Co. for five years.

Economics is sort of like wine making. All of the conditions may seem right, but the proof is in the tasting.

After sifting through all of the charts, graphs, gobbledegook and double talk of the so-called experts, we at Chicago Title have held 1977 up to the light of common sense.

We conclude that 1977 should be a good year. Not a great year, mind you, but at least a pleasant, somewhat ambitious and refreshing year which may, with proper ageing, eventually produce a vintage economic crop.

The big question, of course, involves the change in management at the famous Chateau Blanc. Will the new winemaker demand proper balance? How shall the vines which were recently transplanted from the southern slopes of Georgia react to the heated air of Washington, D.C.?

The predicted cutback in taxes should provide some immediate stimulation to the economic climate. But, it might prove artificial in the long run, lacking the body necessary for a lingering aftertaste.

Thus, in view of the fact that most of the nation's economic vineyards were all but wiped out during the recession rot of the early 1970's, we maintain a positive attitude towards steady, gradual recovery.

The present condition is stable. And, barring any unforseen developments, it is safe to assume that 1977 will complement most of our economic menus.

OFFICE BUILDING – Standing in reception area of The Greenhaus, a 14,000 square-foot office building which uses book shelves and plants as office dividers rather than walls, is architect-owner Ed Lohrbach of Morris-Lohrbach & Associates AIA, Irvine. Some 14 firms engaged in design and engineering activities occupy the unusual building.

THE GREENHAUS
Office Building Without Walls

Can you imagine a 14,000 square foot office building which houses 14 firms with the only dividers between them being book shelves and plants?

This is exactly the case at the one-story Greenhaus in Irvine where an enormous skylight, exposed rafters and some 600 plants add to the greenhouse ambience that prevails.

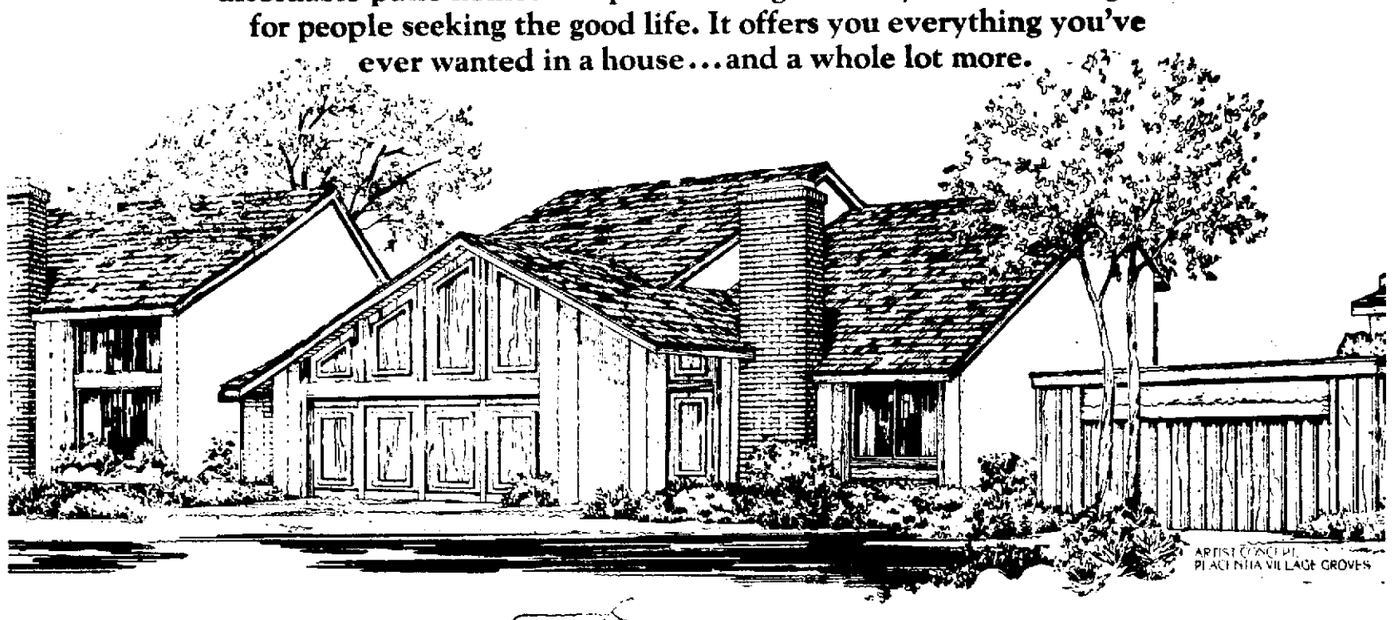
Designed by Morris-Lohrbach & Associates, of Irvine, the $650,000 structure originally was conceived to house the entire firm and provide for growth.

But as the recession of 1974 began to take its toll, the firm was forced to reduce its staff.

"It was this situation which led us to the idea of leasing empty space to several of our architectural colleagues who were going through the same pangs of shrinkage," recalls firm principal Ed Lohrbach.

"In retrospect," Lohrbach says, "what started as a survival technique has now developed into a healthy, exciting workable consortium of professionals in the design and architectural fields."

Elevated and sunken office areas and conference rooms amidst a profusion of greenery creates a relaxed but creative environment. Moreover, because the plants are continuously changed, there are always new interior elements to delight the eye.



In fact, the fact that so many plants are part of the design motif has led Lohrbach to also form a plant services company, understandably called The Greenhaus.

The structure also has considerable appeal from an economic viewpoint, so far as leasing is concerned, Lohrbach says.

Whereas walls are constantly being moved to meet the space requirements of existing or new tenants, this cost is minimal in a Greenhaus type of building. In addition, the environment is one that is enormously attractive to clerical personnel who are confined to the office all day, he adds, which reduces the employee turnover.

Shelby has eight years experience in real estate and six years experience as a broker. He specializes in retail, commercial and industrial leasing and sales. Pieper specializes in industrial property sales and leasing. He has 15 years real estate experience including acquisition and site packaging for Humble Oil and shopping center land sales and leasing.

Prior to joining Business Properties, both Shelby and Pieper were with Grubb and Ellis in Newport Beach.

Paula Held, the oceanography student who recently marked her third anniversary as Miss Ironwood, has joined the Ironwood Country Club, Palm Desert staff as a sales hostess. A Palm Desert resident for the last eight years, Paula's main duties at Ironwood are greeting visitors at the Sales and Information Center and directing them to various residential and recreational locales within the 900-acre Ironwood development.

The award for the Realtors National Marketing Institute "Most Unusual Residential Transaction of the Year" was recently presented to Bryan A. Mace and David D. Otis, partners in Laguna Investments, Inc., Laguna Beach. They received the Rich Port trophy from Joseph P. Klock, who in 1976 was vice president-chairman of the Marketing Management Council of the Marketing Institute.

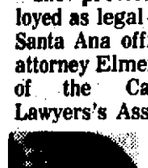
The complicated award-winning transaction involved four properties and several buyers and sellers, as well as cash investors. Considerations were first and second mortgages, protection of credit ratings and acquisition of some properties without a large cash outlay down. Most of the sales included contingency sales.

Dani Puckett, a leasing agent at Oakwood Garden Apartments/North in Newport Beach, recently captured fourth prize in R & B Development Co.'s $20,000 Firebird Rental Rally Contest.

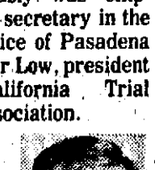
MOORE PEDERSEN

Two Orange County Realtor Associates, charter members of the seven-office All Points Realtors Corp., have been awarded top honors for their sales efforts.

Stan Moore Jr., 25, salesman in the Stan Moore Division of All Points, Westminster, won top honors in 1976 for his $1.5 million in sales. Moore is a graduate of OCC and Cal State Fullerton.



Another milion dollar winner, Dale Pedersen of Joe Stegner's office, Santa Ana, will take his top prize, a trip to London, in April. Beside Pederson's sojourn aboard, both salesmen were awarded a CB radio.



Paul R. Farel has been appointed account manager for Donald M. Bird Associates, a real estate and investment firm. Farel has been with Bird since 1971. As project sales manager for new home developments, he has established an enviable sales record. As account manager, Farel's duties consist of coordination and liaison between sales staff and builder, market research responsibilities and development of new accounts.

Martin Millard of Newport Beach has been named vice president of The Professionals, a Newport Beach based real estate corporation. Millard will serve as chief operating officer of the firm's industrial division which handles sales and leases of industrial buildings from 1,000 to 50,000 square feet.

He previously served as second vice-president for the group and is member of the National Association of Home Builders Million Dollar Sales Club, and the Laguna Beach Board of Realtors.

The Avco Community Developers (ACD) salespersons were awarded the Million Dollar Circle Awards for new home sales at the National Association of Home Builders annual convention in Dallas. The awards go to salespersons who have sold $1 million or more of new homes during the 12 month period from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30, 1976.

Robert Wells, William Johnson, Garland Long, George Gould, Eric Hopley, Charles Hain, Samuel Bart and Carol Reinhart received the awards for Rancho Bernardo, with Bob Wells named salesman of the year for Rancho Bernardo with a total volume of $2,866,251. Addition At Mesa Verde Center

A greenhouse seating area is being added to the Hamburger Hamlet Restaurant in the Mesa Verde Center at Harbor Boulevard and Adams Street, Costa Mesa. The new dining area is scheduled to open by mid-January and will provide an additional 600 square feet of space to the existing 6,640 square feet structure which opened for business in April, 1971.

The greenhouse, designed by Los Angeles architect Lynne Paxton and built by Kohlenberger and Sons Construction Co. of Tustin, will be a glass enclosed patio which accomodates ten to 12 tables.

Wild Dogs, Cheetahs Studied By U.S. Couple In Tanzania

Knight News Wire

PHILADELPHIA – Lory Herbison Frame, 29, and her husband George, frequently spend two weeks at a time alone together, miles from other humans, in Tanzania's vast Serengeti National Park.

Just the two of them, alone in their long wheelbase landcruiser around them stretches the vast, flat Serengeti Plain. Above them, this night, is the vast, clear southern sky.

So what is going on in George and Lory's landcruiser?

Well, George is asleep in the back while Lory sits in the driver's seat, intently watching a pack of wild dogs, ready to start up and pursue should the dogs begin to move out.

Or Lory is asleep and George is watching the dogs. Or one of them is watching cheetahs instead of dogs. They have day watches and night watches, Lory says, because otherwise "you are liable to wake up and find your animals are gone."

The Frames are naturalists. For the last three years they have been in Africa studying the population dynamics of cheetahs and wild dogs.

At first they were both studying cheetahs and dogs, but they found that that didn't work too well. They found that each was depending on the other to fill in research gaps and that sloppy work was the result.

So now she specializes in dogs and he concentrates on cheetahs and everything works out beautifully.

The Frames are graduate students at Utah State University.

Their research in Africa is financed by a number of grants and by articles the two write for nature and wildlife magazines.

Even that lacks some of the comforts of home. The nearest grocery store that carries a full line of canned goods is 250 miles away, in Nairobi, Kenya.

So is the nearest real hospital.

And when the Frames set out from the research institute, they are on their own, although Lory concedes that neighbors usually have a rough idea of when to expect them back.

Once, when she and George were watching a pack of dogs, two females left the group and struck out on their own seeking mates, something scientists had never seen.

The Frames took off after them, following them at a 25-mile-an-hour clip into a remote unfamiliar section of the park. "It was," Lory said, "The most exciting thing that has ever happened to us."

Lory's dogs have a bad reputation, particularly in what she calls the "white hunter literature." This, she says, is because men don't like the way the dogs kill their prey.

They hunt in packs, cooperating rather than competing, and they literally eat their prey to death. Victims usually are gazelles and young wildebeests.

The kill isn't pretty, but Lory insists that it is fast – that a gazelle is dead 30 seconds after being attacked and even a large wildebeest dies after a couple of minutes.

What impresses her about the dogs – which she says are actually less closely related to domestic dogs than are wolves and coyotes – is their altruism.

Altruism? In animals that can disembowel a gazelle in 30 seconds?

Yes, Lory said, it is evident in the way they treat their young. In fact, after a kill, the adult dogs in the pack will step back and wait patiently while the younger dogs eat their fill.

And although only one dog – the dominant female – is permitted to have puppies all dogs share in the care and feeding of the litter, which can number up to 16.

The dominant female and the dominant male do all the breeding, Lory said. And although subordinate females will leave the pack in search of mates, Lory suspects that subordinate males, who are "so scared of the dominant male that they don't get near a female," remain lifetime celibates.

The wild dogs range over a large part of Africa, Lory said, but are rare everywhere, with a population of only 200 per 10,000 square miles, compared with 4,000 for hyenas, 3,000 for lions and 500 to 1,000 for cheetahs.

Fish Born In Space Doing OK

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)- Two University of Louisville scientists studying fish born in space in 1975 said they have noticed subtle differences between those hatched in zero gravity and earth-born fish.

"A number of the animals are alive and well at the Johnson Space Center, and behaviorial tests are being done on them to see if their swimming behavior is normal," said Dr. Peter M. Fuller. "There are some very subtle differences. We can't say yet that there was, definitely, an effect of zero gravity.".

Fuller and Dr. J. Richard Keefe, both professors of anatomy, were responsible for sending 495 fish eggs into space aboard the American command module that linked up with a Soviet spaceship.

Fuller said 95 per cent of the eggs hatched during the flight and that about 100 of the animals are still alive.

These are being compared with fish of the same age born on the ground, Fuller said.

"Some younger animals appear to swim differently than some of the control animals. It's not a very striking difference. They simply stay at the top of the chamber and the control animals don't.

"But we can't quite put our finger on what those differences are. It is something in the structure. We would like to think it was the flight; that would be the logical conclusion."

He said the differences detected thus far "certainly are not detrimental" and that the fish apparently "were not adversely affected" by being born in space.

The ultimate aim of the project is to determine what the chances would be for a normal human to be born in space, said the two professors.

Obviously, the bottom line is, in 15 or 20 years, if a female astronaut goes into space and becomes pregnant or is pregnant, will that embryo be normal," Fuller said. "But you don't start that way. You start with fish and pregnant mice."

Fuller and Keefe have proposed to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration that pregnant mice be sent aboard the planned space shuttle flights.

"The next step is to look at a mammal, and we are proposing two things to NASA. We want to send up pregnant mice on the space shuttle, and we want to send up male and female mice and let them mate in space, to see if fertilization will occur in space," said Fuller.

Scientists Mapping Search For Life On Other Planets

Copley News Service

Scientists are mapping a search for extraterrestrial intelligence anywhere in the universe, to begin in October 1978.

The project, dubbed SETI (Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence), is managed by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory at Pasadena. NASA's Ames Research Center near San Francisco is a team member, too.

In October of next year scientists will begin to scan deep space, using a new signal-processing technique that analyzes millions of frequency channels simultaneously, in search of civilizations millions of miles beyong the human imagination.

JPL and Ames scientists call SETI a "modest but serious" beginning of a search they hope will prove a scientific theory that earth has no exclusive rights to civilization.

At first SETI will use earth-based radio telescopes to reach out for signals from the black void of space. This tentative step later may lead to a SETI program involving construction of huge antennas in space or even on the moon – away from the radio interference from planet earth.

SETI is shaping up in the wake of an appeal from Nobel Laureate Sir Martin Ryle, a member of Britain's Astronomer Royal, to avoid making known the existence of intelligent life on earth, for fear this would attract the attention of possibly hostile civilizations elsewhere in the universe. He even warned that voices calling "hello out there" might trigger an invasion of our planet by hostile beings from other planets.

Sir Martin went to the International Astronomical Union with his plea that radio astronomers should not beam out powerful signals to distant stars and galaxies.

That started an international argument during which SETI scientists claimed the emphasis of their program is on listening, with no thought at this time of transmitting messages which might be picked up by other civilizations.

Sir Martin countered, however, with a claim that powerful radio signals already have been sent deep into space from the Arecibo Radio Telescope in Puerto Rico. He also mentioned a second project in which he said an attempt was made to map planets with strong radar pulses.

Now the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and the Forum for the Advancement of Students in Science and Technology have stepped in for a try at settling the controversies swirling around SETI.

They have called together leading scientists, philsophers, anthropologists and sociologists for a face-off Feb. 24-25 at the Ames Center. Details of SETI will be laid on the table for a pro-and-con discussion of what directions and how far and fast the project should move.

Since the innovation of the American newspaper's Sunday supplement writers have envisioned civilizations somewhere in the Great Beyond. All it took was a little imagination and a good artist to show what people or beings on other plants might look like.

A constant stream of reports and claims of UFO sightings have added to the layman's belief that indeed there might be something or somebody out there somewhere. Televised space odysseies like "Star Trek" have added some spice to the mystery.

Yugoslav To Spend 2 Years In Cavern

By SEAN TOOLAN
Chicago Tribune

The name itself, Bogovinska Cave, belongs in the pages of Bram Stoker's Dracula.

Sometime this spring, a 40-year-old Yugoslav will walk a half mile into it and enter a world of upside down bats, spiders, and slithering salamanders, never looking back to see his friends seal him off from the world behind two thick cement walls.

Milutin Veljovik will not see the light of day for the next two years, knowing full well that eight months after the last drop of cement is poured, he will start hallucinating, blacking out, falling down, and vomiting from sheer terror. And it's all in the name of science, to see just how far the human spirit can bend.

It won't be the first time he has isolated himself from all that is familiar. In 1969 he went into another Yugoslavia cave and was sealed off from the world for 15 months.

Scientists from eight Yugoslave institutes monitored Veljovik's mental and physical reactions to the punishment. The results will be published later this year and distributed to space agencies worldwide in the belief they will help astronaunts in survival training.

"The first eight months are not so bad," Veljovik said, "The spirit still lives on its own. But then something dies. It is then that you have to keep reminding yourself you are a human being.

"The balance goes first, you stagger about. Then you get occasional blackouts. They get worse until you lapse into unconsciousness. That's when the terror comes because you don't know how long you have been out and the next time could be the last. Then you start vomiting because you're scared.

"Hallucinations come then: I heard pigs grunting all around me. One time I was digging for fossils and through the back of my head I could see a human skeleton. I never turned around to check.

"It is very important never to turn around to check the hallucination. If you do, you are finished; you already have admitted the possibility of its existence. From there you go mad."

The cave always will be damp because of the permanent humidity at a temperature of about 50 degrees Farenheit, but he won't be wearing wet clothing like the last time.

"Last time I washed some of my clothes after about two months and hung them up to dry. Ten days later, they were still wet.

"I made a wooden box and put an electric light inside. That dried the air out. Then I dried my clothes one piece at a time. It took about five days, but at least they were dry."

Veljovik has been interested in caves since he was a young boy. Even then, he would stay overnight in places that make Halloween seem like a Maypole dance.

There will be a one-way telephone in Bogovinska Cave; Veljovik will be able to talk to the scientists but will hear nothing. He will go through prearranged physical and mental tests to determine his deterioration.

He will cook nothing and eat cold packaged and canned food. He will have a bed, clothes, science books, and a few tools for digging out fossils. He will have a couple of electric lights but no watch to tell him when to turn them off.

There will be no sunshine, moonlight, rain, snow, falling leaves, or even an argument with a fellow human being.

If he doesn't go mad next time, he can look forward to a long spell in a hospital, then a lengthy vacation in some Yugoslavian resort.

Mountain Probe Set To Study Formation of Earth's Crust

LANDER, Wyo. (AP) — A team of about 25 geologists from Cornell University plans to use sophisticated sound equipment in an attempt to determine how the earth is shaped about 40 miles underneath a portion of the towering Wind River Mountains.

Professor Sidney Kaufman, who is heading up the team, says the project is the first of its type. He said it is part of a worldwide effort by 52 countries to explore the earth's crust and come with valid explanations on why it looks like it does.

Kaufman said one existing theory is that the Wind River Mountains, some of which rise more than 13,000 feet, were formed by an uplifting inside the earth, pushing up the mountains. The second theory is that two large plates came together along a fault, and the resulting pressure forced material upward.

"The solutions we find here would be applicable all over this country, plus in five or six mountain ranges around the world with similar features," Kaufman said.

Kaufman said the field work will be conducted in one high mountain area near Atlantic City and in another flatter region between South Pass and Farson.

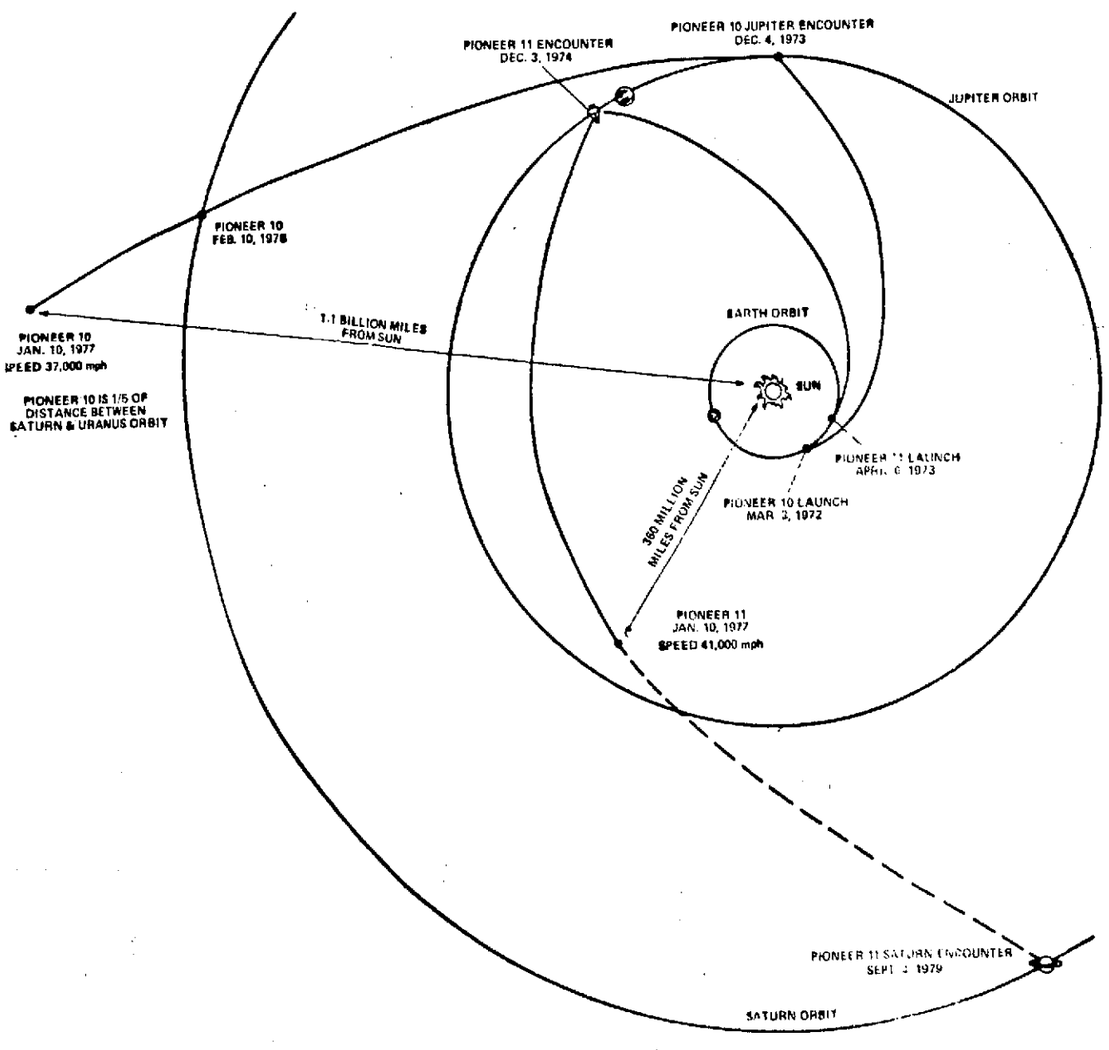
He said the project is being funded by the National Science Foundation and is expected to cost more than $250,000.

Pioneer 10 Model Joins Aviation-Space 'Greats'

WASHINGTON — A test model of NASA's Pioneer 10, the first spacecraft to reach the giant planet Jupiter, has been placed on permanent display here in the National Air and Space Museum of the Smithsonian Institute.

Pioneer 10, which also is destined to become the first man-made object to leave the solar system altogether, joins Apollo 11, the Wright Brothers Flyer, and Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis in the institute's Milestones of Flight Hall.

The test model of Pioneer, identical to the flight spacecraft, is on display because the actual Pioneer 10 now is 1.6 billion kilometers (one billion miles) out, between the orbits of Saturn and Uranus.



Pioneer 10 still is transmitting science data from unexplored space, and should do so as far out as Uranus' orbit, almost 3.2 billion km (two billion mi.) from the Sun. Pioneer 10 will reach Uranus' orbit in September 1979, at the same time its sister spacecraft, Pioneer 11, arrives at Saturn for history's first visit to the ringed planet.

Using the newest radio technology and our largest antenna to hear it, scientists may well use Pioneer 10 to describe unexplored solar space as far out as Pluto's orbit, and perhaps beyond. Reaching Pluto's orbit, nearly 6.4 billion km (four billion mi.) from the sun, in 1987, Pioneer 10 will continue on out of the solar system into interstellar space. It will go on "forever," but unheard from Earth because its radio signals will become too faint to be audible over the radio background noise of the universe.

Pioneer 10 is headed generally for the red star, Aldebaran, the eye of the constellation Taurus. Pioneer will take more than two billion years to reach this point.

Pioneer 10 and 11 are managed by NASA's Ames Research Center, Mountain View, Calif. Both spacecraft were built by TRW Systems, Redondo Beach, Calif.

PIONEER 10 AND 11 POSITIONS

Pioneer 10 made the first visit to Jupiter, in December 1973, and discovered that the enormous planet is a huge whirling ball of liquid hydrogen, with no perceptible surface. Pioneer 10 also returned the first closeup view of the colorful planet with its huge red eye, and of two of its four planet-sized moons. It made a variety of discoveries about Jupiter's magnetic field, radiation belts and weather. Findings about the latter should help shed more light on the difficult problems of Earth's highly unstable weather and climate.

Pioneer 10 was launched on March 3, 1972 and made the first flight beyond Mars and through the asteroid belt, easing concern about an asteroidal barrier to outer planet exploration. Mission planners used Jupiter's gravity to hurl the spacecraft on an escape trajectory out of the solar system. It crossed Saturn's orbit last February, and is now traveling away from the Sun at a speed of 59,000 km (37,000 mi.) an hour. Somewhere in interstellar space its speed will stabilize at just over 40,000 km (25,000 mi.) an hour.

Pioneer 10's twin spacecraft, Pionner 11, identical to the spacecraft being placed in the Smithsonian, now is making the first trip to Saturn. Pioneer 11 added greatly to Jupiter knowledge by taking the first look at the planet's polar regions (not visible from Earth), and the first closeup pictures of two of the four large Jovian moons.

Pioneer 11 surpassed Pioneer 10's record flyby speed of 131,000 km (82,000 mi.) an hour, reaching a speed of 171,000 km. (107,000 mi.0 as it passed the planet in December 1974

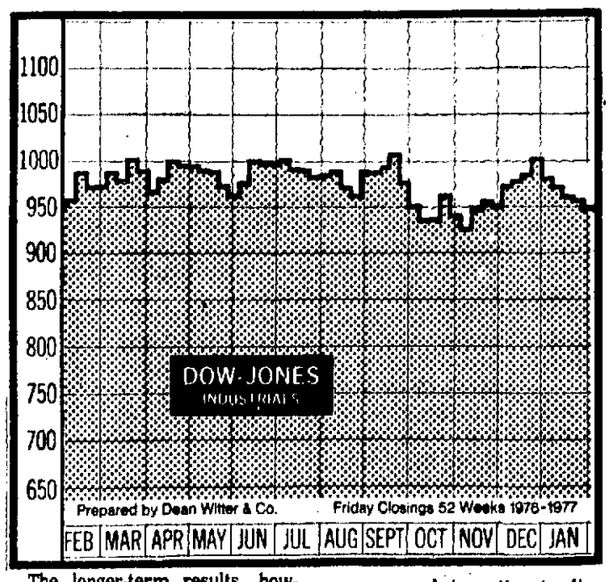
Stocks In 5th Loss

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, caught up in winter-weather worries, sustained its fifth straight loss since the start of 1977 this past week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 9.64 to 947.89, bringing its loss since New Year's to 56.76 points.

By other measures the week's losses were less extensive. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index eased .05 to 101.88, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index dipped .03 to 55.46.



Big Board volume averaged 23.85 million shares a day, down from 24.83 million the week before.

Analysts in Washington, on Wall Street and elsewhere were busy during the week trying to calculate the potential economic effects of abnormally cold temperatures in the eastern half of the country.

At week's end there were still many unanswered questions, and the data by which investors traditionally keep track of the economy's progress weren't much help.

The government reported a sharp drop in the unemployment rate for January, for example, but then cautioned that its figures were collected before short supplies of natural gas forced many plant closings and layoffs.

Researchers generally agreed that January's figures for inflation, economic growth and corporate profits all would be adversely affected by the cold.

The longer-term results, however, remained a subject of conjecture and debate.

Top officials in the Carter administration reserved judgment on whether the President's proposed economic-stimulus plan should be expanded because of the cold.

Wall Street, meanwhile, expressed some discomfort over what final shape the program would take.

Speculation was that Congress would wind up adding spending plans to it that the financial community would regard as inflationary. The lawmakers also were expected to resist the part of the Carter plan that calls for tax breaks for business.

Gulf & Western Industries gave ground in active trading after the company estimated its first quarterly earnings decline in five years.

H&R Block, the tax-preparation firm, also took a tumble. In his "fireside chat" Wednesday night, the President said his proposals would raise the standard deduction to allow many more taxpayers to use simple forms in filing their future returns.

On the upside, Milgo Electronic jumped ahead as two other companies continued their heated bidding competition for control of the firm.

Sony also gained ground on news of the development of a two-hour video cassette system for introduction in Japan this April.

Farm Futures Trade Sluggish During Week

CHICAGO (AP) — Trade in farm commodity futures on the nation's major exchanges was rather sluggish last week.

Small gains were posted in soybeans, soybean oil, wheat and corn, but oats declined a few pennies, while soybean meal and iced broiler prices were irregular. Live hog and pork belly futures advanced in price, but live cattle futures along with shell eggs closed on a mixed tone.

The weather was a constant factor in price moves. Reports from the Agriculture Department on crops, stocks, foreign purchases also influenced trade.

Snow over rural roads prevented the movement of grain from farms into commercial channels. Ice-clogged inland waterways held barges from moving downstream for a time, but some easing was reported in the problem along the lower Ohio River.

The government reported that there could be less high protein meal and edible oil available at the end of the current season, and this tended to influence buying of these futures. Export business in meal, oil and soybeans also showed some improvement and brought in buyers. A Brazilian soybean sale to China was considered bullish because it depleted scant world bean stocks.

But prices moved in rather narrow ranges, despite the outside news. Wheat, corn and oats trade generally appeared to benefit from the moves in the soybean complex. On Friday, however, soybeans were mixed at the final bell while corn, wheat and oats posted the next gains of the week.

When trade had ended for the week on Friday, soybeans were 1½ to 16 cents a bushel higher, March 7.33; soybean oil rose 48 to 83 points (almost 1 cent a pound), March 23.18; wheat gained 6 to 9½ cents, March 2.80; corn advanced 2½ to 4¾ cents, March 2.56; oats lost ½ to 3½ cents, March 1.80½; soybean meal was 2.00 lower to 3.80 higher (per ton) March 210.50; and iced broilers were 60 points lower to 75 higher (¾ cent a pound), February 38.35.

DUE TO SEVERE WINTER

Nation's Economy Faces New Crisis

By WILLIAM BROWN
New York News

NEW YORK – Mother Nature has socked it to the nation this winter right where it hurts – in the economy.

The frigid weather, which has gripped the East and the Midwest in a deadly icy vise has sidetracked U.S. industry with plant closings, layoffs and retail business shutdowns.

As a result, the economy, which was beginning to reawaken after suffering a pause in activity in the third quarter last year, is threatening to hibernate once again.

The weather's impact already has economists revising their estimates, upping forecasts on consumer prices and downgrading predictions on the gross national product. Price revisions range anywhere from 0.5 per cent to 2 per cent, and the prognosticators warn of even higher costs if temperatures this month do not get back toward normal.

But many people are viewing the current crisis, the shortage of natural gas supplies caused by the explosive demand for fuel to fend off the freeze, as nothing more than a temporary, although nasty, set back.

Eventually, the thesis goes, the plants will reopen, the laid-off will be called back to work and the consumer will be back in reopened retail outlets – spending money to stimulate the economy with winter's frost-bite conditions only a fading memory.

Merrill Lynch Economics Inc., an analytical arm of the nation's biggest and most prestigious brokerage firm, "doubts that the impact will be heavy."

The analysis goes on to say: "If the impact does prove to be sizeable, there will be a strong rebound in the spring, much as you would see after a major labor strike."

Back to normal? Probably not.

The hard winter is draining disposable income from consumer pocketbooks with a vengence. Forget the natural gas crisis for a minute and think of home heating oil.

No headlines of shortages, but 11 million homes and millions of multiple dwellings are burning oil at much higher rates this year than last, thanks to the freeze, and customers are paying for it at higher prices than in 1975.

In addition, a number of heating oil suppliers, concerned about the possibility of a shortage, have begun to allocate fuel oil to their customers at a percentage of normal delivered volume, according to the latest report from the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation.

More money spent by Americans for fuel means less spent for other things. It is quite possible that, when the nation's factories and plants reopen, the consumer will fool the experts and not resume his buying as if nothing has happened.

If, as the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., said recently, "the consumer will dictate the over-all pattern of economic activity in 1977," then the effects of the winter of 1976-77 may, indeed, have lingering negative impact on the economy.

Car sales could stall, or even recede, as wary potential buyers concerned about their financial stance postpone commitments. This, in turn, would lead to reduced auto production, a slackening of steel demand and, in the long-term, more disastrous industrial layoffs than the nation is now experiencing.

A consumer, future-shocked now by his present fuel bills and facing the prospect of even higher costs – which all the experts agree will be the result of any sound energy policy – will probably buy less of everything in the years ahead.

American industry, facing the same problem to run its plants, will have to scale back on production and find profit margins shrinking.

As former Treasury Secretary William Simon said at the height of the Arab oil embargo, Americans will have to scale back their standard of living.

What it boils down to is this: There will be permanent repercussions – just how serious depends on the mercury – but we will survive.

IN CALIFORNIA

Huge Crop Losses Loom

By MICHAEL COAKLEY
Chicago Tribune

LOS ANGELES – Facing the second straight year of severe drought, farmers in California's Central Valley may be forced to cut crop production this season by up to 40 per cent.

Such a drastic reduction in the nation's largest agricultural state could increase supermarket prices across the country.

While cautioning that it's still too early to make accurate forecasts, California farm experts see little hope of early recovery from last year's disastrous losses of $517 million.

Nor does the weather man offer any encouragement.

Meteorologists have warned that there is only a 15 per cent chance of normal precipitation before spring planting. And even normal rain and snowfall would leave reservoirs perilously low because of last season's record dry spell.

Agriculture is California's largest industry, bringing in more than $8 billion annually. The state produces some 25 per cent of all food products consumed by Americans, thereby causing an inevitable nationwide effect whenever production is cut substantially.

The hardest hit area of the state is the 400-mile-long Central Valley, a once-arid region transformed through modern irrigation techniques into one of the richest agricultural areas in the world.

Two weeks ago, federal water officials told a somber gathering of farmers in Ventura County that their water deliveries probably will be slashed by 25 per cent this year, and possibly as much as 50 per cent.

"The odds against being able to avoid cutbacks on deliveries are very great," said David Schuster of the Federal Bureau of Reclamation. "We'd have to have record rainfall from now on."

The bureau estimates that water shortages of that magnitude could cut over-all production by as much as 40 per cent while causing some water-intensive crops – such as rice and alfalfa – to diminish by much higher figures.

"It's serious, but how serious we just don't know yet," said Jack King of the California Farm Bureau, which is now in the process of surveying growers statewide.

King said the first to feel the brunt this year would be the dairymen and livestock producers, who lost $467 million last year as parched ranges and soaring prices for hay and feed grains forced them to sell off their herds at distressed prices.

This caused a drop in beef prices, but the resulting shortage of animals is likely to force prices back up this spring as California cattlemen glumly predict another year of half-billion-dollar losses.

Looking ahead to this season, King predicted that the hardest hit crops would be the so-called "seasonals" such as onions, potatoes, dry beans, peppers, tomatoes, and melons.

"Midwest farmers who grow these crops could benefit by picking up the slack," said King, adding that a lot of California growers are going to be planting crops which require less water or cultivating fewer acres.

The experts are reluctant to predict the impact of the drought on nationwide food prices beyond noting it will be a factor.

There is some optimism that the over-all effect may not be severe, due mostly to crop conditions outside the state. For instance, even though this year's California rice crop could all but vanish, there is currently a glut of rice worldwide.

But conditions elsewhere offer little solace to the beleaguered California farmer. Already local economies in the 27 Central Valley counties hardest hit by the drought are beginning to feel the pinch.

"We usually buy six new trucks a year," said one water district official. "This year, we cancelled our bid. When I told the dealer we wouldn't buy this year, he said a lot of farmers were doing the same thing."

Radio Shack's Sales Rise 34%

FORT WORTH – Radio Shack's sales for the six months ended Dec. 31,1976 climbed 34% above sales for the same period last year, and per share amounts of income from continuing operations increased 42% for this first half of the company's fiscal year.

Tandy Corporation, parent company of the Radio Shack store chain, reported sales of $500,373,000 for the six-month period. For the six months ended Dec. 31, 1975 net sales were $373,590,000.

Income from continuing operations for the six months ended Dec. 31, 1976 was $43,374,000, up from $31,250,000 a year ago. Earnings per share from continuing operations (restated to give effect to a two-for-one split of common stock which was distributed on January 9, 1976 to stockholders of record on Decmber 12, 1975) were $2.45 for the first half of fiscal 1977, compared to $1.91 a year ago. Average shares outstanding for the six months ended December 31,1976 were 17,699,213, compared to 18,069,708 the previous year.

TV Exports Drop

TOKYO (AP) – Japanese exports of color television sets to the United States may decline considerably this year from last year's 2.93 million sets, a spokesman for Japan's electronics industry said Wednesday.

Toshio Takai, managing director of the Electronic Industries Association of Japan, made the remark in response to American complaints concerning a sharp increase last year in Japanese color tv sets exported to the United States.

BUSINESS LIMELIGHT

Programming By Computer

Computer programmers with their nano seconds, bits and bytes and computer languages leave the uninitiated in awe of the comparably new business.

The computer world can be confusing to the outsider. Minicomputers have been designed for the small business with from 10 to 200 employes.

But the mystery surrounding the computer has kept many businessmen in the gallery. The cost of software seems a waste to the small businessman.

Software is the programming that is necessary to tell the computer what to do. If you want a system to do the company's accounting, a computer programmer will design a software program to do that. The program tells the computer what to do.

The cost of software varies with the type and number of programs needed by a particular business.

By the hour a computer programmer will cost $35 to $40.

The programmer will talk with the programmer in a computer language — Fortran, Cobol or APL.

This secret language keeps the public from the inner circle.

But ADAM may change all this. ADAM is a mini-computer which understands the English language and can converse with the operator in English.

Programmers aren't needed, explained, Thomas W. Harleman, president of Advanced Data Machine Corp., in San Diego, the exclusive dealer for ADAM in Southern California.

"The user just sits down in front of ADAM and tells him what he wants ADAM to do," Tom said.

"If you want ADAM to do something, you sit down and tell it what to do in English. You are your own programmer," he said.

"Most computers are tutorial. Adam is not." By tutorial he means that the computer will tutor you as to the way you must use the machine.

But Adam will learn. "You can teach Adam anything you would teach any of your office personnel," Tom said.

To demonstrate this, Tom sat me down in front of ADAM and had me establish a program for listing customers. It took about one half an hour.

The ease of conversing with ADAM by an unitiated outsider like myself was impressive. Tom explained that the whole selling point of ADAM is that anyone can use the machine after a short two or three day training period.

If the concept of ADAM catches on in the computer world, some programers will be out of business.

When a business establishes a program and wants to alter it, the business has to have a programer change the program.

With ADAM this would no longer be necessary. The operator is the programer.

Users of ADAM are enthusiastic. Patrick Nugent of San Francisco based Atkins Kroll & Co. Ltd. said, "I estimate ADAM has saved us $180,000 in programming costs alone."

David Dixon of Fox Hollow Inc., Kentfield, Calif., said "Ninety-six programs have been written, and more are being added every week." Fox Hollow ships horses around the country.

Jim Thodes of Phoenix-based Crown Crafts & Notions said, "DEC and a hundred others make good hardware (computers). But the entire crux of the matter is software. Sure you can go to school and become a grade B programmer in a few weeks with DIBOL. But you can become a grade A programmer with ADAM in a few days and so can everyone in your office."

ADAM was designed by John Peers. The computer is produced by Logical Machines and Peers is president of the firm.

The computer is sold throughout the country and the world through exclusvie dealers such as Adavanced Data Machine in San Diego.

Floridians Gambling On Tomatoes

MIAMI (AP) – Some tomato farmers who lost their entire crops in last month's freeze are importing Mexican plants to try to produce a new crop before summer.

"If it works, they'll have tomatoes when no one else will," said Hal Jones, director of the state Agriculture Department's Plant Industry Division. "It's a good gamble."

Virtually the entire winter crop of Florida tomatoes, including seedlings, was ruined in the killer freeze which caused hundreds of millions of dollars damage to Florida's fruit and vegetable growers.

Growers have exhausted the supply of greenhouse-grown seedlings, so they are importing Mexican plants which will have a head start on seeds planted in Florida soil.

Officials said the Mexican plants, believed to be the first ever imported into Florida, should be ready for harvest within three months – about 40 days ahead of plants grown from seed.

"It's a calculated risk, an attempt to recoup our losses," said Tom Harris, office manager for Homestead grower Joe Torcise. "If we don't have another freeze, it could work."

"If the plants survive the trip and if they're healthy and if they come in on time, he could make a fortune," Jones said of Torcise.

Torcise spent at least $12,000 just for shipping the 1.5 million plants he received Thursday. He's hoping to buy an additional 1.5 million soon, and other growers have ordered more than 300,000 seedlings. No estimate was available of the number of farmers ordering new plants or the actual cost of the seedlings, however.

Because the Mexican tomato plants might be infested with insect or diseases not common to the United States, special permits, inspections and chemical treatments have been necessary.

Experts said the tomatoes produced by the Mexican plants are virtually identical to Florida tomatoes.

ELECTED – Mrs. Ramelle Kensler has been elected vice president and treasurer of Symmar, Inc., Fullerton. The firm's real estate division owns industrial and office properties throughout Orange County. Mrs. Kensler will oversee the staff and supervise accounting activities. She was named Woman of the Year in 1973 by Fullerton Junior Ebel. She resides with husband, Robert, and two children in Fullerton.

Weather Cuts Steel Production

NEW YORK (AP) – Natural gas shortages caused by the cold weather idled 10 per cent of the domestic steel industry's labor force in the past week.

The American Iron & Steel Institute said that between 40,000 and 50,000 workers were off the job, with the hardest hit mills located in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York.

Most steel mills were operating on reduced production schedules as gas was kept to maintainence levels through the East and Midwest, the trade daily American Metal Market reported.

Meanwhile, United States Steel Corp. and Bethlehem Steel Corp. this past week announced price hikes of about 5 per cent effective March 13 on tin mill products used in cans and other packaging.

The hike was lower than industry observers had anticipated in light of the current world tin shortage and high prices.

Rep. Robert B. Mollohan, D-W.Va., introduced legislation to authorize sale on the U.S. market of 30,000 tons of tin from the government's stockpile.

He said the current high cost of the metal threatened the jobs of thousands of steelworkers who make tinplate. The price of tin has risen from about $2.85 a pound in January 1976 to about $4.60 currently.

While Mollohan's bill does not specify prices or sales dates, it warns of disrupting present tin markets.

At 37, She Heads Development Company

BY SAM CAMPBELL
Register Associate Editor

Thirty-one years ago, when the other kids in her block were playing "house" with their dolls, 6-year-old Harriet Frizelle would sit on her front porch in Culver City with pencil and note pad. She was pretending to be a business executive.

Today, at 37, the Newport Beach woman heads Ridgewood Development, Inc., West Covina. She founded the firm in April, 1976. The first group of 38 homes and three models is sold out. A second phase has been opened for sale, and three others in West Covina are scheduled for completion between March of this year and January, 1978.

In late June, Mrs. Frizelle expects to open Ridgewood – Huntington Beach, plus five "horse lot" homes in Santa Ana Canyon.

A former executive of the John Lusk and Robert H. Grant home-building enterprises, the slender, brown-tressed mother of two admits that the change from steady employment to "creating my own paycheck" was not accomplished without emotional misgivings.

"But I was prepared," she said. "Every step I ever took, I wondered whether I had bitten off too much. The first opportunity I had to be in management, I asked, 'Would I be able to cope?' this move wasn't too much different."

Mrs. Frizelle sports a credential or two from the famous University of Hard Knocks. Her parents were divorced before she was two years old. Her stepfather died when she was 14. The family moved to Whittier. She got a job at a dime store to help support a sister and brother. Next she worked in an ice cream store. At 16 she became a secretary for a country club. At 17 she transferred her secretarial skills to an electronics firm, and was married.

When she was 19, her first son was born; 16 months later, along came her second. To be with her children, she became a car hop at a Pasadena hamburgery. But the night job didn't work out. She successfully applied for a job with the Lusk company.

"I enjoy working," she reflected, "I did then. I do now. I don't think that at the outset I tried consciously to move up the ladder. I just did the work that was given me. I didn't find reasons not to do it. I tried to make it easy for the people who supervised me. That helped them advance and it helped me."

She found herself running errands between shopping center designers and lessors. In the same way, she assisted in the coordination of colors and materials. She worked with draftsmen and learned to read blue prints. She helped calculate dry wall and was taught to understand construction specifications.

At the end of five years, she became head of purchasing. Four and a half years later, she transferred to Robert H. Grant Co. as vice president and director of Southern California operations. That firm was then winding down and within the year ceased, but this was precisely the situation her varied experience had prepared her to handle. As the staff was whittled down, she shifted from function to function. When Grant Co. finally folded its tent, she was left with a tidy severance pay.

This sum encouraged her to venture on her own and proved to be the financial padding that took her through the dry period of Ridgewood's first phase "when all the money was going out" to the commencement of income in January of this year. The first escrow on the project closed Jan. 5 and that same month she closed 19 others.

Mrs. Frizelle's older son, Warren, is now 18 and works for a cabinet shop. Chris, 16½, works for his mother three hours every day after school.

Looking ahead, she sees travel as the reward for her labor.

"I want to go to every country in the world. I want to live forever," she exclaimed. "I don't mind working until 10 p.m. for eight days in a row, if I can break off four times a year. To do that, I know I have to build an organization that will function when I'm away."

For women in the world of business, Mrs. Frizelle sees special problems.

"You often hear," she said, "that men don't like to work for a woman. I think women hate to work for a woman much more."

Secondly, she observed, "Women have an emotional nature. They have to make sure they are objective."

The third problem relates to physical makeup: "I don't think it is fair for women to go home early with a sick headache or to complain because the room suddenly seems too hot."

Yet she believes a woman can succeed in business and still be a woman.

"I think," she said, "every woman should have the same opportunities as those available to men, and I don't believe they have to relinquish their femininity to take advantage of them. I still appreciate having a door opened for me, and I like to be recognized as a female."

Car Dealer Knows For Sure Repairs Are Right – Mrs. Dealer Checks Up

BY FRANK ALLEN
Citizen Business Editor

(Editor's note: This feature originally appeared in the Tucson (Ariz.) Daily Citizen and is re-published with permission.)

Tune engine, align front end, check oil leak, replace heater valve.

The vocabulary may not be Ula Beaudry's favorite. She never had a course in auto mechanics.

But she can roll those words off her tongue with the best of them because she knows their importance to the success of the family business.

In a city like Tucson, where surveys show an alarming number of car owners are abandoning dealerships for service and repairs to opt for independent garages or the do-it-yourself approach, new car dealers are racking their brains to stay competitive.

The latest tactic at Beaudry Chrysler-Plymouth-Honda-International is the family touch. It's the owner's wife herself who takes on the job of making sure the service crew did its job.

Five days a week for at least two hours a day, Mrs. Beaudry sifts through stacks of work orders for car repairs and maintenance. She studies them with a critic's eye. The cars have come and gone several days before, but her work is just beginning.

"Hello? This is Ula Beaudry at Beaudry Chrysler-Plymouth. You brought your car in last week for some repair work. I'm calling to find out if everything was satisfactory.."

Her tone is neutral but her manner is persistent. She wants to hear it all, the bad with the good.

"No, it wasn't satisfactory," a customer told her during a typical afternoon round of phone calls recently. "The car still has the same problem as when I brought it in."

Mrs. Beaudry probes for specifics. Which same problem? Several appear on the work order. How about the tune up? Is the timing better now?

"Yes, the timing's fine," the customer concedes. "But not the steering. It still veers to the left. I just wrote a nasty letter to you and mailed it to the service manager. I had to bite my tongue for a little while, I was so mad."

Mrs Beaudry welcomes his candor. She tells him she hasn't seen the letter yet, but she wants to make things right. "Bring your car back in," she says, "and we'll get it fixed to your satisfaction."

Hers is a job that many people would not enjoy. "They tell it as it is," she explains, raising an eyebrow for emphasis. "They don't hold back. You never know what you're going to get when you call. But there's rarely any abusive language. I'd say 99 per cent want to be bothered. I've never found anyone who wasn't cordial, even when they have complaints."

The complaints are frequent but so are the bouquets of praise, judging from a recent two-hour session of eavesdropping on calls. "Its running like a top now," said one customer on the phone. "We took a trip to Flagstaff just after the carburetor was reconditioned and we didn't have a moment of trouble....I want you to know how much we appreciate the personal interest your mechanic takes in our car."

Believe it or not, Mrs. Beaudry insists that such glowing compliments aren't the high point of the job for her. She prefers talking with the customers who have lost hope.

"I like it when I get one who is determined not to come in ever again, who says this is the end, he's fed up. That's what it's all about as far as I'm concerned – finding those dissatisfied customers and setting things right for them, getting them to come down here and be customers again. It's the most important thing I do all day at the dealership."

Sometimes the job can be fatiguing, she admits. During one call, for example, an older man launched into a 10-minute technical soliloquy about manifolds and chokes. Mrs. Beaudry listened patiently but stuck to her objective. She convinced him to bring the car in again.

"Some of them tell you a whole history," she said as she put down the phone after that call. "They pour out their automotive souls. I'm no mechanic and I don't pretend to be. But I can tell when something's wrong."

The Beaudry dealership has tried a variety of techniques to follow up on customer relations. For a while, other women employes made the calls in their spare time. Then the firm tried a system with a computer and taped messages, but that approach turned people off. Mrs Beaudry's personal touch seems most effective, her husband Lee has decided.

"What she's doing says to them, Mrs. Beaudry is interested in me and my car.' Sometimes they ask, 'Is this really Mrs. Beaudry?' because they don't believe it," her husband says. "She even calls long distance to San Manuel, Green Valley and Sierra Vista. These people are stunned. No one had ever called them before. It's just not done."

Auto Dealership Failures Slow

DETROIT (AP) – The rate of auto dealership failures slowed last year as new car sales improved, according to an industry survey.

The trade journal Automotive News said there were 24,268 dealerships selling domestic passenger cars on Jan. 1, down 185 from the 24,453 operating on Jan. 1, 1975.

The decline was smaller than that of 1975, when 527 dealerships closed. In 1974, 369 dealers closed their doors.

Last year was the 21st consecutive 12-month period in which the number of domestic dealers declined, according to Automotive News.

Kremlin Does Not Spurn Nuclear Energy

WASHINGTON – Russia is running Saudi Arabia a close second for sensational headlines on the energy front.

Just when Saudi Arabia has decided that it is to her interest to split the already shaken oil cartel to smithereens by running her production at full throttle, Russia has decided to force a price increase onto her eastern European satellites – even though she is critically dependent on those satellites for foodstuffs and timber.

Suffice it to say that the incompetence of Russia's forest products management to tap her rich woodbasket makes her farm management seem positively virtuoso by comparison. Not since China's feudal hierarchs bound the feet of growing girls to keep them petite has any such gross perversion of natural forces been attempted.

On the Middle Eastern oil front, the Saudis have just talked their official 5 per cent increase down to an official 3 per cent. This would be the pragmatic equivalent of statistical zero, that is, if the terms of trade in an Arab bazaar called for the same literal-minded interpretation as quotes pounded out on the ticker of the New York Stock Exchange.

In fact, the Saudis are only talking prices up by this nominal fraction in the news stream. In the marketplace the entire price structure is buckling under the avalanche unleashed by their calculated commitment to overproduction on a scale guaranteed to force fuel costs down.

This is not a commercial decision on the part of the Saudis; it is a political one. As I explained in this column at the time that Sheik Yamani broke up the phony Qatar conference, the purpose of his dramatic flight home was to clear this strategy of calculated overproduction with the royal family.

This is the market atmosphere, and this is the political atmosphere, in which the Russians have moved to make the Hungarians and their other agricultural satellites hold still for a 25 per cent price rape. On the oil front, at any rate, the Russians are behaving as if they were about to resurrect King Canute and draft him into the Politburo.

On the nuclear front, however, the Russians have committed themselves to a more realistic strategy. It reflects an apparent recognition of Moscow's part of the very considerable complications looming in the way of Russia's ability to sustain her sensational rate of increase in oil exports to the clients with whom she is now bartering it. The demise of OPEC will jeopardize her continued role as a profiteering middleman between the Middleman between the Middle East and middle Europe: importing cheap crude for reexport at brutal markups.

This kind of power play can work only in a shortage-ridden market, not in a glutted one. Moreover, as Russia's entire romance with Kissinger revealed, her fuel strategists recognize the critical importance to Russia of developing her vast gas reserves. They also recognize that her only chance of making a belated start in this direction is to negotiate continuing access to American gas engineering and transmission technology.

Russia's artic temperatures have accentuated this dependence, despite her own impressive pre-Stalin tradition of metallurgical proficiency. There's no doubt that the future of fuel usage – from the Middle Eastern oil fields through Russia and over to Europe – calls for a significant step-up in gas consumption. The limited life expectancy of the Dutch gas reserves is increasing this probability and, with it, the dependence of the entire overseas world on American gas technology.

Nuclear technology is another matter. The Russians were quick to master it at the time they broke America's post-Hiroshima monopoly and turned it into a head start. They have been jealous of their own nuclear achievements and have refused to share the nuclear wealth. But they have fallen back on the nuclear alternative, as a Jan. 14 dispatch to the New York Times reported in great detail, as their best bet to achieve energy self-sufficiency throughout their huge and hard-to-handle land mass.

Whatever risks may lurk in non-military uses of nuclear power, the Russians have accepted it as a lesser evil than the danger for them of either energy shortage or dependence. This priority for nuclear power is all the more remarkable because Russia is such an important oil exporter; and, moreover, she has the potential, given accommodation by Moscow for a genuine negotiation with Washington, for becoming an even more important gas exporter.

Janeway Report

The path from which America has strayed in the energy jungle has provoked a great deal of criticism. But one big brownie point can be scored for America's approach to the energy problem: it has all along been consistent. The contrast with the Russian record dramatizes Russia's commitment to her own self-interest and America's disregard of hers. Where Russia has been prudent in withholding nuclear capabilities from her various clients, America has been wanton in lavishing her nuclear favors on the most unlikely beneficiaries of her largesse.

Two examples tell the story on the Russian side. Her most humiliating fiasco in the arms-peddling business was suffered with the expulsion of her cadres from Egypt; although she never went so far as to pyramid her speculation on the Nile by putting nuclear weapons there along with conventional arms. Her most spectacular success is exploiting the eccentricities of her foreign clients was scored y the arming of Qaddafi; it was his "hit" operation that knocked off King Faisal. But while the Russians have been shrewd in catering to Qaddafi's endless appetite for low-powered, high-visibility armaments that look good on parade, they would never dream of selling him a membership in the nuclear club.

Truth is well known to be no stranger than fiction. As Paul E. Erdman explains in his new bestselling novel, "The Crash of '79": "Once any nation has a reasonable quantity of plutonium oxide, building its own nuclear weapons became a relatively simple affair. To acquire such plutonium oxide all that was needed was: (a) a nuclear power reactor, and (b) a nuclear fuel reprocessing plant."

America has played her hand in the exact opposite way. More precisely, the sorry substitute for a government in Washington since 1968 has taken the path of least resistance in its decisions on the nuclear front, internationally as well as domestically. It has been ready and willing to ship nuclear material to its foreign clients, and indeed adversaries, on demand. It has been just as pliant and purposeless in yielding to the various pressure groups blocking the development of nuclear power for commercial use at home.

In fact, no one can count the billions of dollars tied up in stalled commercial projects for the development of nuclear energy. Just as the American government was a slot machine for the issuance of "go-aheads", it has become a slot machine for the issuance of "stop" orders. Hysteria about the very notion of domestic development of nuclear power has blacked out all rational discussion of the need for the feasibility of safeguards. Agitation has supplanted engineering.

Exactly as in the debate over what to do about the economy, the discussion on whether or not to go nuclear is giving no consideration to the hazards proliferating by the day from Washington's unrestricted exports of nuclear material.

The stock market has been quick and realistic in getting into step with this anomalous state of affairs. As fast as utility companies have run into regulatory stoppages on the expensive nuclear projects they have started but cannot finish, the market has priced their stocks up. Wall Street is putting a premium on the stocks of utilities relieved by force majeure of the need to raise new money for expansion.

For example, when the biggest utility system in the South reversed course and sold its stalled nuclear projects to a public authority for cash, the market-making trust institution traditionally associated with the growth cult rushed to take a major position in the company's stock. Investing in cash-rich companies with no use for their money except to pay dividends is the name of the game now.

A footnote on Canada is in order. A Jan. 15 dispatch from Ottawa to the Washington Post revealed that the discredited Trudeau government has been outdoing both our own CIA and all the corporate pracitioners of payola. It has been bribing shadowy international fixers to "buy" sales of nuclear materials to such "responsible" governments as Argentina and South Korea. With Canadian exports of nuclear material so high and so dynamic, it's a wonder that the Canadian dollar is so weak.

High-minded American opponents of commercial nuclear development at home will do well to reexamine their priorities. The irresponsible governments abroad that are loading up on nuclear materials are under no restraint whatsoever not to put their nuclear capabilities tp military use. The first of them that does will do incalculably more harm to every authorization of supervised nuclear development. It's not as if America were under pressure, as Russia is, to go all out for one form of energy exploitation over all others. But America does need a balanced energy program, with a place reserved for each competing form of fuel.

THE WEEK IN BUSINESS

Weather Hardships Mount

NEW YORK (AP) – American businesses and industry have suffered through another week of painful accommodation to cold-weather hardships.

Plant shutdowns continued in the East and Midwest this past week because of natural gas shortages. As many as 1.5 million workers have been laid off, according to government estimates.

And state unemployment funds were running low. New York forecast a potential new drain of more than $30 million a week if an expected 350,000 new eligibles put in for claims, and New Jersey estimated that in the past week, it received 50,000 new claims more than normal, indicating additional unemployment costs of $5 million a week.

On Thursday, however, there was some indication of relief for the energy-poor East.

The Federal Power Commission approved the first sale under the newly signed Emergency Natural Gas Act of 150 million cubic feet of gas daily from the western part of the country to some cities in the East by way of the Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Corp.

Companies like the National Fuel Gas Co., which supplies natural gas to many snowbound cities in New York State, say their customers may pay only 7 per cent more at most for the higher priced gas from Texas and the Pacific Northwest. Naional Fuel said the reason was the more expensive gas would be a relatively minor part of the total amount of gas it sells.

Heavy snow in the North Central states and upstate New York caused some industrial concerns to switch freight deliveries from surface to air transport.

Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp., for example, were using charter airplanes to deliver auto parts from Detroit to West Coast assembly lines.

Dairy industries in northern states continued to report losses. Officials of Jefferson County in upstate New York estimated losses could reach $10.5 million from an annual dairy income of $42 million because trucks can't get through to pick up the milk.

A Pennsylvania farmer said he had to sell about $85,000 worth of milk cows for $15,000 as slaughter beef because their feed and water froze.

Meanwhile, many corporations burned by low inventories this winter are expected to stockpile propane, oil and other fuels over the next 10 months. And they may have to build up inventories of other vital products such as steel to prevent a recurrence of distribution-related shortages.

In other business developments this past week:

–American Telehone & Telegraph Co., which earned more than $1 billion in each of the last two quarters of 1976, said its earnings rose 22 per cent to $3.83 billion in the calendar year against $3.15 billion in calendar 1975.

Per-share earnings surged to $6.05 from $5.13 a year earlier, and revenues for the year advanced to $32.8 billion from $28.96 billion a year earlier.

The nation's largest utility credited much of its strong performance to a sharp recovery at Western Electric Corp., its telephone equipment manufacturing subsidiary.

–Airline earnings, under pressure in the past few years from rising fuel costs and empty plane seats, have come back sharply from the recession, an Associated Press survey said.

Analysts told The AP that earnings for the 11 major national airlines may reach $350 million last year from a total loss of $100 million the year before.

Companies such as Eastern Air Lines Inc. and Trans World Airlines Inc. are back in the black after 1975 losses while Braniff International Corp. said its 1976 earnings were up 64 per cent.

One of the hardest hit by inflation and recession, Pan American World Airways said it earned $95 million last year, only after a $102 million tax credit. But it cut its losses from the $46 million it lost a year earlier.

Airlines said factors in the strong comeback included fare increases, cost cutting programs and a healthier economy.

–Chain stores posted substantial sales gains in January.

Despite some freezing weather and a storm at the end of the month, sales increases ranged as high as 21 per cent at S.S. Kresge Co., 14 per cent at Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward, 11 per cent at F.W. Woolworth Co., and 9 per cent at J.C. Penney Co.

The stores said the bad weather curbed some late-month sales, but most of the effect of the storms will show up in February figures.

Sales were particularly strong in typical winter lines such as heavy clothing and durable goods, the stores said.

Attorney Burge To Air Taxation At OCFS Lunch

Santa Ana attorney Robert R. Burge will discuss new tax ground rules at the luncheon meeting Feb. 24 of the Orange County Financial Society.

A specialist in corporate taxation, Burge's topic is "Corporate and Tax Planning For Privately Owned Businesses: What Are the New Ground Rules?"

The speaker is chairman of the business law committee of the State Bar Advisory Group of Continuing Legal Education and recently completed a series of lectures on the new California corporations code. He presently is co-authoring a chapter on corporate mergers in a soon-to-be published book for California attorneys.

To be held in the Brasilia Room I of the Sheraton Newport Hotel, the meeting will commence with cocktails at 11:30 a.m. followed by lunch. For reservations contact Chris Davis, The Bank of California, P.O. Box 54, Santa Ana 92702.

Home Loan Rates Seen Rising Later In Year

A spring boom in demand on mortgage money with resulting pressures to raise interest rates has been forecast by the chief economist for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Donald M. Kaplan, director of research for the federal agency, says savings institutions should expect a drop off in savings inflows this year.

He called last year's low interest rate situation a "one-time phenomenon" where S&Ls received large portions of funds that normally would have been funneled to speculative investments.

"Thrift institutions can expect a drop off of savings inflows that will be quite modest the first half of the year," he said. "But by the second half, the fall off will be much more rapid."

Kaplan forecast the total savings inflow to S&Ls during 1977 will be $48 billion in 1977, down from the $50 billion recorded in 1976.

If his predictions are right, it means buyers can expect interest rates to hold level and then begin to rise later in the year.

At present, Kaplan said, savings and loans are holding a lot of liquid assets "to meet the anticipated demand (for loans) in the spring."

As the credit market begins to tighten, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board economist added, thrift institutions can be expected to reverse actions that discourage savings inflow.

Kaplan also forecast strong demand in 1977 for both new and existing housing.

The seasonally-adjusted rate of construction reached 1.94 million units annual production by December of 1976. Poor performance earlier in the year brought the actual output in 1976 to 1.54 million units.

Kaplan said the high rate of production indicated in the December figures augurs well for 1977's housing output. He forecast 1.8 million new units this year.

He cited both strong demand for housing and easing in the credit markets as two major reasons for his optimistic prediction on housing output.

Home prices are unlikely to experience much moderating pressure during 1977, Kaplan said, even though builders have introduced some lower-priced models in their housing lines.

Diplomatic Issue Called Key To Red China Trade

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) – Unless the United States grants full diplomatic recognition to mainland China, there will never be a large amount of trade between the two nations, according to a British economic consultant.

The consultant, Roland Berger, said the British companies he represents in trade with China are pleased with the situation. "It means we don't have much competition."

In an interview Wednesday prior to a speech before the Portland Committee on Foreign Relations, Berger said China was seeking aerospace equipment, oil drilling rigs, petrochemical apparatus, chemical equipment and transport instrumentation.

He estimated that China produced 80 million tons of oil in 1976, and hopes to produce 180 million tons by 1980. Berger said the figures do not include offshore oil being developed in the South China Sea.

Bond Mart During Week

NEW YORK (AP) – Bond prices turned mixed last week after several weeks of declines.

Corporate bond prices ended the week up ¼ to ½, their first increase in more than a month. The market was rescued from another week of losses by a late-week rally. New issues generally got a cool reception from investors.

Private money market rates were unchanged to lower. Losing ground were Treasury bills, off 7 to 16 basis points, and Fed funds which slipped slightly to 4.58 per cent on Thursday.

Short-term government bonds were down 3/8, intermediates lost 7/8 and long government bond prices dropped 1¼ this week. The government's new 3-year notes auctioned off this week at a 6.62 per cent yield. The new 7-year notes sold at a 7.25 per cent yield.

Fraser Asks Tax Rebate Hike

LANSING, Mich. (AP) – President Carter should increase his proposed tax rebates and target more money to provide jobs, United Auto Workers Vice President Douglas Fraser said Friday.

Fraser said Carter's $31.2 billion, two-year program to stimulate the economy does not go far enough to help taxpayers and provide extra jobs. He said Carter is being too cautious in his proposal.

Fraser, who probably will succeed retiring UAW President Leonard Woodcock, was in Lansing for a meeting of the union's political arm. He said he believes Carter's economic stimulus "is on the low side. He should reassess his decision in light of the energy crisis."

Fraser proposed a one-year shot of $25 billion, with the second year spending level to be decided later. He said the economy could absorb that much stimulus without boosting inflation.

Of the $25 billion, Fraser said, about $16 should be tagged for tax rebates of $75 each. Carter has proposed $50 tax rebates.

Fraser said the lesser amount could be eaten up by higher energy costs due to the cold weather. And he said more money should be put into job development.

"We think greater weight should be put on the jobs program instead of tax cuts," he said. He added that a permanent tax reduction would hamper attempts to reform the tax system and take needed money away from new social programs.

Fireside Fat

Whenever a president goes off in single-minded pursuit of an identity as a "man of the people," beware. Not that the chief executive should march ostentatiously in the opposite direction, such as placing Teutonic guards around the White House as Richard Nixon did, but the self-conscious populism of Jimmy Carter doesn't quite work either. We are well into the Orwellian age, remember, when words and images, put over by political leaders, frequently mean the opposite of their true, historically accepted definitions.

Jody Powell, Mr. Peanut's press secretary, took pains to kill the media's insistent use of "Fireside Chat," Franklin Roosevelt's ingenius means of circumventing Congress, to define the psuedo-event that originated in the White House library last Wednesday night. But not too many pains. Indeed, the Carter people revel in the fatuous comparisons to FDR, Carter even launching his campaign last Labor Day at the Roosevelt retreat in Warm Springs, Ga.

Generally President Carter was applauded for his relaxed way with the teleprompter; he is a "master," they say, of making it seem he communicates one-to-one. The hand gestures were just right; the wearing of the sweater with the necktie. . .blah, blah, blah. He got universal brownie points from the commentators.

Still, we picked up dissonance in the Carter performance, unintentional dissonance on two notes: 1. The president obviously shivered not, as roughly two-thirds of his audience did shiver, the chat having been calculated as hearthside stuff, just an everyday emergency legislation signing afterglow. That was not exactly, and could not have been, sympathy with the people. 2. The substance of the talk, if anybody was interested, was bewildering.

There was every reason to suppose, even as he reassured us of his sacred pledge to keep all his promises, that he has modified his notions of what a government can do. Employment is still foremost (well, almost) in his mind. But there was no more of the Humphrey-Hawkins hogwash about the government reducing joblessness to three or four per cent in three years' time. He sounded the significantly more sensible proposition that industry would hire more people if given tax incentives – a post-inaugural recognition, perhaps, of reality.

Jimmy Carter went further. In his weeks in office, he said, he has learned there are certain things government cannot do. It cannot, for instance, control the weather; it cannot, presto!, ease wintertime miseries. The theme sounds suspiciously familiar, and then you remember Bob Abernethy's KNBC comment that the president may be aping the "era of limitations" rhetoric popularized by Jerry Brown.

That is what we mean by bewildering. Post-Depression American presidents just don't admit there are things they cannot do. Not if they bask conspicuously in FDR's shadow, they don't. And there were just enough references to unity and partnership and sacrifice – the usual statist litany – to touch off a contagion of the willies among libertarians. Carter will prune the federal bureaucracy, saving tax dollars thereby? Prof. Roger Freeman, the author of The Growth of American Government, thinks not.

The much-publicized reduction of Georgia's bureaucracy, behested by Governor Carter, owed more to sleight-of-hand (state expenditures, after the consolidation of departments, actually increased) than to true efficiencies. Writes Professor Freeman: "To merge several – or large numbers – of small government departments into fewer but larger departments enhances their combined clout. It more effectively organizes an army of 'big government' advocates. It is another step toward further growth, not a reduction, in the size of Leviathan."

The Fireside Chats will continue on into his burgeoning administration, vows President Carter. His people have even conceived the plan of chewing the fat with ordinary folks on a nationwide radio talk program. Can you believe it? How do you begin to. . .? How do you select which callers. . .? Who will man the switchboards. . .? Nothing's impossible, the evangelical Carterites wink. We'll see.

Meanwhile, to Peter Drucker's famous principle that government can do only two things successfully (make war and debauch the currency) we may be forced to add a third: It can so perfectly and so brilliantly commit an administration to inaccessibility that it will make that voice at the White House sound like a seive through which all populist sentiment flows. Orwell, where are you?

The TVA And The Snail Darter

The Tennessee Valley Authority, that model of a Depression-era government program which was hailed as a rural energy allocater that private enterprise couldn't match, has run up against some unexpected critics–the environmentalists.

It seems the TVA wants to proceed with a $116 million dam project on the Little Tennessee River which commenced in August 1973. The canoists and sportsmen were the first to complain, because they saw the dam as an industrial onslaught against the pristine wilderness. Lately they have been joined by an icthyologist from the University of Tennessee.

David Plater went for a swim in the Little T one day when a three-inch fish darted in front of his face mask. He literally grabbed the fish in his hand and transporting it back to his laboratory, discovered an unknown species: the snail darter.

It happens that the Endangered Species Act of 1973 says that federal projects may not render species extinct. Thus do government enthusiasms, as put down in statutes, work at cross purposes.

With the snail darter as a weapon (about 5,000 of which are estimated to exist), the Tellico Dam could well be stopped cold. That prospect has prompted Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., to huff, "We're not going to let a little three-inch fish stop us, are we?"

We can sympathize with Senator McClellan's sentiment. After all, how many other worthwhile projects, providing countless jobs and dwellings, have been frustrated because of a few fishes and fossils?

But the issue does not rest there. The dam project originally was conceived as a way for the government, working jointly with the Boeing Corp., to build a small town on the river--surely a distortion of market demand. Boeing since has backed out of the project.

The environmentalists' silly statutory weapon notwithstanding, the hopeful thing about all this is the demonstration that the marketplace and the environment need not be perceived as working in disharmony. That--and the obvious fact that the superannuated TVA has embarked on projects only justified by the law of bureaucracy: to extend itself beyond its original usefulness.

SENSING THE NEWS

The Issue Of Puerto Rico

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Though President Ford has been succeeded by President Carter and the former's statehood for Puerto Rico proposal is now a dead letter, the issue of the island commonwealth's political future won't disappear. Congress and the American people will have to decide what relationship they want to have with Puerto Rico.

Certainly, Mr. Ford's statehood plan was hastily conceived and premature. In its present condition, Puerto Rico isn't suitable as a state. It is a dependent territory, with much of its 3.1 million population collecting welfare and food stamps. The bill for this assistance totals almost $3 billion a year. The American Union has no need of a new state that would be a ward of the nation.

Furthermore, there are marked differences in culture between Puerto Rico and the United States. The Puerto Ricans have a Spanish heritage and use the Spanish language. It's not in the national interest of the United States to add a state that would agitate for bilingualism and biculturalism. The United States has enough problems without adding strife over language and culture. One has only to look at the example of Canada, which is split over the use of the French language, to understand the divisiveness of such a question.

If Puerto Rico is unprepared for statehood now, what of the future? No easy answers present themselves. Greater autonomy isn't desirable at this time, again in view of Puerto Rico's dependence on the taxpayers of the 50 states. The Puerto Ricans can't reasonably expect a veto on federal laws while receiving massive federal assistance.

Puerto Rican independence is equally unacceptable at this time. It is an established fact that dictator Fidel Castro of Cuba is pushing this idea. He hopes to extend the influence of Castroism to Puerto Rico, which has been under U.S. control for 78 years. The United States has important defense facilities in the Caribbean which must be maintained. It would be disastrous if Puerto Rico became an outpost of Communist Cuba.

The situation throughout the Caribbean is increasingly unstable. In Jamaica, the ruling party is moving the country closer to Cuban style communism. Other island countries in the Caribbean, or along its rim, have worsening economies and growing population problems. In a real sense, the Caribbean is a time bomb, ticking away. It is hard to say what can be done about this "bomb," for many of the Caribbean countries aren't viable states.

Under the circumstances, it isn't feasible for the United States to make a quick decision on Puerto Rico. The commonwealth arrangement, which was established in 1951, is probably the best arrangement for the time being. Indeed, it may be the best arrangement for many years. Minor modifications in the commonwealth association with the United States may ease strains while protecting U.S. security interests.

Opponents of preserving the status quo undoubtedly will argue that a go-slow policy will incite terrorists to commit outrages. Unfortunately, terrorism is a reality of our times. Indeed, Puerto Rican terrorists have been active since the post-World War II years when they attempted to assassinate President Truman. The United States must not permit itself to be rushed into premature action, however, out of a fear of terrorist incidents. The answer to the terrorist threat is more effective counter-terrorist police work.

In the meantime, the Puerto Rican situation is one in which thoughtful study of the real issues and problems is the only realist approach.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Taxes And The Kennedy Center

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON – Roger Stevens, lofty head of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, manifestly is a firm believer in the old adage "the early bird gets the worm."

Although the 95th Congress is only a month old and still in process of organizing, he is already busily seeking more federal funds.

That's nothing new.

In the five years the famed center has been operating, no year has passed without Stevens pressuring and lobbying Congress to vote more money to keep the imposing marble edifice solvent and in repair – although it is not a government building.

The center is privately owned and operated. But you would never know it from the millions taxpayers have already poured into it and are continually being beseeched for more.

The urgent need for extensive repairs is the reason for Stevens's latest wangling.

The center badly requires a great deal of renovation of the roof, terraces and driveways due to leaks and erosion. Last year, Stevens put the cost at $3.3 million, but that probably is not enough now.

Continuing deterioration and higher labor and material charges are believed to have hiked the figure to upwards of $4 million.

No End

Congress officially hasn't gotten the bad news yet, but Stevens is industriously laying the groundwork for that.

At a black-tie soiree, attended by Sen. and Mrs. Ted Kennedy, following a glittering performance of "The Nutcracker" ballet in the center's magnificent Opera House, Stevens dolefully bemoaned his difficulty in persuading Congress to fork over.

"It's really strange," he sighed. "People have heard of the Kennedy Center all over the world, but they don't seem to have heard of us on Capitol Hill. I can't even get a leaky roof fixed. The last Congress wouldn't vote the money for that."

That's only Stevens's side of the story.

The other side is that in the closing rush of the 94th Congress last September, the House authorized $3.3 million with virtually no strings. But the Senate balked at that.

Citing the Trustees' sorry management record and that 76.2 per cent of maintenance costs already are under National Park Service jurisdiction, the Senate insisted on that agency bossing the extensive renovations, saying tersely, "The direct appropriation of funds to the Park Service will eliminate overlapping administrative functions and responsibility and expedite the necessary work."

Because of the wide difference between the two chambers and the anxiety of the legislators to rush home to campaign, the measure got lost in the jam and the money wasn't voted.

And that was the end of it – due primarily to Stevens's attempt to get away with what the Senate Public Works Committee bluntly characterized as a boodle grab.

With a new Congress, he has to start all over again and is losing no time doing that. But he would be well advised to change his tune and tactics.

More Red Ink

Reason is that looming forebodingly in the background is a $14.6 million debt the center obviously isn't able to meet.

That's the overdue interest on a $20.4 million loan Congress voted the center 10 years ago for construction of huge underground parking facilities – that theoretically were to finance the loan but have fallen far short of that.

It's only a question of time when Stevens will be pleading with Congress to either cancel this obligation – or do something!

So far the famed cultural center has cost $73 million, of which taxpayers have put up more than $50 million – $23 million outright grant, $20.4 million loan; another $10 million in maintenance and repair outlays.

One thing is certain: There is no end in sight for tapping the public till to keep the place going.

Note: In theatrical and other cultural circles reports abound that the Carter administration is thinking of establishing a cabinet-level "minister of the arts." Stevens, asked about that and the possibility of his getting the appointment, replied coyly, "I've heard about it, but I have no idea who would be selected."

And I Quote

"If there once was a military rationale for a successor manned bomber, this design, the B1, is far more the product of irresistable corporate desires and military dreams. It is to basic manned bomber roles what the Rolls Royce is to basic transportation."

–Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.), urging President Carter to halt production of the controversial strategic bomber.

"We have created an educated class capable of building spaceships or transplanting human organs (but that) has little idea of how the funds that sent them through school were generated. This is worse than ironic – it's tragic."

–Charles Spahr, chairman of Standard Oil of Ohio, charging that college students lack basic understanding of America's free enterprise system.

"If this keeps up, we'll be warmer out here than inside."

'Right-To-Work' Back Again

By TOM ROSE

When F. Ray Marshall, Jimmy Carter's choice for secretary of labor, told the Senator Labor and Public Welfare Committee that he favored repeal of the Right-To-Work Law, he claimed that repeal "would strengthen collective bargaining."

What Mr. Marshall should have said is that repeal of the Right-to-Work Law "would strengthen unions." For there is a vast difference between collective bargaining and unions!

The Right-to-Work Law is the popular name given to Section 14-b of the Taft-Hartley Act of 1947, which amended the National Labor Relations Act of 1935. Section 14-b has always been extremely distasteful to professional labor union managers; but it has widespread support among ordinary working people.

To understand just why professional union organizers dislike the Right-to-Work Law, one has to understand the changes that were brought about the Wagner Act, which is what the N.L.R.A. of 1935 used to be called:

Prior to 1935 labor unions and company managements were on pretty equal bargaining terms. If a union organizer could convince a group of workers voluntarily to join his union and bargain collectively with the employer, they were completely free to do so, and the union started receiving the members' voluntarily-paid union dues. And once the newly organized group presented the employer with a proposed union contract, the employer was also completely free to accept or reject the contract. And if he did accept, only those workers who were members of the union were bound by the contract. In short, voluntary collective bargaining existed before the N.L.R.A. was passed in 1935. Workers who, for reasons of their own, saw no advantage in union representation and who thus refused to join the union, were left free to bargain individually as they had before.

Now, why might a worker not want to join a union? For diverse reasons: Some people have religious convictions against joining. Others, because they are more productive than the average, are able to negotiate a higher wage if they bargain individually. Still others might resist joining simply because they cherish a rugged independence. In short, there are as many reasons not to join any organization as there are reasons for everyone not to buy the same brand of toothpaste.

In a society where people's individual freedom and self-responsibility is valued and protected, the question of whether to join or not to join, or to buy or not to buy, would be settled by focusing on good salesmanship and voluntary persuasion. But in a society where the people lose their understanding of self-responsible freedom, sellers of goods and services are often able to enlist the aid of government to assist them in the selling of their wares. This is what happened in 1935 during the pro-labor Roosevelt administration.

The Roosevelt administration took the attitude that the national government should follow a policy of actively stimulating the growth of labor unions. So, Congress passed the Wagner Act (N.L.R.A.) in 1935. This law balanced the scales so much against employers that union membership shot upward. The unbalancing was effected by tying the employer's hands in labor relations while leaving the unions free. One section of the N.L.R.A. made non-union workers captive riders to any contract the union made. In short, it prohibited non-union workers from negotiating an employment contract on their own; non-members were forced to abide by the contract made by the union, even though they preferred not to.

It didn't take long for union members to take the attitude, "Why should we pay for keeping the union going when non-members also get the benefits we bargain for?" (They conveniently overlooked the fact that the non-members were captive riders. Instead, union members started calling non-members "free riders.") Thus, pressure for the "union shop" grew – pressure which forced a worker to join up or quit his job.

The unfairness of a worker being forced to join a union against his wishes, even though he is already forced by law to abide by a contract arrived at by a union he doesn't want to represent him, is what brought about passage of the Taft-Hartley Act. Section 14-b didn't restore free bargaining, but it does at least prevent absolute tyranny by unions. If Section 14-b is ever repealed, so should that part of the N.L.R.A. that makes workers captive riders be repealed. A truly free collective bargaining would be very healthy for both workers and unions in the long run.

Two Hats Too Much

The Anaheim Bulletin reported on Friday, Jan. 28, that Anaheim City Redevelopment and Placentia Unified School District reach accord - ($1 Million Solution). "City council, wearing both the council hat and the one designating it the Redevelopment Agency, Thursday agreed that certain facilities in the PUSD are a benefit to the redevelopment project and it further declared there was no 'reasonable' method of funding for these facilities other than Anaheim redevelopment funds," according to the story.

"The agency then approved an agreement for payment with the district. One lump payment will be made within 90 days for $1,018,500 as a compensation for "financial burden or detriment" caused to the district by the allocation of funds to the redevelopment agency from district tax levies."

"In addition to this, the district will receive $473,448 per year until 1992."

As a citizen of the City of Anaheim, within the PUSD area, I have two major questions for the Anaheim City Council and the Trustees of the PUSD; in addition to some additional concerns:

1. What effect, if any, will this agreement have on the PUSD property tax rate which is currently $4.9676 per $100 assessed valuation?

2. What benefits to the City of Anaheim residents living outside PUSD area could possibly warrant payment of $1,018,500 within 90 days and upwards of $7,575,168 over the next 16 years?

As a candiate for the PUSD Board of Education scheduled for March 8, I was in attendance at the PUSD board meeting held Jan. 24. Agenda item 396 was listed as, "Consider agreement with Anaheim Redevelopment Agency and take appropriate action." The Board placed a hold on the item for consideration at the executive session. I asked John Press, PUSD board president, and John Balducci, board vice president, what the issues were in this matter, and that I might wish to make a statement. Their answer was that they couldn't discuss the matter since the PUSD attorney was there and that no final decision would likely occur that evening.

For the record, Mr. Press's term of office expires following the election on March 8. Mr. Bladucci's term of office also expires at that time; however he is running for re-election. PUSD apparently ratified the agreement on Thursday at a special meeting of the trustees?

City of Anaheim Councilman Don Roth cast the single dissenting vote on the 4-1 adoption of the agreement. I commend Councilman Roth for failing to vote accord. If the Anaheim City Redevelopment Agency is a duly constituted agency with taxing powers under the State of California a potential court test by PUSD should not have threatened this agency. On the other hand if PUSD was correct in their position perhaps the settlement was too small?

The current five members of the PUSD board two years ago successfully blocked a small group of Anaheim citizens from placing a proposed de-annexation of PUSD territory on the ballot for disposition by the electors. At that time the Anaheim City Council voted a resolution in support of the Anaheim residents. If elected to the PUSD Board, I suggest that this entire matter of over $8,5000,000 be reviewed fully by the appropriate legal authority. There is entirely too much at stake for residents and property owners in each affected area to be decided by two groups of 5 elected officials in each organization.

Questions Sincerity

Unfortunately for America the "Great Equivocator" (Jimmy Carter) finally kept one of his promises. If I were one of those Americans who voted for Mr. Carter because of his conservative line, I would certainly ask myself why his number one priority after being inaugurated was to reward the "liberals" by bringing their sons home from wherever they "bugged-out" to avoid serving in Vietnam.

Over the past several years I have read, watched and listened to the "line" of numerous draft evaders. These experiences have prompted me to seriously question just how many of these men were true "conscientious objectors" ....sincerely opposed to war rather than just opposed to wars where communism might be threatened. It is my studied opinion that the vast majority of these men were either sympathetic to communist causes or just plain cowards.

If, during all the years that the war was waged, just one of these men had objected to North Vietnam's part in the war, particularly considering the fact that the North attacked the South and that the entire land war was fought in the South, I might give some credence to their claims, or if any of these "departees" had complained that he didn't want to fight in a war where our political leadership seemed determined to assure our defeat, I could have great sympathy for their position.

Unfortunately, it appears that very few of the men who will receive the benefits of Mr. Carter's "pay-off" are what most Americans would consider an asset to our country. To the contrary, there are very few men whom I would consider less deserving of the many benefits enjoyed by living in America... benefits which more people on earth would fight for and sacrifice almost anything to gain.

Still Too Loud

In Reference To "LANE: Sound Went Up For Commercials," Jan. 20, my name is Lane. A friend clipped the head, knowing that I am involved in the commercials business, knowing that I get a little steamed everytime somebody complains about the "conspiracy between advertisers and broadcasters" to turn the sound up for the ads and down for the entertainment.

Not so! Here it is in brief. All sound recording is done with the aid of a DB (decibel) meter which reads volume and/or sound intensity. During a play or drama, a movie, "All In The Family," or "Quincy," or "The Waltons," people speak like people speak, with hills and valleys of volume. Archie yells, Quincy gets excited and John-Boy sometimes speaks softly.

The DB meter is set to accomodate a sound of naturalness. People are inclined to turn their controls up to hear the quiet portions and they can "put up" with the sudden upsurges of Jack Klugman or Mike Stivik. But most of our speech is average to quiet.

Ah-hah! When commercials are recorded, they are usually done at maximum level, so that they will be heard and absorbed. Not shouted, but kept at an "average" that does not include low passages that will be lost, or noisy portions that will require the engineer to "pot down" the overall presentation. So you do get more words that are "hearable" and less that are low-level in a commercial than in a drama.

The sound does not go up for commercials! And anybody who thinks it does probably thinks the communists are in back of it, the Kremlin shot Kennedy and "they" are out to get us.

Identity Problem

Re: Anne Fickes' letter (Sunday, Jan. 30) in which she takes strong objection to being addressed as 'Ms." She obviously is looking only for substantiation or her querulous position, since she asks how many agree with her.

I do not share the insecurities she reveals, and certainly do not agree with her curious analogy that to be addressed by "Ms." is like a neutured cat! Does she mean to imply that, without the security blanket the designation "Mrs." seems to give her, she perceives that society would view her as sexless, devalued? Are her feelings of self-worth dependent upon clinging to a label which is a vestige of a double standard by which women have historically been considered their husbands' property?

We are wives to our husbands only, in very personal and private relationships. If some women can relate to the world only as adjuncts to their husbands, so be it. But many of us prefer to be identified in terms of our own separate and distinct identities, without reference continually in terms of our marital status. It doesn't follow that we love our husbands less when we learn to value ourselves more.

Queer World

"Bay area up to it's ears in no water" – was a headline on a news item recently. An up-side-down statement, it seemed to me but then like so many other subtle excursions from reality that appear in the news today, I suppose I just do not understand the finer shades of operation in the fields of business, politics, etc.

The news item reported that 72 inches (six feet) of rainfall would be required to bring the reservoirs in Marin County to normal, while concurrently Orange County "experts" are hell-bent to build a sewer outfall that will discharge 25 to 40 million gallons of water into the ocean each day and planning to build hundreds more luxury houses with swim-pools that will need millions of gallons more water from the north. Crazy, you say, but there it is.

Then there is that puzzling matter about the lotteries to satisfy the demands of the hordes of clamoring buyers for expensive homes. But if such a real demand exists, why do these companies take full-page ads in expensive news media to attract more and more buyers? Millions of dollars must be tacked on to the cost of those homes, by such ads. Crazy? Or should I ring up a psychiatrist?

In the political forum the news of that great American patriot, Congressman Bobby Sikes of Florida, recently stripped of chairmanship of the military spending committee. A friend of his said – "He didn't do nothin' wrong" - he just did not understand that if he owned Lockheed stock there could be conflict when he pushed for more Lockheed appropriations, etc. He is a great gun man. Recommended that every woman buy a pistol and take shootin' lessons and just plug any wrongdoer. Sort of practice Texas Law, where you roll your own as you go along.

Like I say, what I really must do is get into some courses on politics, business, etc. There are so many things that confuse me. Like all that smoke about our Orange County Supervisor with those trick campaign funding operations and large computer contracts. There is that old saying about "Where there is smoke there is fire." But maybe that is not true anymore. Kind of a fireless smoke! Oh, well!

Give-Away

Time magazine named Jimmy Carter "Man of the Year" for 1976. In the accompanying interview the new President was asked what he hoped to accomplish first after taking office. His very direct reply was: "I think the Panama treaty ought to be resolved quite rapidly."

A few weeks later, before his inauguration, the President met with fifty Congressional leaders for a conference on foreign policy. He announced that negotiations to complete a new canal treaty would be resumed immediately after he became President, and that the treaty could be expected by June. When some of the Congressmen cautioned that public opposition to such a treaty would have to be softened, Carter mentioned the possibility of a "fireside chat" to build support for the plan.

What is planned, of course, is the turning over of the Panama Canal to the Marxist dictatorship which is now running Panama into the ground. A preliminary agreement to accomplish the transfer was signed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Panama's Juan Tack on February 7, 1974. Negotiations to complete the transaction have been going on ever since, with our side being represented by Ellsworth Bunker, one of the pack of losers who arranged our defeat in Vietnam.

No matter what President Carter or others want us to believe, the Panama Canal Zone – including the canal – is sovereign territory of the United States. A reading of the 1903 Hay-Bunau-Varilla Treaty with Panama makes this perfectly clear. So, too, does the 1907 Supreme Court Wilson v. Shaw decision and that statement of President Theodore Roosevelt during his visit to Panama on Nov. 16, 1910: "... you have given us the necessary sovereignty and jurisdiction over the part of your country occupied by the canal." Any honest survey of the pertinent documents will show that we bought and paid for the land, built the canal, and have never reneged on any part of our treaty obligations.

When the canal was finally opened in 1914, it represented a tremendous triumph for American ingenuity, know-how, scientific capability, and sheer determination. The opposition then had been disease, weather, terrain, and even occasional political turmoil. Now, after operating this most strategic of the world's waterways for over sixty years, our interests in the canal face a new enemy – sellout. And our new President seems determined to complete the deal.

If this treachery is not stopped, its most obvious beneficiary will be General Omar Torrijos, the tin-pot Marxist who seized power from Panama's legally elected government in 1968. He makes no bones about hating the United States, loving Fidel Castro, surrounding himself with avowed Communists, and permitting neither free elections nor opposition of any kind. Officials of our own Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs have even named the Torrijos government as part of an international heroin smuggling ring aimed at the youth of the United States. Yet he is favored by America's officials.

The loser, should the canal end up in the hands of Torrijos, will be the United States. Seventy per cent of the ships which use the canal either begin or end their voyages in our country. To believe that Torrijos and his pack of thugs would allow us to continue to use it is to strain credulity beyond reason.

It would be easy for President Carter to announce suspension of canal negotiations. He has made it clear that he wants to hear from the American people. Here's a good opportunity for all of us to write what may be the first letter we have ever addressed to: The President, Washington, D.C. 20500.

Tax Petition

Only ten days left, to sign "Citizens Petition To Lower Property Taxes." This state-wide effort is sponsored by United Organization of Taxpayers, Howard Jarvis, chairman.

The 5,000 Laguna Hills voters who have signed to date, represent about 10 per cent of the voting power of Laguna Hills. Letters returned with signed petitions indicate that many voters are unaware of the petitions or have not been asked to sign. More than 10,000 petitions have been sent to concerned citizens who have requested them. Seven hundred and twenty full sheets have been sent to Santa Ana for processing and delivery to the Registrar of Voters for Orange County.

All voters can help in this community effort to get petitions signed, so this initiative measure will appear on next years state-wide ballots. Property tax relief can not be expected from state legislators, simply because, they are responsible for procedures now being used, they like it this way. They are in no mood to change a tax system that has given them so much money to spend.

If we do nothing to lower our taxes and rents, someone else will raise them for us. Call (714) 586-4162 and just say, I want Jarvis' petitions, and you will receive them promptly by mail. Get 21 voter signatures (3 petitions full) in ten days and rush back to Bill Sharp at 3208-A Via Buena Vista, Laguna Hills, 92653. I have a good supply of petitions.

Last call for voter signatures, time is short. Feb. 20 will be too late.

No Universal Signs

The front-page story bylined by Larry Welborn under "Mental Patient Not Retarded - He's Deaf," in issue, raises some fundamental questions. Of immediate concern, what is the news value inherent in such alleged misdiagnosis of one Albert Valdez of Santa Ana?

There is nothing new about a deaf person being misdiagnosed as retarded, aphasic, or autistic when later diagnosis indicated "pure" deafness. This has happened in California and elsewhere for decades, and longer.

About seven years ago I sat on a statewide committee of parents and educators and heard almost monthly of similar tales. Most of us agreed that proper diagnosis of handicapped children is extremely difficult but absolutely necessary. I think we fought the good fight then and came away with at least one accomplishment: the now widely known California Master Plan for Special Education, which documents far-reaching parents' rights in education diagnosis of their children.

But back to Valdez. What did this man's parents do with him during the nine years of his life before he "was taken from the family home by state officials" and reportedly "committed" to Fairview State Hospital? Did his parents cease to communicate with him for nine years? Also, was Albert "committed" without parental consent?

Welborn states that "signing" is "the universal language" of deaf people. This statement is erroneous and misleading. There is no "universal language" for deaf persons, either in this country or anywhere else in the world. Ameslan, the American form of sign language, has its roots firmly in the English language.

To deny that English is the basis of Ameslan in suggesting that deaf people have a language all of their own is to insult those practitioners of American sign language who have worked hard over the years to make this mode of expression compatible with English vocabulary and syntax. Also, to suggest that signing is the universal language of the deaf is to imply that those deaf persons in America and abroad who do not sign in expressing their native language, are in fact incapable of communicating at all.

I know of many American children and adults born with deafness, and who were not deafened like Valdez, who are quite competent in communicating verbally in English, both with speech and writing. I know of no deaf person who can write a letter in sign language, read a newspaper published daily in sign language, or go to a library and expect to find books and magazines published in this "universal language." Sign language is a supplement to English, German, Japanese, etc. It does not replace any language, and it surely does not replace speech for the deaf.

If Valdez has some usable hearing, why in heaven's name doesn't somebody teach him to communicate orally and aurally? A simple fraction of normal hearing can be pushed to spectacular heights in terms of speech capability even among the congenitally deaf, which Valdez presumably is not since he lost his hearing after birth.

Job Defined

Never thought I'd be defending a politician, much less one named Brown, but Scott Gardner's letter of Jan 30 prompts me to do just that.

Jerry Brown was not hired to carry out the will of the people of California, he was hired to protect and preserve the Constitution and laws of this state. He was not elected to be the mindless sycophant to the will of the majority!

History is replete with examples of how single individuals stood against the abuse and emotion-laden attacks of the majority, and later proved, as men of good conscience, that they were right.

If we don't want a man of conscience to lead and serve us, why don't we just install a computer in the governor's office and let it crank our answers which will satisfy a slack-jawed citizenry? Is this what we want - a robot, or some kind of walking zombie as governor? I don't think so.

Don't let this letter be interpreted to give carte blanche to other polititians to do what they wish in the name of conscience. Their job, like Brown's is still within the narrow confines of defending our rights, our laws and our constitution.

American Property

Should we give away our rights to the Panama Canal? Would you give the home you own back to the man who merely sold you the land and further, does he have the right to ask for it back?

This is a crucial time for America for many reasons, one of the most important being, should we retain ownership of the Panama Canal? The Hay-Bunau-Varilla Treaty of November 18,1903, with Panama, which gave the United Satates "in perpetuity" the "use, occupation and control" of a zone ten miles wide for the "construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection" of the Canal, and added the words: "The Republic of Panama grants to the United States all the rights, power and authority within the Zone...which the United States would possess if it were the sovereign of the territory...to the entire exclusion of the exercise by the Republic of Panama of any such sovereign rights, power or authority."

Columbia was compensated in the amount of twenty-five million dollars for territory that had been theirs prior to a Panamanian "revolution" which was largely a paper affair managed by Bunau-Varilla, a Frenchman, William Nelson Cromwell, a New York lawyer and President Theodore Roosevelt.

William C. Gorgas, later Surgeon General of the United States, rid Panama of yellow fever so the land could safely be inhabited.

Since the Canal has been in operation, we have paid the Panamanian government millions from the profits. We have provided jobs for their people. Without the United States, there would be no Panama. The territory would still be part of Columbia.

Newsmen and politicians know the facts but they obviously think the American public do not and won't take the time to find out the truth. One wonders why they would want something that would be so detrimental to their own country. Perhaps only they know the answer to that. For Mr. & Mrs. John Q. Public, who do love their country, it would be wise to let your Congressmen know your feelings. It isn't too late, but it will be if they sign a new treaty.

Forgotten Vets

In signing the amnesty bill Mr. Carter may have brought joy to some people, but to thousands of hospitalized veterans he did nothing but remind them more vividly of their condition. Therefore, I do hope you can find space in your paper for this letter.

Thousands of American veterans spent a lonely holiday season in a VA hospital, military hospital, or convalescent home. They could not go home to celebrate because they were severely wounded while in the service of our country.

It's hard to keep their spirit up. We know, because we've tried time and time again.

These disabled veterans need the same conveniences we have - TV, radios, clothes, writing paper, pens, pencils, envelopes, combs, coin purses, cards, games, toilet articles, etc. Canteen books may be purchased and the veteran can use these canteen books to purchase their needs in the VA Canteen.

Please send you tax deductible donation today. Remember those unfortunate veterans too many Americans have forgotten. Please send your generous contribution to: Hospital Chairman, 29th District, The American Legion, P.O. Box 2185, Buena Park, Ca 90620.

It is only because of the continued support we receive that we are able to help the disabeled veteran. We do not recieve any government assistance and have no investments or trusts funds for financial support.

What's happened to our law enforcement agencies? Five years ago the family two doors from me called an officer and told him I had stood in front of their home and used vile and profane language. The officer took me into custody, I gave bond and stood trial. Neighbors on both sides of the street testified that I did not disturb the peace, nor did I leave my front yard and I was acquitted by a jury.

But just a few days ago a 70-year-old lady was assaulted and battered in the TLC institution in Lutheran Church, corner 15th and Parton, in the presence of reliable witnesses. A complaint was properly made, and Mr. Hicks, the district attorney, refused to prosecute the case. As he explained it, "in the interest of justice."

Could it be that he is so preoccupied with his 170 million dollar damage suit in which he is charged with violating the law, that he does not have time to protect the timid, helpless, elderly widows? Or just what is transpiring?

Going Broke

Here are some rather disturbing facts about the management of our City of Westminster, taken directly from the "Report on Financial Statements – All Funds," year ended June 30, 1976, as prepared by Seidman and Seidman, Certified Public Accounts and the city budget report for the current year, and other public information:

The water department has over $4 million retained in excess profits, while it claimed only $700,000 after it transferred $280,000 to the City's general fund. The city is overcharging the public for water and the water rates should be reduced. This is what was promised to the citizens when the water bonds were voted in 1965 and hasn't been done yet.

The city budget projections for this past year were off by about $2 million. This is a pretty big error.

The city doesn't know whether $600,000 paid into the city's pension fund is an overpayment or an underpayment. An actuary could easily solve this problem and properly determine the city's obligation.

As of June 30, 1976, the city was a defendant in lawsuits totaling $16 million, not counting those that were settled during the year. Currently, the lawsuits now total over $26 million. This is an increase of $10 million in 6 months! Because of this, the city's liability insurance premiums were $.25 million per year as of Nov. 1976, and as of Jan. 1977, were raised to $.4 million, with the first $50,000 per incident coverage cancelled, forcing the city to self-insure that part of its liabilities.

The city mainains no records of its general fixed assets. Under the present arrangement, we (the city and the citizens) have no way of knowing what the city owns. This is the third year this has been in the audit report, with no action taken to resolve the omission.

If we continue to do things like this, there is a good possibility that our city will go broke, just like New York City!

Get With It

I think President Carter better do the things he promised before he was elected. He promises those things so he will be elected. All presidents do that and I think that they should quit lying about that and I'm only eight years old and I'm sick of it.

If we don't get an honest president, prices will go up so high that everybody in the United States will be poor and that's what I mean by get with it, so GET WITH IT.

Stop Meddling

Isn't it ironic? Big Brother caused the natural gas shortage and he now hopes to get rid of the problem he brought about in the first place. When politicians stop meddling, interfering and controlling, private enterprise will be able to furnish supplies.

The Wrinkled Apple

By JENKIN LLOYD JONES

I drive across the George Washington Bridge, turn south on Amsterdam Avenue and lock the car doors.

Sunday plus a slanting snowstorm has emptied the streets of traffic and the sidewalks of pedestrians. Paradoxically, it has made the pauses at the red lights a little more hazardous. At 138th there is a crowd surrounding three blue-flashing police cars. Contrary to my reporter instincts, I don't stop to ask.

The old brownstone houses that once knew starched children and cockaded coachmen are chipped and smeared. The locust trees along the parkings, the clanging trolleys, the fat Irish cops with their funny gray helmets are long gone.

On 125th Street, I turn east. Half a century ago you came off the subways or elevateds here and took the crosstown car to the Weehawken ferries. Or, if you worked above the Eighties, you made your Westchester and Connecticut commuter trains at 125th.

For a brief hour in the '20s and '30s it was fashionable to come up to catch Duke Ellington and Cab Calloway at the Cotton Club. Now even the cabs don't want to come to 125th Street.

I turn south once more on Park Avenue, proceeding slowly along the Chinese wall that holds the raised railroad tracks.

Once as you went north out of town on the Twentieth Century or the Commodore Vanderbilt or the Merchants Limited you watched the central European and Italian women leaning on their elbows at their windows. These are gone.

Many of the old tenements have vanished, too, replaced by teeming high-rise "slum clearance" apartment blocks with subsidized rentals and trash-strewn hallways. Others are windowless and boarded, marked with spray-can graffiti advertising the Royal Dukes, the Fangs, the 116th Rattlers.

Suddenly the English language disappears. "Cerveza bien fria," "Viva Puerto Rico Libre," "Arriba Jimmy Carter."

At 96th the railroad plunges into the hill and instantly one climbs into a world of parked boulevard and doormen and marble foyers. Perhaps no other street in the world changes as suddenly as Park Avenue.

Midtown, in spite of the stinking cesspool that has seeped across Times Square, remains New York's glory. There's a splendid Andrew Wyeth show at the Metropolitan. Dangerous Central Park is beautiful under the snow-laden boughs. The great Fifth Avenue shops retain their special airs. God, in the form of St. Patrick's Cathedral, and Mammon, as Rockefeller Center, admire each other from across the street.

Might as well do the rest of the island. Down Broadway, once a magic word to ambitious young America. Herald Square with Macy's. Madison Square, bereft of its sports palace. Union Square, home of fevered oratory and demonstrations. Stanford White's Washington Arch and the beginning of Greenwich Village, still Bohemian, still quaint, but with a cutting edge now by reason of the agony involved in raising the price of the next fix.

And so to 165-year-old City Hall which has seen more than 40 thieves, to Trinity Church and its distinguished graveyard looking into Wall Street (another confrontation of God and Mammon), and finally to the old Dutch Battery and Manhattan's end.

Is New York City in decay? Yes. In few American cities are so many things worse and so few things better than they were 30 years ago.

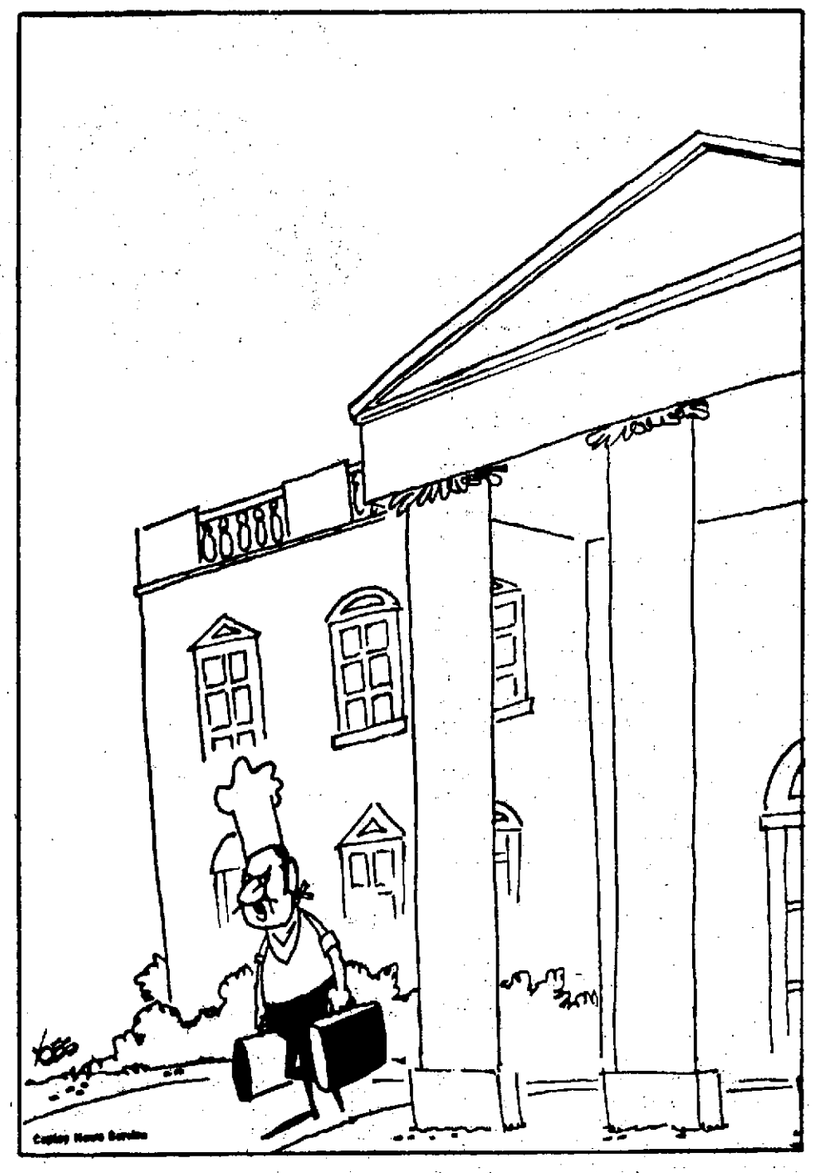
Can it regain its glory? Probably not. The reasons that made it are no longer there.

The great ocean liners had an economic imperative for a common landing place. New York City had the harbor and the railroads. Now you can fly direct from Europe to a dozen American cities.

The garment industry needed cheap, eager hands fresh from Ellis Island. Hands are no longer cheap. Skills can be found in Dallas.

Banking and finance needed personal exchanges and a proximity which runners could cover. Now the teletype and the on-line computer mean that anywhere is at Broad and Wall.

Yesterday the New York area was America's manufacturing center. But by 1980 the population center will have crossed the Mississippi. As fuel costs rise, the Sun Belt beckons.



But, most significant, has been the erosion of human values. Jungle streets. Jungle schools. A way of life that snarls and spits. Middle-class blacks are joining the exodus.

A California professor, J.L. Jonsson, has written of New York City:

"There is no fallen greatness there, only pathetic exhaustion. To rally our resources and exert our energies to paint this dying face and force air into these collapsed lungs is more than futile – it is an offense to nature which has decreed that death is a part of life and not to be denied."

It's an idea.

'BLACK-EYED PEAS AND GRITS WITH BARBEQUE SAUCE IS TOO MUCH'

ACCURACY IN MEDIA

Gas Shortage Not Phony

By REED IRVINE

WASHINGTON – "As early as Nov. 22, 1974, we warned that the natural gas industry was conspiring to create a phony 'shortage'...We suggested in subsequent columns that plenty of gas was available to heat homes and run factories."

So said Jack Anderson and Les Whitten in their syndicated column on Dec. 18, 1975.

"Are the big energy companies creating a phony 'shortage' in order to force Congress to deregulate the price of natural gas? To the nation as a whole...the question is crucial."

So said James Nathan Miller in an article in Reader's Digest in August 1975. Mr. Miller thought that the evidence that the industry was understating its reserves of natural gas was strong, and he urged his readers to write their congressmen urging them to oppose decontrol of natural gas prices until the questions about the accuracy of the reserve figures could be settled "once and for all."

"In 1954 the federal government began regulating wellhead prices of natural gas destined for interstate commerce. .. In its shortsighted efforts to protect the consumer, the government has focused on the price of gas in the short term and has ignored the consumer's stake in adequate supplies for the long term. Now the long term has arrived."

So said Mobil Oil in an editorial that it paid to have run in many newspapers on Sept. 21, 1972.

As factories and schools were shutting down because of the shortage of natural gas, and as people in the East and Midwest were shivering with their thermostats turned down to levels previously undreamed of, Mobil Oil recently bought two full pages in a number of newspapers to reprint warnings about the forthcoming gas shortage that it paid newspapers to print from 1972 to 1976.

The gas shortage is upon us, and it is neither phony nor funny. There is not any great mystery about it. A Federal Power Commission chart published in The New York Times on Dec. 10, 1973, showed domestic production of natural gas declining after 1975 with demand continuing to rise. The Times pointed out then that we were consuming gas at about twice the rate of new discoveries. From 1956 to 1971, the number of natural gas wells drilled dropped by more than 50 per cent, and exploratory drilling declined at the same rate. Large potential reserves were thought to exist in coastal waters, but environmentalists were strongly opposed to all offshore drilling.

Shirley Scheibla, associate editor of Barron's, told a conference sponsored by Accuracy in Media last November that the news media had largely missed the story of how price controls on oil and natural gas had helped discourage production of these needed sources of energy. Mrs. Scheibla pointed out that it had taken five years to get the leasing program for offshore oil and gas fields underway. She noted that the media had focused on the environmentalists' opposition to offshore drilling.

The clash between those who warned of the gas shortage and those who denied it reflects a sharp difference in economic thinking. Those who believe in the law of supply and demand had no trouble seeing that gas supplies could not possibly keep up with demand as long as the federal government artificially depressed the price. When energy in the form of natural gas is priced at almost half the cost of the same amount of energy in the form of heating oil, demand for gas is bound to be stimulated. At the same time, its production is bound to be discouraged. There had to be a day of reckoning.

Some reporters became so interested in possible mistakes in the estimation of natural gas reserves that they neglected the basic economic forces at work. Politicians may demagogically ignore the law of supply and demand to curry favor with the voters. It is up to the media to remind them and the voters of the harsh realities.

INSIDE LABOR

Terror, Inc.

by VICTOR RIESEL

WASHINGTON – Recently an electronics plant in Ciudad Juarez, just south of the border down Mexico way, was hijacked. Four Marxist-Leninists, three heavily-armed men with automatic weapons accompanied by a woman comrade, raced through the door onto the production floor. They waved their guns. They delivered a get-rid-of-your-oppressors oration to hundreds of workers. And they shot the angry 24-year-old maintenance manager right in the forehead. Dead. The Sept. 23 Communist League orders had been carried out.

Can't happen here – north of the border? Yes. It can. Like the killer bees, the self-hypnotic Marxist-Leninist urban guerrilla terrorism is seeping stateside.

Just the other day, the New World Liberation Front, a neo-revolutionary umbrella coalition, threatened the lives of several members of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors (the city council).

Later the property of one supervisor was shot at. I know another one of the supervisors, Quentin Kopp. He's tough. He's well informed. He'll take no nonsense. Has much expertise on labor.

But the urban guerrillas maraud and bomb in the night. And not only in California where the NWLF is based in the San Francisco Bay area — but as far east as Boston.

This red front, hooked into something called the Red Guerrilla Family, has a derring-do of its own. Though notorious in the Bay area, the NWLF's story hasn't been told much elsewhere. The front has at least three "combat units." It runs "couriers" who call newspapers, contact broadcast stations, send threatening messages to grand juries, and talk on the record as spokespersons.

For example, some months ago a Suffolk County, Mass., courthouse was bombed. At least 22 persons were injured. Some seriously.

"Credit" for the brutal attack on a crowded courthouse was claimed by the "Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit." Actually "claim of credit" isn't an apt description. The unit rushed eagerly to the press so it could run the glory road in the national network of terror communes.

Newspeople contacted the New World Liberation Front in California. Certainly there was an avowed spokesman – the 38-year-old Jacques Rogiers talked willingly enough over the long distance telephone. This "Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit" was one of the Liberation Front's three "regular combat units," he disclosed defiantly.

This delighted fellow brashly blamed courthouse authorities for the mass injuries. The officials had refused to heed two telephone warnings to clear the building, Rogiers charged. He was satisfied the urban guerrilla army had fought the good Marxist-Leninist fight, no doubt.

The combat units to which he so enthusiastically referred are the Emiliano Zapata Unit (which operated a bomb factory until the FBI seized it) and the Lucio Cabanas Unit (which has bomb specialists of its own). There are others. You can believe it. They use ad hoc names. With them, happiness is a warm bomb.

This isn't just braggadocio. This New World Liberation Front may sound like amateurish off-off Broadway revolutionary experimental theater to those unfamiliar with the bombings of utilities and banks in the San Francisco area.

But last Sunday (Jan. 23) Jacques Rogiers was arrested by the police there. He was "busted" on charges of allegedly carrying threatening messages from the NWLF to some members of the city's board of supervisors. Board member Quentin Kopp doesn't quite see this as an off-off Broadway bit of theatrics.

The New World Liberation Front has claimed credit for more than 32 bombings in California alone. Two of these hit Pacific Gas and Electric Co. plants in Roseville and Sausalito. In the East there have been mysterious threats to a big food chain and a world renowned corporation. An Eastern Airlines plane and a National Guard armory in Boston have been bombed. Some guerrillas have been indicted. So it has been happening "here."

These urban "combat" guerrilla "units" roam the land. They get "hopped up" with amateurish interpretations of Marx, Plekhanov and old anti-czarist revolutionists who developed bomb-throwing into the first effective art of their trade. Then the heady, mostly young American guerrillas go out and plant their "stuff."

Bomb factories have been "busted" from Richmond, Calif., to Brooklyn, N.Y. But not before their operatives did heavy damage.

No one really knows how many of the 7,500 bombs which have exploded in the United States in the past four years were planted by the Liberation Front and its units, the Weather Underground and other outfits such as the Red Guerrilla Family. But scores have been traced to the Marxist-Leninist cells. Damage, vast. Cost runs well over $60 million. That's conservative. Scores have been injured. Yet there is a drive here in the capital to demoralize and dissolve government internal intelligence operations.

Who says it can't happen here?

LAND AND LAW

The Livermore Quandary

By BERNARD SIEGAN

When the U.S. Supreme Court in 1926, in the landmark case of Euclid v. Ambler Co., declared that zoning was constitutional, it gave great discretion to localities to decide how privately owned land within their boundaries could be used. But this opinion recognized "the possibility of cases where the general public interest would so far outweigh the interest of the municipality that the municipality would not be allowed to stand in the way."

These words appear in the Euclid opinion and have been the subject of pages and pages of legal writing in which judges and commentators have tried to explain what the high court meant. Although often ignored, the quoted language has remained a threat to cities imposing highly exclusionary zoning regulations.

A situation in point is presented by a case decided Dec. 17, 1976, by the California Supreme Court concerning the city of Livermore (pop. 40,000), located about 35 miles East of San Francisco. The voters of that city had enacted by initiative an ordinance prohibiting issuance of additional building permits until local educational, sewage disposal and water supply facilities were sufficient to comply with certain enumerated standards. Contractors, subdividers and others interested in residential construction in Livermore sued to have the ordinance declared unconstitutional.

They argued, among other things, that the ordinance provided no timetable by which the public facilities were to be made adequate and that therefore the ban on construction could continue indefinitely. If the present residents wanted no new occupants, the builders complained, all they need do was delay improving the facilities.

The California high court sent the case back to the trial court to learn more facts about these restrictions and their impact on the region in which Livermore is located. In so doing, the court set forth rules on zoning based on those famous words of the Euclid case. Both the tone and import of the opinion suggest that the California court has taken a turn on zoning different from what many authorities had thought to be its position. By this decision, California has joined the growing number of state courts that view with considerable concern and suspicion zoning laws that operate to exclude housing.

The California opinion observes that the Livermore ordinance significantly affects the interests of non-residents who are not represented in the city council and cannot vote in a city initiative . Said the court:

"In past cases, when discussing ordinances without significant effect beyond the municipal boundaries, we have been content to assume that the ordinance need only reasonably relate to the welfare of the enacting municipality and its residents. But municipalities are not isolated islands remote from the needs and problems of the area in which they are located; thus an ordinance, superficially reasonable from the limited viewpoint of the municipality, may be disclosed as unreasonable when viewed from a larger perspective.

"These considerations impel us to the conclusion that the proper constitutional test... inquires whether the ordinance reasonably relates to the welfare of those whom it significantly affects If its impact is limited to the city boundaries, the inquiry may be limited accordingly; if as alleged here, the ordinance may strongly influence the supply and distribution of housing for an entire metropolitan region, judicial inquiry must consider the welfare of that region."

The decision instructed courts to determine whether a challenged zoning ordinance represents a reasonable accomodation between the competing interests of existing residents who want to avoid the burdens of growth and outsiders searching for a new and more comfortable place to live. The burden rests with those attacking the ordinance to present the evidence and documentation necessary to substantiate their case.

Builders will welcome these rules as giving them a greater opportunity to overcome restrictive zoning laws. The problem is that the required analysis is very complicated. It is an undertaking that would seriously tax the wisdom of Solomon. The California court has clearly revealed its awareness of the competing interests that are involved in today's zoning controversies.

It has failed to comprehend, however, that the impersonal institution of the private marketplace, largely through the use of restrictive covenants, is more suited and less fallible than the human mind in making the required determinations. The covenants will protect the integrity and exclusivity of one's own subdivision or neighborhood without interfering with the needs and desires of those who want to settle elsewhere in the locality. This is the kind of balance that prevails in non-zoned Houston, Texas and accomodates the inclusionary as well as exclusionary demands of urban society

And I Quote

"In the short term, we want a fully democratic regime in which all political parties. . .can express themselves and in which the workers have the right to organize themselves. . .In the long term, we want to start the process of structural economic change."

–Santiago Carillo, Spanish Communist party secretary, affirming his party's willingness to work within the Spanish democratic system.

"Any charge that I have acted improperly with respect to classified documents or White House papers is totally false."

–Theodore Sorensen, defending charges that he misused classified material as a member of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

The Coming Kremlin Test

By RALPH KAPLAN

Many of the newly created independent African states have tried to avoid communism and sought to establish a kind of "socialism" as is known in Yugoslavia. On the other hand, Moscow looks upon socialism, European-style, as a camouflaged form of capitalism and seeks to use it in Africa to establish true Marxism.

Not unlike Red China, Moscow believes in armed conflicts, uprisings, and warfare to make the African continent more pliable to the Kremlin doctrine. Many of the editorials in the Soviet press encourage "immediate black rule" and an Izvestiya article of last November called the talks between U.S., Britain, South Africa, Rhodesia on the one hand and the liberation movements on the other hand "phoney and contrived" and the Soviet magazine New Times revealed "the road to peace in Africa lay through national liberation and not the labyrinth of deals on surrender terms."

There is a goodly portion of Soviet frustration also manifested in that actually the Kremlin has no direct share in the settlement of Southern African problems.

To have to compete with Mainland China on the African continent is not a very comfortable prospect for the Soviets as it produces another area in which the two major communist powers do combat.

The Soviet discomfiture, by itself, does not reduce Western problems on the African scene and the current ten-day visit to Africa by Andrew Young, the new U.S. ambassador to the UN, proves that point. Young is trying to cement new and stronger ties with many of the African nations and establish an American position there to prove President Carter's international "stamina."

By the way, next week, Secretary of State Cyrus R.Vance will visit the Middle East on a similar mission.

The Soviet Union also has been busily – quoting from the Economist – "battening down the hatches." 1977 will see a change not only in Soviet-Africa, but also in Soviet-East European relations.

There has been a strong crackdown in Czechoslovakia and other actions are intended to make the Soviet Union look better for next June's Belgrade Conference at which the Helsinki Agreement will be discussed.

Optimistically seen, Czechoslovakia may emerge, permitting some kind of political opposition, as already exists in Poland. But then Poland has had a strong opposition which cannot be put down very easily by any Soviet action.

Putting the elements of African socialism and Czechoslovakian-Polish communism together, a rather confused picture emerges:

(1) Strong Soviet pressures in Southern Africa.

(2) Strong Catholic and labor influence in Poland.

(3) The creation of a strong Czechoslovakian opposition to the current subservience by its government.

It will be in the next 90 days that the Carter administration will have to prove its mettle vis-a-vis the Kremlin.

Dad's Smoking May Threaten Offspring's Life

BONN, West Germany (AP) – Children whose fathers smoke at least 10 cigarettes a day run a higher risk of dying at birth than babies of nonsmokers, German researchers say.

If the father is a heavy smoker, there is also a greater risk that the child will be born deformed, the German Resarch Society said it found in an eight-year study. It said there were indications that male sperm was damaged by excessive use of nicotine.

The government-subsidized group, whose 40 members represent universities, scientific academies and research institutes, said 4 per cent of the children of nonsmoking mothers and smoking fathers died just before, during or shortly after birth, compared with 2.9 per cent when both parents were nonsmokers.

The institute also said it had studied 14,774 women and found it unlikely that infant death at or near birth was increased by "passive smoking" by the expectant mother breathing her husband's smoke.

Researchers found that in extreme cases of morning sickness, odds might favor the birth of a girl. The ratio for the entire study group was 107 boys to 100 girls, but the ratio for women complaining of intense nausea was 93 boys to 100 girls, the report said.

A spokesman for the society said that although U.S. researchers had suspected a link between a father's smoking and the health of his offspring, the German study provided the first conclusive evidence on the matter.

The society's study began in 1964 after a rash of birth defects were blamed on mothers' taking the tranquilizer Thalidomide during pregnancy.

Among other conclusions of the report:

– Morning sickness may be a good sign for pregnant women. "Without these complaints, miscarriages are frequent."

– Excessive consumption of coffee by mothers often caused underweight newborn children as did smoking by mothers. Tea and soft drinks had no negative effects.

– A woman's drinking alcohol could lead to premature birth of her baby.

Chemist Finds Way To Test Salt In Blood

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) – A research chemist who developed the scale for acidity and alkalinity called pH says he has developed a method of measuring salt levels in the blood for easier detection of cancer and other diseases.

"The body closely controls salt levels," said Roger Bates of the University of Florida. "If the levels are too high or too low, it may be an indication of a disease or even a serious malfunction in some organ of the body."

For years, laboratory instruments have been able to detect chemical imbalances in the blood, says Bates. He adds he now has developed a specific reference standard so that physicians and laboratory technicians can accurately measure and identify abnormalities.

They also can confirm suspected diseases.

In the past, test results from different laboratories often could not be compared because there was no standard for their measurements, he said.

Bates began his research on salt levels when working at the National Bureau of Standards, where he developed the scale for measuring acidity or alkalinity called the pH. Bates' pH standards have been accepted worldwide in both clinical and industrial labs.

"It is necessary now that similar scales for salt levels be accepted so that physicians can check the accuracy of the lab work," he said.

As a result of his study, cystic fibrosis in infants can be diagnosed easily and accurately through salt level measurements, he said. Similarly, by measuring the calcium level in the blood, doctors can detect disorders in bone formation and blood clotting.

"The calcium level also plays a role in such conditions as cancer, some types of mental disturbances and liver disease," said Bates, who is continuing his research.

Best-Selling Author Says Self-Knowledge Key To Happiness

BY CATHY LAWHON
Register Staff Writer

The Bible teaches "Love thy neighbor as thyself." But if you don't love thyself, how can you be happy and fulfilled in loving thy neighbors – or even loving someone as close as a husband?

This is the question that prompted Betty Coble of Westminster, to write "Woman – Aware and Choosing." The book, which has been Broadman Publishing Company's best seller for a year and a half, has spawned classes throughout the country and in nine foreign countries.

Mrs. Coble is the wife of Harold H. Coble, pastor of Mid-Cities Baptist Church in Westminster, to whom the book is dedicated. She credits her 30 years of successful marriage to open communication and "active submission," a concept she has developed with its basis in scripture.

To Mrs. Coble, marriage is a true partnership. Wives should not be totally dependent or totally independent, according to the author, but couples should have a true commitment to each other.

"The man is assigned leadership by God for a marriage," she said, "and that's a heavy responsibility, but he chooses it when he chooses marriage. A woman, by choice also, becomes a wife and the Bible says the wife will be submissive to her husband."

Mrs. Coble's definition of submissmon, however, differs from the commonly held notion of the meek, quiet-as-a-mouse housewife whose husband's word is law.

"To submit," she said, "you have to have something to give. Women have thoughts, feelings and opinions and they should tell their husbands how they feel. Marriage means you trust the person enough to build a life with them. And that building needs the female side of the picture."

She admitted that her view of wifely submission has drawn criticism from more literal interpreters of the Bible. But she asserts that the Bible teaches personhood and therefore, wives should not deny their personhood.

"There has to be a bottom line, though," she said, "where the husband has the final decision. You give your thoughts, not as a command to tell your husband what to do, but to turn loose your thoughts and let him know honestly where you stand. And a lot of men can't handle it. They feel threatened."

Threatened, unhappy and anxious marriages are not all that uncommon Mrs. Coble said. Men and women tend to feel threatened in marriage and in all phases of daily living, because they have not fulfilled what she calls the five basic needs in their lives.

As outlined in her book, the needs are 1. establishing an identity, 2. establishing life goals, 3. learning to communicate that identity and those goals, 4. giving and receiving love and 5. success and fulfillment.

A positive self image and identity is the basis for establishing a happy marriage and positive relationships, the author related. And this identity must be more than just the labels of daughter, wife, mother, etc.

She said that while labels are fine for identifying the "package" of a person, it is how a woman defines those labels that determines who she is.

"If a woman continues to perform as a good daughter, wife, mother, teacher, social worker or whatever, to satisfy others, she will end up a bitter, critical, unhappy little old lady that absolutely no one wants to be around. Labels are great if the person behind them is doing her own defining of her roles and making her own choices as she goes," Mrs. Coble said.

Women have many choices these days. And that, said Mrs. Coble, is one of the reasons they have become frustrated with their roles. They don't know which choices to make.

Another reason for unhappiness in marriages is that many couples are so family and child oriented that they don't have a good relationship between themselves. The marriage is the most important thing, Mrs. Coble said, and a happy family life should be based on a happy marriage, not vice versa.

Communication breakdowns also contribute to unhappy marriages, she said. "A woman expects the man to be the leader, and so she withholds vital information about herself from him. Also, if a man considers himself the leader, he will often withhold vital information from his wife – not tell her the decisions he has arrived at or how he arrived at them."

Despite all the talk about happy and unhappy marriages, the main thrust of "Woman – Aware and Choosing" is not to save marriages, but to save people, because people are the ingredients of marriage.

This is one area where Mrs. Coble's thinking differs from such philosophies as "Fascinating Womanhood," promoted by Helen Andelin, and "Total Woman" by Marabel Morgan. She does not agree with these totally fascinating women who maintain that it is a woman's responsibility to boost her husband's self-esteem.

"I think that is game playing and manipulative," she said. "In my classes I ask women to list 20 things about themselves that they really like. And many, by the end of the 10-week course, still only have three or four things on their list."

She said that it is vital that a woman have her own self-esteem and let her husband develop his from within himself.

"A woman is not responsible for a marriage," she said. "She is only responsible for the wife's part of it."

Her classes stress this. There are currently about 20 Woman Aware classes being taught in Orange County, although Mrs. Coble only teaches two of them. She has developed work sheets – one set for single women, another for married – and uses three books in the class.

Her husband is writing a similar book from the man's point of view, due for publication Nov. 1. Together, husband and wife plan a collaborative effort, writing about marriage.

Mrs. Coble says the need for marital instruction is increasing. "The bride enters marriage with scant knowledge, one-time counseling and very poor patterns to follow," she related. "There is not a single endeavor a woman enters into in which she has as little real information as she does for marriage, and the worth and identity of a wife are being questioned on every hand today."

"I see so many women hurting," Mrs. Coble said, "and they feel they have to get out and prove themselves. They use the women's rights movement as the basis for getting out and taking on another label, when they don't even know their basic selves yet."

Mrs. Coble speaks from experience: "I went into marriage with the same fantasies that many women have. And pretty soon I found that I had some questions to answer. So I began thinking and studying and putting myself together. I established my own identity, sense of self-worth and self-esteem."

But it didn't occur to her to share this learning process with other women until she realized that most of what is being said about marriage these days is negative.

"Unhappy women speak up," she said. "The happy ones are so busy with activities, their families and friends that they often don't have time to speak up." Mrs. Coble encourages her students to give one positive side of marriage for every complaint they hear.

Besides teaching classes, Mrs. Coble is in demand as a speaker at seminars, workshops and women's meetings. She also has ideas for additional projects including the co-authored book with her husband on marriage and a book on how to love and be loved.

Although others may consider her so, Mrs. Coble said she does not consider herself an expert in these fields. "My education has been piecemeal," she said, "but I try to keep up with my reading and know what other people are saying on these subjects."

Teaching classes, speaking at seminars and writing books keeps the author very busy, but she said she has "always been busy" as a pastor's wife and mother of three children, now all grown and married. "I'm just busy with different things now," she added.

Woman Aware classes are held periodically in the fall, winter and spring, usually in fellowship halls of local churches.

Although Mrs. Coble used the Bible and its teachings as a basis for her book, she said that women of all religions have taken and benefitted from the class.

Information about classes and reading materials is available through Ministry of Marriage, P.O. Box 2188, Westminster, Calif.

Even Marriage Can't Mend Smoker Vs. Non-Smoker War

I witnessed a wedding last summer that focused attention on a real problem: smokers vs. non-smokers.

The smokers (seated at the left of the altar) and the non-smokers (seated at the right of the altar) heard the minister ask, "Do you, Debbie, promise to love and cherish from this day forward, for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health, so long as Richard inhales?" She took a deep breath and answered, "I will."

It made you wonder. Could a militant non-smoker, wearing a Thank You For Not Smoking headband with a veil attached, find happiness with a man with a brown stain on his index finger? Only time would tell.

Last week, I ran into Debbie. She jumped up, clicked her heels in mid-air and said, "I quit! It's a matter of life and breath."

"I know that, Debbie," I smiled. "So, how is Richard?"

"Who knows?" she sighed. "The only time I see him is on elevators and in doctors' offices where all smoking is prohibited. Everyplace else has smoking and non-smoking areas and we are split up."

"Is that any kind of life for two young people who are just married?"

"We knew there would be hardships. When we went on a vacation last year, I saw him on the plane briefly when he went to use the restroom. Sometimes, if the smoke isn't too thick, I wave to him in restaurants where I'm seated across the room."

"Are you saying you are never together?"

"That's right. When we go to a movie, he sits in the smoking section and I sit in the non-smoking section. We never talk in the lobby of a theater anymore. I can't stand the smoke. Since he's in a smoker's car pool, I ride to work with a non-smoker's group. We used to go to the grocery together, but now he has to stay outside if he wants to light up. Our entire house is sectioned off into smoking and non-smoking areas."

"The problem is going to get worse," I said. "More and more, our society is being asked to make a choice between smoking and non-smoking."

"I know," sighed Debbie. "I don't know what we'll do when the baby comes. I'd like Richard to see it, but the hospital is definitely for non-smokers."

"The baby!" I gasped. "How did you ever get pregnant in the first place?"

She shrugged. "I've narrowed it down to the doctor's office and elevators."

NOW TAX DEDUCTIBLE

IRS Gives Facelifts Their Own Uplift

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) – The facelift, an operation once mentioned in whispers and attempted only by daring movie stars, is becoming as respectable as a trip to the dentist, says a leading Hollywood surgeon.

If you don't believe him, ask the U.S. government.

The Internal Revenue Service, of all places, recently issued a ruling to answer an apparently burning question of many citizens: Is a facelift tax deductible?

The answer is, "Yes," placing cosmetic surgery within the federal definition of medical care "for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body."

Implicitly, the ruling also covers improvements such as breast enlargements, nose jobs, belly reduction and ear flattening.

"Our inquiries on the subject have skyrocketed since the revenue ruling was issued," says Charles Dougherty of the Los Angeles IRS office.

For the past two or three years, he said, his office has felt that a facelift was deductible. But there was no written ruling.

"This really nails it down," said Beverly Hills tax attorney Bob Forst, who has confronted the question with some of his clients. Now, he predicts, more people may use the deduction.

"It's a fair conclusion that if it is publicized, more taxpayers will be taking advantage of it," said Forst.

Even before the ruling, facelifts had been gaining middle-class popularity.

"It's no longer just for movie stars and the rich," says Dr. Robert A. Franklyn. "It's for everybody. And now it's probably our only tax deductible luxury.

"Plastic surgery is becoming as common as kids getting their teeth straightened."

Franklyn, celebrated inventor of the breast implant operation in the 1950s, has been a sculptor of famous faces and figures for more than 30 years. Business, he says, has never been so lively.

"We are in the age of the youth and beauty culture, and people are more liberated," he says. "They take more pride in their appearance than they did 30 or 40 years ago."

There are no figures available on the actual numbers of facelifts and other cosmetic surgery performed in the United States, says a spokesman for the 1,700-member American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, headquartered in Chicago. But he says, "It's everybody's impression that it's increasing."

He said the capitals of cosmetic surgery are Los Angeles, Miami and New York City but that doctors in places as remote as Billings, Mont., are getting more requests for facelifts.

"It's a nationwide phenomenon," he said.

Franklyn says one contributing factor is that a facelift is a much easier procedure these days.

"Most of our surgery now is simple and fast, which appeals to the public," says Franklyn.

With the use of local anaesthetic, Franklyn claims he can do a facelift in 30 minutes, a breast enlargement in nine minutes and a nose reduction in 10 to 12 minutes.

A few years ago, a facelift took a minimum of four hours on the operating table and several days of hospitalization. Franklyn, who operates at his "Beauty Pavilion" on Hollywood's busy Sunset Strip, sends patients home the same day.

"Theoretically, a girl can come in flatchested at 9 a.m. and leave with a brand new chest at 10 o'clock," says Franklyn. In practice, patients are kept under observation for several hours before being released.

The ease of such operations, says Franklyn, has encouraged patients to begin alterations early. Many women in their 30s have undergone Franklyn's "mini-lift," which involves a small incision at the scalp line to pick up drooping cheeks. The operation, which Franklyn calls "a little pick-me-up," is most popular among actresses, he says, "female stars who don't look as good at 37 as they did at 25."

Other plastic surgeons confirmed that new methods have sliced large amounts of time off cosmetic operations to the patient's benefit. Quick surgery, they say, results in less swelling and discoloration, thus lessening recovery time.

But other time estimates were higher than Franklyn's speed record.

Dr. Richard J. Cavanaugh of Beverly Hills says he still allows about two hours for a full facelift – longer if it's for a man. "One out of every 10 facelifts is done on a man," he said, but men's beards complicate the procedure.

Cavanaugh sends patients from his clinic to a private convalescent hospital for a day or two "to make sure they get adequate care."

A few doctors said they still prefer working at a hospital. But the trend is definitely toward European-style private clinics which offer a more glamorous atmosphere.

Franklyn's circular salon was designed by United Nations architect Oscar Neimeyer and features a skylight in the operating room.

Cavanaugh is preparing to open a new beauty spa at Pala Mesa near San Diego which incorporates tennis, golf, weight reduction and cosmetic surgery.

"Some of the fear that patients have will be played down," says Cavanaugh. "They will be in a less sterile atmosphere where they can hear birds singing."

However, the clinics' big lure is secrecy.

Unlike a hospital, there is no chance that a gall bladder patient will spot her neighbor having a facelift.

Obviously, one element of cosmetic surgery has not changed – few patients want the world to know they've been altered. The exception was comedienne Phyllis Diller who bragged about her makeover.

"It's still a hush-hush thing," says Cavanaugh. Franklyn, who works on many celebrities, says, "Nobody seems to tell anything because they feel people will look at them as artificial. Once a movie star becomes identifiable, they want to keep their features just as they are. We have to keep them young but not scramble their features."

Hoag Hospital Group Plans Costume Dance

A "St. Valentine's Day Masquerade Ball" is planned by the Sandpipers, a Hoag Hospital support group, to be held Saturday at the Registry Hotel, Newport Beach.

The costume dinner-dance will begin at 7 p.m. with cocktails, and a four-course dinner with complimentary wine will be served at 8 p.m.

Highlighting the evening's Roaring Twenties theme, will be the Walt Tolleson Band and Show. The band plays music from the 1920s to the 1970s with a little "flirty thirties" and "fabulous fifties" thrown in. Costume changes to coordinate with each musical era complete the show.

Proceeds from the event will go to the Donna Duffield Memorial Radiation Therapy Center at Hoag Hospital. Proceeds from last year's ball enabled the center to purchase a computer system which speeds dosage planning for cancer patients.

The Sandpipers raise funds through ticket sales, a memo-directory book and private donations. This year, contributors of $1,000 or more will be honored as "Diamond Club" members. These members will receive special recognition in the memo-directory book and have their names inscribed on the hospital's Donor Wall.

Reservations and additional information may be obtained from Mrs. Patrick Connealy of Newport Beach.

Spring Forecast Is Bright, Bold

Clean, bright, bold colors come on strong in contemporary fashion for spring and summer, but the soft romantics will have their place, too.

Snappy brights for the season include poppy red, true emerald, fuchsia, bright gold and jade, purple and brilliant blue. Clearly accenting the scene will be fresh white – in everything from footwear and jewelry to the new pant and skirt variety explosion, according to Lee Hogan Cass, Fashion director for the Broadway department stores.

"Islands in the Sun" is the theme of new store boutiques featuring the south sea island influence that embodies the spring brights and whites into the ethnic native prints of the Caribbean, Tahiti, Hawaii, Indochina and the Polynesian Islands. Natural accessories such as shells, combs for the hair and flowers wrap up a totally new native look. And the pareau, the versatile native wrap that can be worn tied as a skirt, bare-shouldered top, hip scarf or head scarf dominate this island look.

Competing with white for top billing is gold, and the rush is on! Gilded emphasis will be placed on jewelry, knit caps, lurex sweaters, belts, handbags and sandals. "It's a great touch when teamed with the whites – either with a bold flair or subtle touch," says Mrs. Cass.

The romantic look, introduced in the fall, returns as lightened and refined peasant dressing. Soft blousons, bare shoulders, corselets, defined waistlines, pretty lace and embroidery grace daytime and evening view. Gingham and tablecloth checks along with American ethnic are updated into dresses, tailored shirts and bare-shouldered tops.

And pleating enters the picture to further soften the silhouette in shirts, tunics, tube tops and the slim trousers. Knife, crystal and accordion pleats fan out the look.

Spring and summer shoppers will have a field day in the skirt and pant market. Skirts are divided, pleated, slim or very full and generally at or below the knee. Pants bloom into full Bermuda or short, short styling and continue the slim trend. When paired with the full-blown tops – blousons, tunics, shirts, short-sleeved, full-sleeved or sleeveless – that are worn out and over and belted, sashed or collared, the effect is another major silhouette change.

Terry cloth, familiar among the bath set for years, takes off as a refreshing new fabric for '77. Terry appears in everything from pants to shorts and from tube tops to new sweatshirts.

Shoes are opened up on high slender heels or a minimal heel or wedge. New looks in the ever-popular espadrille include open heels or toes complimented by soft ties. Bare strippy sandals and soft clutch handbags in every size add to spring fashion excitement.

For the younger set, the children's fashion outlook follows a similar pattern with brightly-colored, geared-for-action wear. Sweatshirts, t-tops and striped polo shirts, white shorts and drawstring pants, jumpshorts (as a new twist on the jumpsuit) and bare shoulders for sunny fun highlight the scene.

Dressed-up young gentlemen revel in suits with vests, while young misses look pretty as a picture dressed in eyelet embroidery or charming gingham peasantry.

PEASANT LIMITATIONS

Peasant blouses are charming but not, alas, on full-bosomed women. Such women are better off in classic tailored tops that don't accentuate their blessings.

PREVIEW — Gold accents with white are on the fashion horizon for Spring in the Qiana overblouse, above, shown with white pleated skirt. South sea island fabrics made up in traditional styles include the sundress, right, and off-shoulder crop top with mini-skirt, far right. The skirt can also be worn as a tube top. INTERIOR DESIGN

Gold Furnishings Can Give A Touch Of Class To Antiseptic-White Decor

By SHIRLEY FAIR

Dear Shirley Fair: We have moved into our first home. The house needs work done in every room; and I hope you can help me avoid a lot of costly mistakes.

All the walls and ceilings in the house are white. The flooring is white tile and all the counter tops are white, as is the plush carpeting throughout the house.

The living room sliding door is draped to the floor in a white and cream open weave fabric. This fabric was also used in the dining room. The other living room windows have white shutters.

Our living room contains a sofa and love seat in a white, gold and antique gold floral. Wood pieces include two end tables, one coffee table, a TV and a stereo. I have made a long gold macrame hanging next to the shuttered windows. We have one gold, fall scene painting over the sofa with a gold leaf frame. We have two lamps with white bases and white shades with gold braid. Over the stereo we have three plant pictures in gold frames. The other touches are a couple of brass planters.

The dining room set is oblong, contemporary and oak. The six chairs are covered in a very wide wale corduroy in a rich gold. We would like to use paper to add color, but don't know which walls and what design to use. Also we had thought of using gold-toned mirror on the far dining room wall with some type of glass shelving for crystal. What can you suggest?

We would also like to do the guest room and bath. The only furniture that must stay is a piano and a gold-rust and green plaid hide-a-bed. The window is shuttered. How can we change the hospital look of these rooms?

Carol Montgomery

Dear Carol: If you wish, you can do the whole house in gold and white, but you would have to bring in much more gold.

Mirror the wall in the dining room with an antique gold vein mirror, and wallpaper the other walls with a wide gold and white stripe. With your white carpet and gold corduroy on the chairs, this should look very nice. Use a large centerpiece on the dining table with a brass or gold ceramic container filled with gold and white dried flowers.

The living room needs color also. But with a sofa and love seat in a gold and white floral, it's difficult to tell you what type of paper to use. I think it would be better if you left the walls white and changed the drapery treatment to a homespun or contemporary looking sheer with gold linen overdraperies tied back. The white shutters on white walls will be too cold.

Use lots of pictures framed with gold mats on the remaining wall areas, and toss plain gold pillows in the corners of the sofas. If you need a pair of chairs, I would use plain gold – this will look best on the white carpet and against the white walls.

Wallpaper all walls in the guest bedroom and bath. If you can find a geometric design that will go with your plaid sofa, use it. Otherwise, you will have to select a gold and white floral with matching fabric. Use this wallpaper on all the walls and recover the hide-a-bed with matching quilted fabric. The white shutters will be fine with the wallpaper.

You can bring in a third color by using the basic plan I gave you and adding the third color, which can be dark brown, green or a dark blue. If you do this, add the third color to the wall coverings. For instance, the wallpaper in the dining room would be white, gold and brown. The dried flowers would be white, gold and brown.

Questions for this column may be mailed to Shirley Fair, Box 1514, Whittier 90603.

BEAUTY TODAY

Be Pretty Again, Fashion Dictates

Editor's Note: Orange County cosmetologist Steve Eisenbeiss will answer beauty questions mailed to The Register, Box 11626, Santa Ana 92711.
By STEVE EISENBEISS

It's fashionable to be pretty! That's a switch. Every facet of fashion is feminine. Hair is soft and curly or wavy. Make-up is soft, natural and sensuous for day and evening. Clothing is ladylike and the classic dress is making its comeback. No need to look funky, kooky, way-out or masculine — the trend is towards total femininity. Refreshing, isn't it?

The natural look in make-up glows with health and vitality. Blend shades of peach as a base. Warm tones surround the eye in peach and tawny neutrals. Cheek colors blend and complement the bone structure for a glowing appearance. Wear rusty, natural shades for lips, lightly glossed.

Scarlet and rosy pinks have returned for a very romantic look in make-up. Rosy cheeks, soft pink glossy lips and clear, wide-open eyes with a hint of color close to the lash line combine to create the "pretty" face.

To create your clear, open-eyed look use a soft lip pencil at the crease to give warm depth.

Apply the cream highlight next to the brow, the soft pink or peach shade is placed next to the lashes. Blend center depth color with the shade close to the lashes for an easy transition of color. For more depth and emphasis leave the crease darker if desired.

PEACHY KEEN – Natural looking make-up glows with health and vitality. Peach foundation, rosy cheeks, soft pink lips and wide-open eyes with a hint of color close to the lash line combine to create the 'pretty' face.

Liner is not used on the top eyelid, but soft pencil is smudged under the lower lashes to enlarge the eye in a natural way.

Apply mascara to the lash tips and a small amount to the lower lashes. Heavy lashes are not the desired effect, keep them light and airy.

Cheek color is applied high on the cheekbone for a flushed appearance. Use pink or peach to complement your eye and lip shades, and your own natural skin tone, of course.

Line the lips with the same lip pencil used for the eyes. Blend the warm tones of the chosen lipstick with the pencil. Add a little gloss if you like.

The look is pretty, natural and airy. Try it for a new look to go along with your new scoop hairdo.

STRICTLY FOR DADS

How Do You Rate As A Lover?

By CHARLIE SHEDD

The best thing a father can do for his children is to love their mother well. Play the record again, Sam. You too, John and Harry and Tom. Ditto for all Bobs, Jims, Donalds, Daves and a guy name Charlie. We've said it often in "Strictly For Dads." And we'll say it again and again and again and forever.

Here's a questionnaire I've used in seminars on fathering. Grade yourself A, B, C, D, F. Maybe if you're like I am, you need to save face, so let's allow "I" for incomplete. For the really brave souls, those whose marriage can take it, how about giving the lady a chance to grade it, too. Then compare notes.

Use A, B, C, D, F scoring:

1) Our marriage over-all rates---.

2) In the art of verbal praise I grade myself---.

3) Communication-wise I rate our marriage---.

A. I think I'm the kind of husband a wife could come to with any problem Yes---No---.

B. As a listener, I grade myself---.

C. I could tell my wife anything. Yes---No---.

D. When we don't like something going on between us, we clam up---, blow up---, speak up in love---.

4) I take my wife out alone weekly--- Now and then--- seldom--- never---

5) Sex-wise I rate our marriage---.

6) Check one of the following:

My wife and I pray together: daily---, several times weekly---, seldom---, never---, often---.

(Dr. Shedd's new book, "Smart Dads I Know," is a helpful collection of advice and insight on family matters. Dr. Shedd presents 40 dads – and their solutions to the problems which face parents. An ideal gift for fathers. This cloth-bound book is only $4.95. Send to: SMART DADS, P.O. Box 2218, Mission, Kansas 66201.)

OUR CHILDREN

Gifted Children Can Be Well Balanced, Too

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Q. When a child is gifted, does that necessarily mean he should be hard to get along with, not interested in sports, or maybe even sickly?

If that is all true then our son can't possibly be gifted. We think he is very smart (his teachers do too), but he is also easygoing, sportsminded and healthy.

Is it possible for a youngster to be that all-around capable and, at the same time, bright?

A. Yes, it is. In fact, studies of gifted children (including the long-range research by Dr. L.M. Terman) indicate that in general they are above average in many traits that can be measured.

Not all of them are, of course. Many of us know a gifted child who is difficult to live with or who has health or adjustment problems.

However, the majority of bright children rate high in other qualities in addition to their intelligence.

Letters may be sent to Our Children, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column as space permits.

The gifted child or the slow learner. Send stamped return envelope to Dr. Abraham, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, Ariz. 85252, for complete list.

DEAR MOTHER EARTH:

Gynura – The Pretty Purple Passion Plant

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

Dear Readers: We've received many letters requesting specific information on individual plants, so here we go, one at a time through the plants, sharing all pertinent information. You will want to clip these columns as we'll be introducing you to some new potential plant friends, as well as reintroducing you to some old favorities.

GYNURA OR PURPLE PASSION. Everyone enjoys houseplants with color and personality and Gynura certainly fits the bill. The purple hairs covering the leaves give it a velvety appearance (it's also called purple velvet), which makes it extremely popular. Gynura needs very bright indirect light; without it the purple fades and the plant becomes leggy and unattractive.

Needless to say, frequent pinching back is vital during the growth period. Keep the soil uniformly damp. The purple velvet loves humidity but, because of the hairlike nature of the leaves, it doesn't hold up to frequent misting. The best place for this plant is...you guessed it...above the kitchen sink.

Gynura produces puny orange blossoms periodically. They really aren't true flowers, but plant lovers are thrilled with delight when anything even resembling a bloom or flower appears, and this will produce something other than just leaves. The flowers have a peculiar aroma, so if you smell something odd, check to see if your plant is in bloom before you accuse anyone of anything! Gynura originally comes from Southeast Asia. They are relatively easy to grow and easy to propagate by cuttings. Happy growing!

(If you have any questions to ask DEAR MOTHER EARTH, send them in care of this paper. As many as possible will be used in this column.)

How Do You Explain Divorce To Your Children?

By DARRELL SIFFORD
Knight News Wire

When I ended my marriage of 22 years, I sat with my older son, who then was 17, and tried to explain what was happening why I was moving out.

But I was crying so hard that I couldn't get the words to come. Finally I blurted: "Jay, no matter what, I love you and I always will."

He's a big kid – 6-4 – and he looked at me and said: "Daddy, if you love me, why are you leaving?"

It was a question I couldn't answer to his satisfaction – or mine. Divorced friends have told me they didn't like their answers either.

Is there an answer kids can understand – and accept?

Dr. Arlyn Miller, psychologist and divorced mother of two: "We may think separation and divorce will take our children by surprise, but they're usually aware it's coming. In most cases I'd say the children know – before the parents – that the marriage isn't working and is going to end. Kids are very sensitive, they're tuned in to the bad vibrations between mother and father – even if the parents think they're keeping their problems hidden.

"Even so, verbalizing to them that the marriage is ending comes as a shock. What your son asked – if you love me, why are you leaving – is a question every child of divorce has, whether he asks it out loud or not.

"There is no simple answer. Try to be as honest as you can, let the child know that you're not leaving because of him, that the problem is between you and his mother. You might say: 'I'm not leaving because I don't love you – and I wouldn't stay because I do love you.'

"Try to encourage the children to get their feelings out in the open – so their anger won't fester. The child may say: 'I'm really mad at you. How can you do this to us?' And an answer might be: 'I know you're mad. I'm mad, too.'

"Older children usually are better to roll with the punches. But they need love, support and reassurance as much as younger children. It's not an easy situation to handle to anybody's satisfaction. It never will be easy."

Dr. Miller was married 24 years before her divorce 3-1/2 years ago. At that time her daughter was 19, her son 21. She now is in private psychological practice and has offices in Philadelphia and Haddonfield, N.J.

QUESTION: Dr. Miller, is anger a normal first reaction from a child when told his parents are separating?

ANSWER: I've found three distinct phases through which most children of divorce pass. First they're mad – because their lives have been messed up. Part of the anger may come from their feeling that parents have torn up their value system and are forcing them to find another value system for themselves.

All our married lives we've told our children – either by what we said or what we did – that marriage is for keeps, that this is the way life was meant to be lived. We've probably expressed sorrow for the couple down the street whose marriage collapsed. But now we're separating and in effect telling our children: "Hey, forget all that stuff I told you about marriage. We're now playing under new rules."

Q. What are the other reactions you see in children?

A. After anger there'll be sadness, grieving over the loss of the departing parent and the breakup of the family unit.

After that will come fear. I see this as a common dynamic in all children regardless of age – whether they're 2 or 22. I saw it in my own children. There is the fear, either at a conscious or unconscious level, that something may happen to the remaining parent – that parent will leave, too, or get sick or die – and then the children will be left alone.

Q. Do these things pass and are the children then left with no permanent scars?

A. Most people weather the trauma. But there are plenty of kids and adults who never are able to deal with crisis and they can be scarred unless they get professional help.

Sometimes parents separate legally and physically but never separate emotionally. They tend to keep the children in between them – for years. If the mother has the kids and they want bicycles, she may say: "I'd be happy to get them for you – if your father would send us the money."

She's using her anger to pass along to the children the idea that their father is a louse.

Q. Isn't it normal for hurting people to want to pass along their hurt?

A. There's a period of time in which people need to express their anger, yes. Maybe this is for three to six months or even a year. But sometimes I find this goes on for two or three years. Both parents may be remarried but they're still arguing over visitation. They're still emotionally involved and using the children to foster this.

I know my daughter had a rocky time after her father left – and I had a lot to do with it. I felt rejected and I included her in my rejection. I never said: "He left me – and you, too." But I was very angry and I'm sure this message came through, that she'd been rejected, too.

Q. Are children of divorce more likely, as adults, to get divorced than children from families where the parents stayed together?

A. There's no current evidence that indicates this. I think a lot depends on what the marriage was like before the separation.

I would say that divorces are highest among children from broken homes, where problems never got worked out. A messed-up home can be one in which the parents stay together – as well as get divorced.

Popularity Of Facelifts On The Rise

The 58-year-old doctor said his most clandestine encounter was with a TV star who wanted her breasts enlarged with implants of silicone.

"Her manager and press agent came in several times and said they would have to make special arrangements so no one knew she was coming. They swore all the nurses to secrecy. I finally operated on her at midnight on a Sunday," Franklyn recalls.

Others have gone to greater lengths for secrecy. "I've had people engage me to go with them outside the country to operate."

Although he does facelifts and breast implants on "ordinary housewives," Franklyn sees cosmetic surgery as most essential for those in show business and politics – "the personality businesses."

"These people can't afford to grow old gracelessly," says Franklyn. "If you're old in show business, you're out of a job unless you're a character actor. In politics, well, let's just say that one fellow might be President of the United States if he'd gotten a facelift." He said he was referring to Ronald Reagan.

Safety Seminar

A four-part safety seminar will be televised on Cablevision channel 3 Feb. 15-18. All shows are scheduled from 7:30-8 p.m.

Gregory Pezzetti will lead off the series Tuesday with a discussion of preparedness for removal from life threatening dangers and treatment of poisoning and serious bleeding. Pezzetti teaches at Chapman College and is chairman for the National American Red Cross Safety Program.

Pat Rogers from the Irvine Police Department will speak on personal crimes against women and children Wednesday.

Cardio pulmonary resuscitation will be the subject explored by Gene Sikens of the Orange County Division of Foresty on Thursday. He will also demonstrate the Heimlich procedure for aiding a choking victim.

The Friday program will again feature Rogers on crime and burglary prevention.

Virginia Cannole, program chairman said that a question and answer period has been set aside at the last 10 minutes of each talk. Viewers will be able to phone in their questions. The phone number will be given during the program.

Spanish West Exhibit Features Local History

"The Spanish West" is a newly opened exhibition which will remain on view through Sunday, Feb. 27th at the Bowers Museum, 2002 North Main Street, Santa Ana. The exhibition of Hispanic California and the West, which projects the Spanish period and includes the early history of Orange County, was organized by Reilly P. Rhodes, museum director.

Included in the exhibition are paintings, articles of clothing, land documents, maps, selected mission artifacts, Spanish armor, weapons and textiles. The objects shown are from the museum's collections together with material on loan from Carl Schaefer Dentzel of Los Angeles, the Southwest Museum in Highland Park, Los Angeles, Arnold Dominguez and the Saddleback Western Art Gallery in Santa Ana. Two anonymous lenders have also contributed significant material.

Two paintings on loan for the show are of particular interest. "Patron Y Major Domo" illustrates two men on horseback, the hacienda owner, or patron, and his foreman. This work was done about 1835 by the famous Mexican artist, Carl Nebel in Mexico. This particular pose shows the contrast in formal European portraiture and the more casual portraiture of the West. Another painting which combines European and Western painting characteristics is "Our Lady of Sorrows" done in New Mexico in the 18th century. The portrait is painted using the face of an Indian woman, but the pose is very European.

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE, ADVENTURER BILL BARRIERE

Want Some Adventure? Apply To Bill Barriere

By GARY KRINO
Register Staff Writer

LAGUNA BEACH — Bill Barriere looks like he'd be more at home cruising Beverly Hills' Rodeo Drive in a Rolls Royce rather than chopping his way through the crippling heat of Panama's killer jungle, the Darien Gap.

He's got a way with clothes and personal grooming that spells Palm Spring chic, French champagne served in crystal goblets and his own table (on call) at Chasen's.

On the outside, not a whisper of the soldier of fortune that dwells within. And then the 40-year-old former stockbroker's assistant, head waiter, construction worker and administrative assistant for a civilian construction consortium in Vietnam starts to talk.

He says he wants to be the leader of the first ever ground expedition to cross the Western Hemisphere, north to south from Pt. Barrow, Alaska, to Punta Arenas, Chile, near the islands that border the famous Strait of Magellan. That's a distance of almost 12,000 miles.

Why would anyone want to leave what appears to be the good life to dog sled across the frozen tunda of the north country, slash his way through Central American jungles and wind across 24,000-foot Andes peaks? "Just because it's all there," said Barriere who is based in Laguna Beach, Palm Springs and Anchorage, Alaska.

"It's a dream of the ultimate thing," he said. "There's a little of Walter Mitty in everyone. I've been a professional adventurer all my life."

Barrier has been putting the trip together for the last two and a half years and, thus far, has recruited a doctor from Seattle, explorer from Marina del Rey, cook from Palm Springs and a former Angola mercenary from Anchorage to accompany him.

Much of the recruiting for the party that Barriere hopes will number about 20 is being done through newspaper ads that read like this: "Expedition seeks soldiers of fortune, doctor, cartographer — must have experience in jungle and tundra terrain and be self supporting for one year."

Barriere said responses (about 2,500 in the last six months go to Capt. John Hurd, a former Green Beret, who reviews them. Hurd is strategic advisor for the trip.

"Hurd knows what it takes to survive in both extremes — steamy jungles full of insects, poisonous snakes, cannibalistic Indians and smugglers plus the 30 degrees below zero weather in Alaska," Barriere said.

If the prospective participant passes Hurd's review, he is sent a 15-page application and if the answers fit the trip's bill, a battery of four psychological tests is sent. Psychological strain is expected to be as much a part of the trip as the hostile environment.

In addition, each participant must have at least $15,000 in liquid assets "so that if anything happens to him, he can handle the finances. We estimate that only about 70 per cent of the people who start the trip will finish it," Barriere said.

To date, no women have qualified for the trip that Barriere estimates will take up to nine months to complete if it is successful.

Planning for the journey has required Barriere to travel "at least 38,000 miles" charting the route, negotiating for national border crossings, researching and recruiting.

"It's been a complicated process working out details and arrangements with the various countries we'll be going through," he said. "The ted tape has really been thick." In February, Barriere said he will be in Washington, D.C., to work out the diplomatic aspects of the trip with representatives of the Organization of American States and U.S. State Dept.

In addition, Barriere said he is in touch with movie companies in Hollywood, Alaska and Mexico he says are interested in filming portions of the trip.

Currently, Barriere is negotiating with a major auto manufacturer and two oil companies he said are interested in covering the $1 million price tag the adventurer has set on the trip. If the money is forthcoming, the journey is set to begin by September.

Barriere expects the most trying time of the trip to come when the expedition attempts to get through the jungles of the Darien Gap.

"There's no road," he said. "We're

Rockies Ski Scene Improves

By ART PARRA

"Say it isn't so!".

This is the cry emanating from ski resorts in the prestigious "Ski The Rockies" affiliation.

Ugly rumors have been circulated creating concern within the membership. Enough concern to send an ambassador into the field for the purpose of spiking spreading of the dilemma.

It was circulated around a New Mexico Resort that one of the major playgrounds in Colorado was filing bankruptcy proceedings. As the hours went by, it wasn't long until nearly all the resorts were being closed due to financial setbacks created by a lack of snow.

"This is as far from the truth as one can get," David B. Arriola told The Register this week. Arriola is the Director of Marketing for Crested Butte Resort in Southern Colorado.

"It hasn't been one of our best years," he continued. "But, it hasn't been as bad as reports have indicated. From standards of local snow buffs, our snow fall has been bad. People from the east don't agree. We have had good skiing in general and expect to have good conditions through Easter. All we ask is..."Give us a chance."

Winter snow conditions have been a major problem for all western resorts but there has been enough to keep lifts operating at capacity.

According to Connie Baxter, reached at "Ski The Rockies" headquarters, Old man Winter has taken his time coming to the Rockies and as a consequence caused many skiers to postpone vacations until February, March and April. Two major storms in January provided enough snow for conditions to be rated from "very good to fair."

Several reports are able to supplement nature's dearth with extensive snowmaking equipment.

The Register made a quick survey of "Ski The Rockies" resorts and the following is what was learned:

ASPEN-SNOWMASS (Colorado): All of Aspen Skiing Corporation's 14 lifts on Aspen Mountain and Buttermilk Mountain are in operation. Nine of the group's 11 lifts at the Snowmass resort, including the Big Burn, are also open, according to George Madsen, vice-president and director of marketing.

"Snow conditions on upper slopes and trails of all three mountains are rated generally good, with some fair areas. At Midway, the ratings are fair with some poor sections. All on-mountain restaurants on all three mountains are serving lunch."

Also in full swing are the ski schools on each mountain, ski rental facilities and all 85 restaurants and night clubs.

CRESTED BUTTE (Colorado): Says Arriola, "Three quarters of our lifts are operating daily. The uppermost runs of Paradise, East River and International will open with the next storm. Trail crews are working long hours to maintain skiing at its best level. We have many special events scheduled for February, March and April."

Ski Rating at Crested Butte is fair on packed powder with a 17-inch base.

VAIL VALLEY (Colorado): "Could 2,000 Flatlanders be wrong? Members of the Flatland Ski Assn. (Midwestern ski clubs) came to Vail in mid-January for their most successful weekend ever. The group left with pleasant memories," says Pam Conklin. "We've had it better but it is still better than most."

Fifteen chairlifts are currently operating and re-opening of the Lions Head Gondola is imminent. All of Vail's 74 restaurants as well as 128 shops and boutiques are open and busy. Vail's brand new ice rink is a swirl of activity.

The Great Vail Sale starts April 2, offering discounts on lift tickets and lodging plus a Snowbank Coupon Book worth $200 in discounts at all Vail shops and restaurants. Vail is scheduled to remain open until April 24th.

BRECKENRIDGE (Colorado): Says Dave Williams, "Maintenance crews have been working harder than ever to

PONY TALES

What To Do About Lost Animal

By SANDI MOSLEY
Register Staff Writer

There's nothing dumb about Sparky.

He learned if he slipped out of the pasture that was his home on the 400-acre Oak Creek Ranch in Santa Ana Canyon, he would be caught and locked in a barn. In the barn, he discovered, he would be fed delicious alfalfa hay.

No one had thought the little spotted pony was quite that smart. At least not until the day ranch manager Bob Cluff saw the lengths he'd go to get out of the pasture.

Undaunted by barbed wire, the stout, four-foot-high pony would sidle up to the fence, slip his right fore and hind legs through the wire, then his head and, finally, his left legs. He usually went visiting horses in another pasture, but when he wanted that hay, he would walk to the road leading to the ranch house, Cluff said.

He did that on Nov. 27, but that time, no one from the ranch saw him. A county animal control officer did.

Little Sparky, described by his owner Mil Hale of Garden Grove as a "miniature Budweiser horse" with flaxen mane and tail and silky hair over his hooves, was taken to the county animal shelter in Orange. On Dec. 7, he was sold for $10 at auction with another pony.

Hale and his 12-year-old daughter began looking for the pony soon after it disappeared. He called the shelter twice a week he said, asking if the pony had been picked up.

He was told the pony was not there, he recalled, and a couple of times, he left his name and phone number where he could be reached if the pony came in.

"A horse can't be running loose in Orange County for a whole month and someone not see it," he said. He finally began checking with horse dealers and the three major auctions, in Riverside, Chino and El Monte. He learned the $65 pony had been sold by the county to a dealer who had consigned it at one of the auctions.

Sparky is undoubtedly amazing his new owners with his feats of escape. Hale has given up trying to get him back, but he still hasn't gotten over how he lost the little pony.

Two things bother him.

– The pony was picked up at Gypsum Canyon and Santa Ana Canyon roads, 100 yards from the ranch house."Why didn't they just take him up to the house and ask there?" Hale wants to know.

– Shelter officials now tell him they had no obligation to tell him over the phone if the pony was there. "It would have been much better if they had said they couldn't tell me if my pony was there and I'd have to come down and look," he said.

So, would should you do if you lose a horse?

Emmett D. Gibson, county animal control kennel services chief, says owners should call their local police department to find out where a loose horse in that town would be taken. The sheriff's department in unincorporated territory would call in animal control, as would most cities, he said. But Laguna Beach, Newport Beach and Irvine use private facilities.

"If you lose your poodle, cat, horse or elephant, whatever kind of animal, you should come down and check on it personally," he added. "We'll tell over the phone if we have horses, if whoever answers the phone knows, but better yet, come down and walk around the pens every three days."

He added that animal control officers are told to use "extra effort" to locate an owner before bringing livestock to the shelter but how much an officer tries is up to his own discretion.

Five days after a horse is brought to the shelter, a report is filed with the state agriculture department in Sacramento listing the animal's description, any brands and probable value. The county then takes out a "notice of intent to sell" in the small-print legal ads in The Register and an auction date is set. Sparky remained at the pound about 10 days.

Brands are registered with the state but regional state brand inspectors keep track of only those on cattle. Under state law, stray cattle cannot be sold at county auctions but must be turned over to the state brand inspectors who track down the owners.

Horse owners have not been willing to pay state inspection costs as cattlemen have, so branded horses do not get the same protection as cattle, state officials say.

A "horse identification bill" requiring inspections at sales and the state line and offering voluntary registrations of horses (as with cattle) may pass the state legislature this year. Until then, though, it's up to the horse owner to keep track of where his animal is.

Geneva Offers Beauty, Color, History In Making

By JOHN PHILIP SOUSA

GENEVA – An easy one-block walk from the train station on the Rue de Lausanne and I was installed in one of the neat and sunny rooms of the Royal Hotel. The English spoken by the very cordial staff had a definite French accent.

A little later, after a sight-filled, 10-minute stroll, I stood on the spot where awhile back a Roman fellow had done a rather impressive bit of construction. His name was Julius Caesar; the time, some 19 centuries ago; the structure, the first bridge across the Rhone River that slices through modern Geneva.

Less than a half hour had elapsed from the moment my very Swiss (read very clean and amazingly punctual) train had deposited me at the station and my arrival at the site where Caesar had laid the foundation of his bridge and where now stands the local tourist office.

A very short time indeed, but enough to capture some of Geneva's unique characteristics.

A Gallic touch. Compactness. Long roots into history.

There's more, of course, to this paradox of a place, this relatively small town of less than 200,000 mostly French-speaking Swiss that no doubt is Europe's most international community.

As the European seat of the United Nations, Geneva is where the more-than-fourscore organizations affiliated with the U.N. regularly hold their meetings and conferences.

The presence of delegates from countries all over the world along with a permanent diplomatic community unusually large for a town that is not a capital does not mean stiff morning coats and somber formality. Far from it, Geneva's French streak, its superb location on the banks of its namesake lake and the large population of students, writers and artists go a long way to make it one of the friendliest and happiest cities anywhere.

In a country long on beauty, this is Switzerland's most attractive and sophisticated city. Wedged between the Alps and the Jura Mountains, it sits on the neat lakeshore within sight of 15,770-foot Mt. Blanc. It is so close to France's key southern ski resorts, Parisians and other Frenchmen fly or drive here en route to those slopes. The great lake and mountain region of Northern Italy is a short distance away.

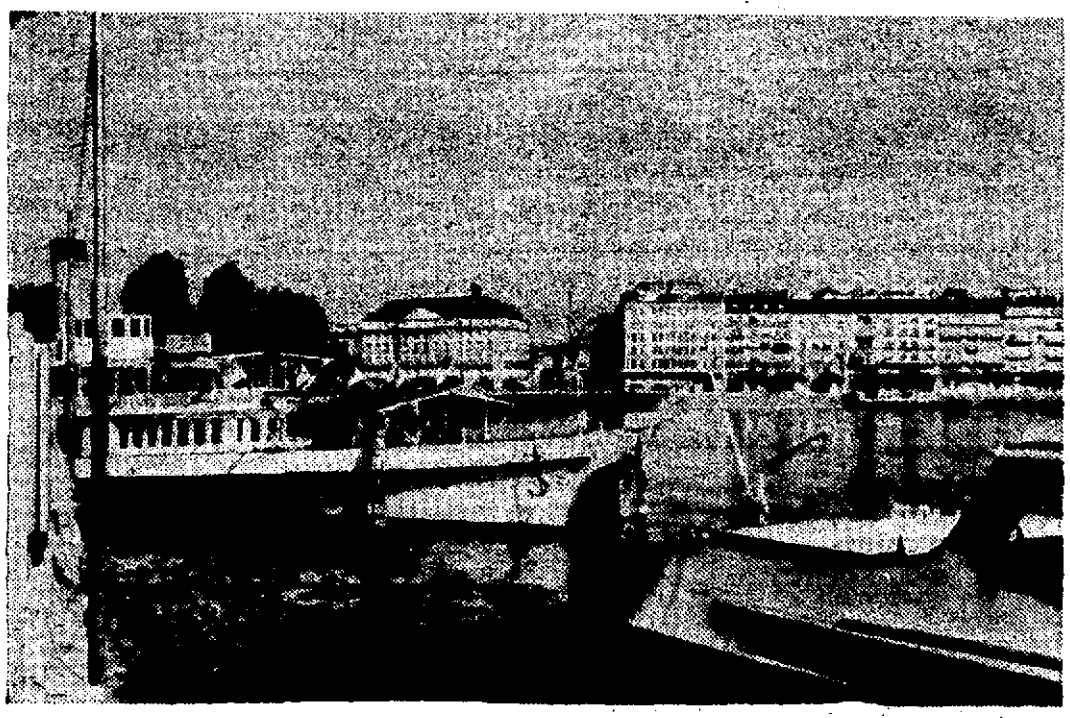
And, of course, Geneva is a convenient gateway to a host of outstanding ski and other Swiss resorts.

Befitting its status as a forum for the world, Geneva boasts a wide choice of cuisines. Fine restaurants serving everything from pheasant to pizza abound. And are quite expensive. But with a little research – and the assistance of the very helpful city tourist office – you can find numerous restaurants and cafes in the moderate to inexpensive range.

On first encounter – particularly as you drive in from the airport or as your tour bus takes the mandatory journey to the western edge of town for a visit to the huge U.N. facility – Geneva will impress you with its broad boulevards and spacious squares.

But there's another face to the place, the Old Town.

It's here in a delightful maze of narrow cobbled ways and medieval buildings that you find the bulk of the most intersting structures, monuments and shops.



Old Town landmarks include City Hall; St. Peter's Cathedral, where John Calvin preached about 400 years ago; the university, founded by the 16th Century Protestant reformer; the Grand Theatre, home to some of Europe's finest opera and ballet performances; and the picturesque Place du Bourg-de-Four.

Within easy walking distance are several important museums, including the Petit Palais (modern art), Ariana Museum (porcelains and ceramics), and the Art and History Museum (excellent poster collection).

As with restaurants, Geneva is crowded with excellent shops, especially goldsmith studios, antique stores and art galleries.

Most will make a large dent in your pocketbook. But, again, with a bit of looking around and some tourist office counsel you can find a number of stores in which to get such popular Swiss souvenirs as clocks, watches, posters, rare books or old prints without having to get a bank loan.

Worth a visit, even if you don't buy a thing, is the Flea Market held twice weekly at the Plaine de Plainpalais, a large square across from the Sports Pavilion. This colorful assortment of people and antiques and junk materializes Saturdays and Wednesdays while on Fridays and Tuesdays, from dawn till noon, the square becomes a bustling produce market. CNS

LAKESIDE CITY – Geneva, Switzerland's most attractive and sophisticated city, owes much of its appeal to natural features such as Lake Geneva, shown here, on whose gentle shores it rises, and the Alps and Jura Mountains which surround it.

Kremlin: Towers Of Power

By GARY LYCAN

Moscow, like most major American and European cities, is experiencing growth problems. Urban renewal, however, requires no labyrinth of bureaucratic paperwork, because the society is controlled by the state. So it is no surprise to find the facelifting has included moving back entire buildings to permit a broad expansion of thoroughfares like Marx Avenue and Gorky Street. One building, in fact, was moved back 14 meters and two stories were added to it

What happens to displaced businesses or residents is not known. Nor are we to find out from Lena, the Russian coed assigned to guide our American tour on a 2,500-mile journey across the Soviet Union. She has been briefed on what information she needs; no more. Still, she doesn't fit my image of a guide – serious, stern, of stocky build, intolerant of Americans. Lena was attractive, polite, curious, a perfect candidate for a Disneyland ambassador.

Intourist, the Russia tourist agency, assigned a second guide to take us through Moscow. Her name was Eva, a slim, well-proportioned blonde who could be perfectly cast as the underground heroine in a spy movie. If one wants to tour Russia, this is the way to do it.

Lenin is probably the name we heard most frequently in the Soviet Union. Certainly this was true in Moscow. He is credited as the "creator" of the Communist Party, the man who led it through three revolutions. He is worshipped by thousands who line up for hours to view his body in the mausoleum on Red Square. The photos you may have seen of endless streams of people pouring into the memorial are not an exaggeration, are not propaganda. Lenin is a red star attraction. But he is not the only one they come to see. For unlike MacArthur's old soldier, World War II has not faded away. Cannons, statues and eternal flames rekindle a reverence for the fighters of fascism.

Red Square is an awesome sight. It is fronted by the legendary and colorful St. Basil's Cathedral, an oversized 16th century master-work built during Ivan The Terrible's reign. The legend says the eyes of the designers were blinded so they could not duplicate the imposing structure, a kaleidoscopic maze of onion-dome design which would be dismissed as too "gingerbread" if it were constructed here. But in Moscow it is a monument to early Russian Architecture.

Beyond Basil's on the left of the cobble-lined square is the mausoleum, a red granite and black labradorite structure built in 1930, framed by blue spruces and terraced viewing tiers. Behind it on both sides is the blocks-long, prison-high Kremlin Wall. Plaques a few feet apart mark the tombs of other Soviet leaders. Stalin's body once shared space in Lenin's tomb, but was removed in the Khrushchev era of de-Stalinization. It is believed he is buried nearby, but our guides profess no knowledge of this. They say they are not even sure where Nikita is buried, but do know it is not in Red Square.Incorporated in the fortress walls are the 20 Kremlin towers. Five are crowned with lustrous ruby stars to symbolize what they call the new Moscow. Lenin is considered Moscow's grand architect; he laid out the scheme for reconstructing the city. It is a never-ending project, wrapped in a phrase we identify with the Soviet Union – a five-year plan. The city's shape changes around the Kremlin. But some things continue with precision-like sameness. If you're there on the hour, you will see the changing of the guard. At exactly two minutes, 45 seconds before the hour strikes, a corporal and two guards emerge from the gate of the Spasskayas Tower. They walk 340 goose-step paces; at the instant they reach the mausoleum doors, the chimes of the Kremlin clock announce a new hour's arrival. Then the corporal quietly gives the command and the newly arrived soldiers take up their posts.

At the end of Red Square, opposite St. Basil's, is the history museum and Lenin Musuem, barn-like structures with roofs as white as snow. In the distance is the luxurious 6,000-room Rossiya Hotel. It is a huge, modern rectangle. Our guides tick off the statistics supporting its presence: a plan to have a city center form a kind of galaxy around the Kremlin to handle the 250,000 cars and 1.5 million visitors daily. Planners say the factories will be moved to industrial zones to permit "the harmonious integration" of monuments, skyscrapers and forest parks.

"Inside the Kremlin" is one way of saying you tour more outside grounds, only this time behind the Kremlin wall. We saw the 200 ton Tsar bell, the parking area for party members, the 15th and 16th-century palace facades which remind one of the splendor of the Arabian Knights, and the inside of one of the churches undergoing restoration. One all-too-visible sign of the scaffold construction was an apparently mummified corpse which had been removed from its cathedral crypt to the floor, covered by a thin white sheet. I didn't wait long enough to catch his name.

We returned to Red Square in little more than an hour. The guards stand duty day and night. Someone is always leaving flowers on the steps leading to the mausoleum. The people appear animated and talkative in line, but become still as if lost in their thoughts when entering the tomb. The cobblestones have sunk in some places, bulged in others. so we walk carefully.

To best appreciate Red Square, return near midnight. We were the only group of tourists there because the mausoleum is closed to visitors at that hour. There were fewer than two dozen people on Red Square. The moon's glow shone down on the shadow-lit fortress walls and cathedral. The fir trees stood like sentinels of silence. You walk across the square without the restrictions imposed by daytime lineups, and you recall its role in history – it was here the revolutionaries stormed the Kremlin in 1917. And it was here, too, on a snowy November day in 1941 that men who had been taking part in an anniversary parade left to fight the Nazis on a front dangerously close to the capital.

You pause to gaze at the illumination and wonder: does the Red Star symbolize a crimson hope that there will be no more wars? You board your bus, take on last look back, and pray.

Obligatory on any Soviet Union tour is a cultural experience. The brochures and your guides tell you it will be one of three events: the ballet, circus of folk dancing. The Bolshoi is the best known; therefore you regard it as the least likely one you will see. The circus and folk dancing, you figure, are undoubtedly nice but, after all, wouldn't it be nice to tell your friends you saw the prestigious Bolshoi Ballet in Moscow?

Well, friends, don't be disheartened. We were taken to the large Tchaikovsky Music Hall where, from the best seats in the house – the gallery – we viewed a dazzling performance of the most fabulous folk dancing I have ever seen anywhere.

A woman commentator introduced in Russian AND English the "stories" staged skillfully by the Krasnoyarsk Siberian Dance Ensemble. The troupe weaves ballet forms into acrobatic prodution numbers, translating the Eastern Siberia spirit into an affectionate movement performed without sets, using only curtains and lighting as backgrounds. A repertoire of more than 50 dances ranged from Little Ducks, a lyrical round dance, to Winter Games, a number full of fun and gaiety, often touched with melancholy. The 40 women and 35 men were accompanied by an unusual orchestra of Russian folk instruments, brass, percussion and flute. They were so graceful that at times it seemed you were watching a reflecting pool of swirling colors-costumes of bright blues, greens, reds, and yellows. One number featured two fishermen wooing a pretty girl as the orchestra played music that sounded like "Sailor's Hornpipe." Another selection, "Dance of the Reindeer." included a drum solo that would have rivaled any big band performance by Gene Krupa.

Applause was generous; the encores too few, the two-hour performance gone too quickly. It reminds one of dance's undeniable appeal as a basic human communicator. It is also a natural resource the Soviets have wisely tapped for tourism. Folk dancing may be the third choice, but it's first class all the way.

Other selected historical objects include a Spanish Colonial breastplate and officer's helmet of the 16th century. Adobe forms, red roof tile, a carved wooden pillar cap from one of the altar pillars of the San Juan Capistrano Mission, founded in 1776, are also shown. A 17"x11" adobe block clearly shows the hand prints of the worker who formed the block, as well as the native plant material used.

Some of the sherds recovered from the Jose Andres Sepulveda site by members of the Pacific Coast Archaeological Society are exhibited along with a sketch of the Rancho San Joaquin map drawn in 1841 establishing his claim granted during the Mexican regime. Copies of the Society Quarterly for July 1969 relating the site's history and importance in Orange County, and reporting the artifactual materials recovered are available in the museum shop.

Two important paintings in the museum's collection have been reframed for this exhibition. One work, a watercolor, shows Don Juan Forster at his Las Flores adobe on the Rancho Santa Margarita. This was painted about 1870-75 by the artist Alexander Harmer who spent most of his creative life in California specializing in painting the landscape and scenes of the early Spanish-California period. The second work, an equestrian portrait of Jose A. Sepulveda, was painted in 1856 by Henri Penelon, born in Lyon France in 1827 and active in El Pueblo de Los Angeles by 1853. This portrait shows Sepulveda astride "Black Swan", a mare imported from Australia, which he matched against Pio Pico's unbeaten horse "Sarco". The race, with all Southern California on the side lines and making fantastic bets was run in Los Angeles in 1852 and won by Sepulveda's mount. Recent conservation work and reframing for this portrait have been done with funds supplied by Bowers Museum Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts, Washington, D.C., a matching grant to Bowers Museum during 1976 as a Bicentennial project. The noted Anaheim author and publisher, Leo J. Friis, has called this portrait one of the major treasures of the Bowers Museum.

The eleven square leagues of land on which Sepulveda's cattle had roamed is today's important and well known Irvine Ranch.

insure the quality of skiing remains as high as possible. Although Peaks 8 and 9 are open on a somewhat limited basis, special efforts and increased manpower have been used to maintain and improve all available trails and terrain."

Free Ski The Summit shuttle buses are in full operation as is the Breckenridge town shuttle at no charge.

A wide variety of recreational activities are also available including the increasingly popular Ski Touring School and Mountain Guide Service, offering lessons and guided tours to skiers of all abilities. Ice skating, snowmobiling and varied activities are just a sampling of the facilities at Breckenridge, located among the breathtaking beauty of Colorado's renowned Ten Mile Range.

WINTER PARK (Colorado): This resort ahd been open since mid-November due to a new snowmaking system, according to contact Kristin Rud.

"The system covers 72 acres of terrain and we are adding an additional 84 for next year," she said. "All 11 of the double chairlifts on the mountain are open and operating, plus two high speed T-bars on weekends. Seventy-four per cent of Winter Park's 51 trails are open with only a few expert runs remaining closed until more snow is received."

The resort plans to remain open for skiing until May 1 with a special "Spring Fling" package being offered from April 1 to closing. These incentives start at $67 for three days lodging, lifts and transportation to and from Stapleton International Airport (Denver). There will also be a five-day package for $100 and $129 for seven days.

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS (Colorado): After a massive community effort, moving snow onto the slopes from the surrounding forest and meadows, Steamboat opened for skiing just before Christmas. At the present time there is 26 inches of snow, with 21 runs open and seven lifts, including the 90-car gondola running daily.

A spokesman said, "It's a great time to ski steamboat, especially for the beginner and intermediate. With our 90 ski school instructors on hand, classes are small, just like our lift lines. There is no waiting."

The beauty and extensive entertainment are still hallmarks at Steamboat. With apres-ski activities at an all-time high, Steamboat is a delight to visit.

SNOWBIRD (Utah): The famous snows of the Wasatch continue late in the year and give Snowbird consistently dependable spring skiing conditions with excellent snow depth. United States Forest Service figures show an annual snowfall for March at 121 inches and 117 inches in mid-April. Average daytime temperatures in April and May are from 25 to 32 degrees, according to Jill Whitesides.

Snowbird will be open until May 15. The annual "Spring Fling" begins April 11 and will remain until closing. All rates are discounted on lift tickets, lodging etc.

SUN VALLEY (Idaho): Shannon Besoyan, former Register writer reports, "Sun Valley is currently serving its guests some of the finest skiing in the west. Each of the mountains, Dollar for beginners and world-famous Baldy for low intermediates to expert skiers, are both open on a daily basis. Half Dollar and Quarter Dollar lifts are operating...Flying Squirrel lifts are open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Ski conditions are rated as good to very good on 2200 vertical... that's Lower Warm Springs, Mid Warm Springs, Flying Squirrel and Lower Plaza runs."

The last week of Sun Valley's 41st winter season, April 10-17, undoubtedly is the time to enjoy the best for less. This week of sunshine and skiing, tennis and swimming carries an irresistable price tag. This is a two-day lodging bundle with lift tickets for $32 per person.

JACKSON HOLE (Wyoming): This popular vacation retreat resorted to the supernatural. Harry Baxter, marketing director, explained they had Paul Lawson, a Cloud Physicist for Colorado International Corp., augment natural snowfall through silver iodide seeding of clouds.

Lawson contends that the minute seeding particles are targeted from aircraft and ground locations, the resultant silver iodide content in the snowfall is negligible.

Jackson Hole has received five feet of new snow since New Year's Day and is rapidly catching up to normal which annually totals 38 feet. Skiing is reported as good with packed and fresh powder.

HANDWRITING

Why Am I Always Like This?

By DOROTHY ST. JOHN JACKSON
Certified Graphoanalyst

Dear Dorothy:

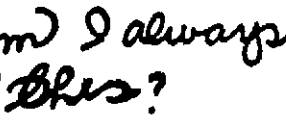
I'm not married, but I am living with three different men. One at a time, of course. I want a man in my life so much that when I get any attention I fall for it immediately. Why am I always like this?
C.M.

Dear C.M.:

No matter how the world turns, moral standards have a way of kicking back.

Already, you've felt the blow.

Today is your world. It tranquilizes you. You forget the restitution which comes with tomorrow; all because your philosophical values have been cut short, seen in the lack of upper and lower extensions in your writing. No amount of attention is enough to satisfy your yearnings, seen in the long, upswing endings. So you're a real pushover, seen in the extremely rounded s's.



Guilt feelings are beginning to pile up, seen in your strokes which consistently swing back to the left, such as in the letter t and other strokes not shown above.

You're beginning to feel, too, that chances are pretty much against you, seen in the dropping y ending, and you're easily discouraged.

Promiscuity has a bitter bite and you're beginning to feel its sting.

If you are counting on an illicit affair to get your man, you can also count on it leaving you high and dry!

To obtain your personal handwriting chart, send $3, a full page of your writing, a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dorothy St. John Jackson, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Allow 60 days.

Perhaps one of the more dramatic effects you can add to photographs is stars.

Yes, stars. In the photo a point of light is formed into a perfect four or eight-point star. A bit of luck on the part of the photographer? Hardly.

You may have made a picture with a star in it when getting a bright reflection or sharp point of light in your photograph. But that was a lucky accident.

However, professional photographers can't wait for lucky accidents. When they want a star effect in their pictures they merely add a cross-star or, as it is better known, a "star" filter.

The star filter takes the light entering the lens from a point source and scatters it in an orderly fashion.

Actually, the star filter is nothing more than a clear piece of optical glass which has had tiny lines etched into its surface in perpendicular lines. So the surface is a network of right-angle lines.

When the light from a point source strikes the filter it is scattered along these lines following the pattern etched into the glass.

This effect can give a jewel-like appearance to a scene. Take a close look at the picture of the boat.

You can see larger stars which are formed from lights on shore. In this case, we see larger light sources will produce larger stars.

We also find that the brighter and smaller the point source of lights, the greater the light scattering effect will be.

The choice of lens also will have an effect on the final star effect in a picture. Try a 50mm to 135mm lens on a 35mm camera for the best results. A wide-angle lens tends to make the stars appear much smaller. The longer the focal length, the longer the points of the star.

The single lens reflex and the star filter make a good working combination because you can see the exact effect as it will appear in the final picture. You can rotate the star filter to change the direction of the star, making the points go in whatever direction you like.

Since the filter cuts your exposure by about one-half an f-stop, you can stack two filters to create an eight-point star effect. This is done by putting the filters together so their points go in different directions. Again you can check the final effect in your viewfinder before you expose your film.

If you don't think your budget can afford a star filter right now, don't despair. There is a way. Any screened material placed before the lens will produce a "star" effect. Ordinary window screening works very well.

There also is another version of the star filter called a "spectral star filter." This is especially effective in shooting color pictures. For not only does the filter give the star effect, but it also breaks down the color into its primary colors, giving a rainbow effect to the points of the star.

Travel Notes

Twenty-five campsites, half the headquarters area campsites at Salton Sea State Recreation Area, have been closed because of rising water.

The campsites have been damaged by water and by erosion caused by wind-whipped wave action.

Remaining developed family campsites include 25 in the headquarters area and 140 at Mecca Beach to the south. Unlimited informal camping is available farther south at Corvina Beach, Salt Creek, and Bombay Beach.

The boat ramps in the headquarters area are also closed, but boats may be launched at the North Shore Marina, a private marina, 1 mile to the north. The owner has offered to honor the Department's annual boat-launching passes. The visitor center and the picnic area near park headquarters remain in service.

The recreation area is on the northeast shoreline of the Salton Sea, 90 miles east of San Diego.

Construction has begun on visitor facilities at Border Field State Park, just north of the Mexican border at the southwest corner of California.

The contract was awarded to the Daly Corporation of San Diego for $730,000. Construction is to be completed by the end of the year.

The development will include a beach entrance building, two comfort stations, five lifeguard stands, picnic and overlook areas, parking areas, access roads, and service facilities.

Thirty concrete picnic tables, each with a nearby metal barbecue, will be built atop the mesa, 50 feet above the beach. The mesa area, with parking facilities for 100 cars and 7 buses, will offer scenic views of the tidal estuary of the Tijuana River, the city of Tijuana, Mexico and the bull ring to the south, San Diego to the north, and the Pacific Ocean to the west.

A 140-car parking area will be constructed below the mesa near the beach, with an informal 75-car overflow parking area.

The California Recreational Trails Committee will hold public hearings Feb. 9 and 10 in southern California to hear testimony regarding three potential sites for off-road vehicle recreation areas.

The hearings will begin Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. in the Palmdale City Council Chambers at 708 East Avenue Q9, Palmdale; and Feb. 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Riverside City Council Chambers, 3900 Main Street, Riverside.

The three sites to be considered are known as Hungry Valley and Ritter Ranch, both about 60 miles north of Los Angeles, and Potrero, about 70 miles east of Los Angeles.

All interested persons are invited to testify at the hearings. Statements should be written, if possible, and submitted to the Committee before or at the hearings.

Further information may be obtained by mail from Alan Kolster, Department of Parks and Recreation, P.O. Box 2390, Sacramento, CA 95811.

ASK KLEINER

'Bionic' Bride Not Pregnant

By DICK KLEINER

DEAR DICK: I heard that Lindsay Wagner finally said yes to Michael Brandon for marriage. And that she is going to have a baby! Is this true? KRISTI HARROD, Tucson, Ariz.

Some of it is true. Lindsay has become a bionic bride and is Mrs. Michael Brandon. But about that baby rumor. Her friends say that's just an unfounded rumor, but they do add that Lidsay loves children and has often said she wants to become a mother.

DEAR DICK: When is the movie, "King Kong," going to be shown? And how and where was he made? MORRIS HOLBAUGH, Ava. Mo.

"King Kong" is in general across-the-nation release now, and should be showing up in Ava any minute. The movie (and the great beast) was made in Hollywood. He's 40 feet high, fabricated of a variety of materials. Basically, you'd have to call him a mechanical contrivance.

DEAR DICK: Will you be kind enough to advise us what ever happend to Jack Leonard, who sang in the early '40s with Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra? MRS. MILDRED E. BACHMAN, Freeland, Pa.

And a great singer he was, too. I tracked him down to Woodland Hills, Ca., not far from Los Angeles. He is now an executive in the music publishing industry. He's just recovering from eye surgery.

DEAR DICK: Could you settle an argument for us? My daughter insists that the house in "Gone With the Wind" is actually located in Chico, Ca. I say it is not. Who is correct? MRS. DAVID DILTZ, San Carlos, Ca.

You are. By house I assume you mean Tara, the big plantation home of Scarlett O'Hara. That was built on the back lot of the old Selznick Studio in Culver City. It is no longer in existence – neither the studio nor the house.

DEAR DICK: Is the singer, Alice Cooper, really the grown up Jerry Mathers of Leave It To Beaver? Or is he the grown up Tony Dow of that show? I've heard both. T.K.C., Comanche, Okla.

Neither. That story keeps popping up, but it isn't true and never was true. Cooper was born in Detroit and grew up in Phoenix, Ariz., and never was one of the Beaver Cleaver clan.

DEAR DICK: While on vacation this summer, I saw T-shirts with Starsky and Hutch on them. I didn't buy one at the time for I didn't know what size my son was. Now I can't find any around here. Can you tell me where I can get one? MRS. ARTHUR DOCTER, Firth, Neb.

According to Brett Garwood, in charge of merchandising for Spelling-Goldberg, the company that makes Starsky and Hutch, many companies have been licensed to make S&H T-shirts. He suggests you try your nearby Sears or J.S. Penney stores, who have such licenses. You can also try a T-shirt shop, because most of them have the iron-on S&H decals and can make one for you.

DEAR DICK: I watched the soap opera, Somerset, ever since it started and all of sudden they took it off the air. Is there a chance it will be back on? MRS. W.K., Troy, Ohio.

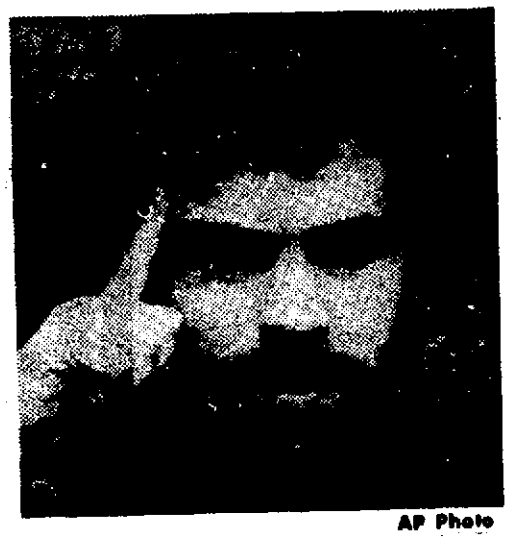
ART FOR ALASKA



By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

Something very special for culture fans called ART takes place March 9 in Anchorage, a spot best known to most people as a refueling stop for intercontinental planes.

ART is the acronym for the Alaska Repertory Theater which, on that evening at the Sydney Laurence Auditorium, opens its first season with the rascally farce "Scapino." Two other plays will follow into May, in Anchorage and in Fairbanks.

And with ART, the nation's most northern-eastern-western state starts seeking an identity of its own in the performing arts at a professional level.

There has been plenty of previous interest in drama, opera, dance, symphonic music and jazz. As a matter of fact, the Associated Council of the Arts recently announced that Alaska in 1977 has become the No. 1 state in per capita governmental financial support of the arts ($1.60 per person versus No. 2 New York at $1.57 and No. 50 Wisconsin at 2 cents).

AP Photo

ROBERT FARLEY OF ART

The problem, however, has been that aside from a few amateur groups, inhabitants of the vast, resources-rich frontier until now have depended upon visits by professional organizations from distant places for top-caliber aesthetic stimulation.

The state arts council, with a little cash help from the National Endowment for the Arts, began investigating the prospects for Alaska-based establishments several years ago.

"Otherwise," says Paul Brown, who got involved during the survey and is now ART's producing director, "it was realized the state would keep putting most of its money in imported attractions."

Theater was chosen as having the widest immediate draw, according to Brown. A native of New York, he migrated to Alaska seven years ago at age 24 and took part in development of a civic center for Anchorage. He got the theater assignment in 1975.

ART has been developed via frequent consultations with the Theater Communications Group and the Foundation for Expansion and Development of American Professional Theater, two private agencies that service expanding resident company activities all over the country. Before ART, only one other company, Stage South in Columbia, S.C., had started under sponsorship of a state arts council.

Banner Year For Museums

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

In a storefront museum on New York City's Staten Island, Elaine Schweninger guides 100 schoolchildren a day through an exhibit of Egyptian hieroglyphics, then shows them how to draw their own symbols and paint their faces.

On a Navajo reservation in Tsaile, Ariz., Harry Walters is assembling a display of Indian weavings and a collection of recorded ritual chants for a new $4 million cultural center.

At these and more conventional museums across the nation, interest in art and cultural exhibits is booming. Attendance rose during the Bicentennial year and new museums are springing up while old ones are being enlarged, an informal survey shows.

"Everywhere you look, museums have arrived into the mainstream of American life," says Joe Noble, president of the American Association of Museums.

In Texas, 140 museums are under construction or planned.

At the Charles M. Russell Museum and Gallery in Helena, Mont., "attendance is up so far our girls have lost count," says spokeswoman Dolores Brown.

At the Philadelphia Museum of Art, a Bicentennial exhibition and newly installed airconditioning helped push attendance over the 500,000 mark in eight months. That was higher than the previous 12-month total.

"Where once art museums interested mainly the rich, now if a museum opens in a community it's a cause for great rejoicing – just as public libraries were in the late 19th century," Noble said.

"More people are spending time in museums every year because we're growing more sophisticated as a nation and people have more leisure time," Noble said. He also said he felt educational television has played a significant role in awakening the public to the varieties of art that are available.

"The Bicentennial, of course, generated tremendous awareness of American art," he said, "but the interest extends back to the European masters – and to contemporary art as well."

Spokesman Jim Hunter offers a more prosaic explanation of why this year's attendance at the Toledo, Ohio, Museum of Art has passed 400,000 in a city of 340,000 people.

"More people are taking advantage of things to do close to home, because they can't afford to travel as much as they used to," he said.

Carol Bannerman, editor of the museum association's newsletter, says a "noticeable increase in the number of visits" has occurred during the past year, "despite almost universal increased admission charges."

Ironically, the higher attendance "creates its own problems in a time of severe economic conditions – a demand for additional shows, service and educational programs," she said.

But she said individual and corporate donations to museums, particularly art museums, are also increasing. In a recent survey, she said, 90 per cent of the museums responding reported gains in private memberships.

The Association, headquartered in Washington, says that of the roughly 1,000 art museums in the United States, 44 per cent have annual budgets under $50,000 and 5 per cent have budgets of $1 million or more.

Noble said the museum boom has been aided by a trend among wealthy collectors to give their art works to museums often at considerable tax savings.

The Pasadena, Calif., Museum of Modern Art doubled its attendance to 2,000 a week after industrialist Norton Simon donated his classical art collection – and the name was changed to The Norton Simon Museum of Art.

New Museums are as diverse as the communities they serve.

Actor Harris A Free Spirit

By JAMES MEADE

HOLLYWOOD – Once upon a time, the sun never set upon the British empire. Nor upon English gentlemen either. They were quite likely to pack a dinner jacket in their duffle bags while on their way to civilize the world for king and country.

They have had their counterparts to portray them in the British theater and cinema – soft-spoken actors who remained gentlemen no matter how vindictive their charactrs might become.

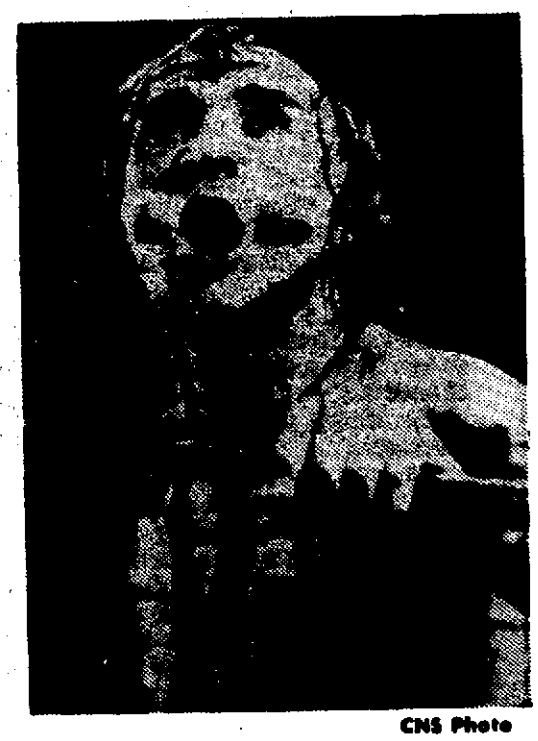
Names spring to mind, such as Noel Coward, Laurence Olivier, Leslie Howard and, recently, Dirk Bogarde and Laurence Harvey. Then, as the sun began to set upon the British empire, new voices were heard.

They were the post-World War II "Any Young Men," led by playwright John Osborne and critic Kenneth Tynan, who spoke for the working class and "kitchen-sink drama."

New names came to the fore, such as Alan Bates, Richard Burton, Albert Finney, Terence Stamp and Richard Harris. They were less gentlemanly, less old school and less inclined to bring drawing-room manners to the theater and screen.

Harris, today's subject, was born in Limerick, Ireland, Oct. 1, 1930. This Irish actor from the British theater first became widely known in the United States in a filmed kitchen-sink drama, "This Sporting Life," even though his previous films had included "The Long, the Short and the Tall," "The Guns of Navarone" and the 1962 remake of "Mutiny on the Bounty."

In 1963's "This Sporting Life," Harris played a tortured rugby player having domestic problems with Rachel Roberts. Uneasy associations with directors Michelangelo Antonioni and Sam Peckinpah followed in "The Red Desert" and "Major Dundee."



Since then Harris has played gentler characters in "Camelot," "The Snow Goose" and "Echoes of a Summer." But it is his image as the rugged John Morgan in "A Man Called Horse" that is most prevalent.

As a sort of latter-day Tarzan, Morgan lived and suffered with American Indians. Now he is back in "The Return of a Man Called Horse," co-starring Gale Sondergaard. And Harris still is plainspoken to the point of being unacceptable in a drawing room where no evil is seen, heard or spoken.

"Come on, interview me," Harris challenges press visitors. "I'll tell you what actors I hate." One is expecting names but gets types.

"What I hate is egotistical power

SUPER PLACES FOR THAT NOON DAY FARE (part two)... A beautiful little restaurant of romantic ambiance is TOM JONES located in Orange on Katella Avenue, just a few blocks west of Tustin Avenue and the Newport Freeway. The cuisine is well prepared. Service is attentive and friendly. Booths are large and cozy. There are even a few quiet corners for a tete-a-tete. It's also popular for the business luncheon.

Lunch is served daily from 11:30 until 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The menu offers many delights that include full luncheons, salads, sandwiches, even diet specialties.

I enjoyed lunch, beginning with a favorite wilted spinach salad (soup or mixed greens are available if you'd rather) — great with the fresh, hot mini loaf of bread. My entree was Dover sole, dipped in egg and toasted bread crumbs, then grilled to a golden color and served with rice pilaf. Others in my party enjoyed the prime rib — served open-faced on sour dough — and the Marco Polo with its delicious combination of ham, turkey, tomatoes and broccoli, topped with a tasty Hollandaise, sitting atop a toasted English muffin.

Many more favorites are available, such as short ribs of beef simmered in a flavorsome sauce served with fries or pilaf. Swiss steak is oven-baked, cooked in its natural juices. A spicy specialty is the "South of the border" — two authentic shredded beef enchiladas, with green salsa covered with a tasty sauce and cheeses accompanied by refried beans.

Prices begin at about $2.95 for the complete lunch with choice of soup, wilted spinach or mixed greens. Sandwiches begin at $2.80 including French fries or potato salad.

Tom Jones is also a charming spot for dinner — served from 4 until 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday; Friday and Saturday until 11 p.m.; Sunday from 3 until 9 p.m. Entertainment and dancing is

Collecting Old Slot Machines A Ticklish Business-Hobby

By ELAINE SMYTH

Bob Strauss is the first to admit that his latest hobby "is a ticklish business all away around."

To begin with, because collecting slot machines was illegal until a few months ago, Strauss and his friend Sue Raffee have been hesitant about showing it off.

And although Nevada is the most logical place one would seek out additions for a slot machine collection, state law forbids it, Strauss says.

"It's illegal for Nevada residents to sell a coin machine to anyone out of state," he says.

Still, somehow, the Stauss collection of slot machines manufactured before 1941 continues to grow.

Stauss is a real estate broker in La Jolla, Calif., and Raffee is an interior designer who specializes in commercial structures.

The slot machine bug bit Stauss about 18 months ago and then it bit Raffee, he said. He completely restores the machines to working order and she has the delicate – and time-consuming – job of painting each one. They now have 14 different machines that range in value from $400 to $1,500.

"Once a year Harrah's in Reno has an auction and prices range from $500 to $11,500," Raffee said.

"I started off collecting antiques," Stauss said. "You know, necessity is the mother of invention.

"Actually, I moved into a house without any furniture.

"At first I bought junk from junk stores and fixed it up, and then I moved on to antiques. I found I had a house full of antiques, so I started to collect some of the things you don't need, like slot machines.

"As soon as people learn they're legal, they'll start coming out of the closets with them," Stauss added.

Until legislation was signed by California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Sept. 15, possession of slot machines was termed a misdemeanor under the state's Penal Code. Owners were subject to questioning by police department vice unit officers, a fine and possible jail sentence.

The new legislation (AB-4173), which became effective the day Brown signed it, was specifically designed to protect the collection and restoration of antique slot machines (those manufactured prior to 1941) "because of their aesthetic interest and importance in California history."

Stauss and Raffee have delved into the history of slot machines, which were invented in San Francisco in 1895 by Charles Fey. They think.

"There's some question on this because you can't patent gambling devices and because of that, people started stealing each other's ideas," Stauss said.

Stauss said his research indicates Fey didn't sell his slot machines. Instead, he placed them in bars, nightclubs, restaurants, grocery stores – wherever he could. Fey and the shop owners shared in the profits.

The arrangement apparently worked fine until a man from Chicago came to San Francisco, hired Fey's plant foreman and brought him back to Chicago where the Chicagoan began manufacturing slot machines under his own name.

Then, in the 1930s when slot machines began to be classified as illegal in some states, owners resorted to tampering with them to change their legal status as gambling devices, Stauss said.

Some slot machines became music boxes "and it was just an extra bonus if you got some money from them when you put money in them to hear the music," he added.

Each time law enforcement officials closed a loophole in the law against the machines, owners devised still new ways to change their character.

Some put skill buttons on the windows and called them skill machines, and other owners installed fortune-telling devices on the machines to get around the law.

"People tried every loophole in the world to make them legal and the law repeatedly came back and closed those loopholes," said Stauss.

Slot machines became illegal in every state except Nevada following World War II, he added.

CRACKER CRUMBS .....

Producer Howard Hughes Wanted Real War For His 'Hell's Angels'

By HARRY GRAHAM
Register Staff Writer

The model airplane crashed into the side of the dirigible, and both exploded. Or so it seemed.

We saw a red flash and heard the blast as debris showered onto the floor in front of the stage.

Barney Korn was showing Cross and Cockade members and their guests how some of the crash scenes had been rigged for the filming of Howard Hughes' "Hell's Angels" 50 years ago.

The Hollywood special effects technician said the multi-millionaire director-producer of the World War I air battle epic had bought up more than 50 warplanes to use in its filming.

Hughes wanted his air war to be real, but the crashing of the plane into the side of the dirigible was among several scenes in which it was necessary to use models.

Only in his early 20s when he began the picture, which was three years in the making, Hughes wanted it to be the greatest movie ever made.

It wasn't even close.

But it was the greatest movie ever made about World War I air warfare, says Cal State Fullerton aerial history instructor George Holmes, who was my host at the Redondo Beach meeting of World War I air historians.

Korn, a tiny man in his 70s, agreed with Holmes' observation about the film. He used slides of still shots made during "Hell's Angels" filming to complement his working model in illustrating how the battle scenes were staged.

After he had finished, the uncut picture was shown. The film itself had deteriorated badly and the sound was poor most of the way through, but I found it worth sitting through.

Jean Harlow, Ben Lyon and James Hall were billed as the stars, but Holmes said he thought the World War I planes and their pilots were the real stars.

I'd seen the flick in 1931, when I was 13 years old, and had forgotten most of it.

But when the ghostly German dirigible slithered through the clouds to bomb London I shivered, just as I probably had done 46 years ago.

I'd never forgotten how the observer who had been lowered by cable from the dirigible was cut loose when the commander needed to lighten the load to elude the British planes.

Following the young officer to his death were half a dozen other Germans who were ordered to jump "for the Fatherland."

Then the British pilot dived his plane into the dirigible, and the airship burned dramatically as it slowly floated earthward.

Korn said the studio cameras had been raised slowly as the 28-foot-long model dirigible burned, creating an illusion that the airship was falling.

The screen flared into a brilliant red as the dirigible was consumed by flames. Hughes had achieved this effect by using a red film strip back in the days before color film had been perfected.

The aerial dogfights were magnificent. The World War I planes roared across the skies whittling each other to ribbons with blazing machine guns.

Three men lost their lives in plane crashes during the making of the picture.

Max Holtzem, a German pilot during World War I and a member of the Cross and Cockade, pointed out a tactical error in the movie. Von Richtofen's squadron had made a V formation to attack the Allies.

"We didn't fly in a V at that time," said Holtzem. "That came later."

I found I had made an error in stories I had written about Costa Mesan Stan Dunn's invention of a film bullet for "Hell's Angels" that gave the illusion of having made a hole in a man.

Dunn, who was property master during the filming of the movie, had used a sponge rubber bullet saturated in red glycerin for the death scene when Hughes demanded realism.

I wrote that the bullet plowed into Lyon's chest. I was wrong. It hit him in the back, making what appeared to be a bloody hole.

It seemed as real as Korn's dirigible crash.

Far Out Is In Style Today

By SALLY C. ESTES

Now that NASA's Viking probes have landed on Mars, scooped up surface particles for analysis, and determined that they grabbed no living matter – what next?

Science fiction writers have explored several schools of thought on exactly what to do with a planet uninhabitable by human beings. Frederik Pohl deals with one possibility in his intense, provocative novel, "Man Plus." A secret U. S. project is preparing astronauts to live on Mars without external artificial aids by reshaping the human body through surgery and technology.

Astronaut Roger Torraway finds himself on the firming line when the first "Bionic Man" dies in training shortly before the target date, a date set by the President in order to win the race to colonize Mars and preserve peace on earth. Roger must quickly accept the inevitable – that some of his flesh is going to be replaced by steel, cooper, silver, plastic, aluminum, and glass.

The team takes Roger apart and puts him back together with motor-driven muscles, a revised nervous sytem, new mecanical eyes, artifial skin, solar panel wings to protect him from radiation, and more – until in human eyes, including those of his wife, he appears a monster.

Mars through Roger's eyes is a very real place and also the scene of an ironic twist, only hinted at earlier in the story.

Larry Niven takes us even further afield, in both space and time, in his rambling, almost two-part novel, "A World Out of Time."

Jaybee Corbell, a "corpsicle" frozen since 1970, is revived in the 21st century to discover he has absolutely no choice – either he'll be a starship pilot for the state or his personality will be erased and his body recycled.

Two weeks of intensive training and injections of memory RNA prepare him for his task. On the far side of Jupiter, he decides to alter the starship's course so he can explore the galactic hub on his own. In the far reaches of space, he skirts a black hole that thrusts him three million years into the future and within reach of earth.

Most of the story involves Corbell's adventures on a vastly changed earth where the sparse population consists of mutants – products of genetic experimentation eons earlier.

This humankind in the future borders on extinction, until Corbell becoms a catalyst for change – in a sometimes confusing but still intriguing story.

Earth in the 21st century is the setting for Robert Silverberg's intricate, involving and enjoyable tale, "Shadrach in the Furnace."

Genghis II Mao IV Khan, wily tyrant of the reconstituted world, is about 87 years old. Because he wants to postpone death indefinitely, his body is a mass of artificial and transplanted organs. Charged with safeguarding the Khan's precious life is Dr. Shadrach Mordecai, whose own body contains surgically implanted "perceptor nodes" to constantly monitor the Khan's vital signs.

But the Khan knows that this patchwork surgery can't go on forever, so he has scientists working on surer methods of prolonging his life. The most promising involves inserting his own mind and soul into the body of a younger, handsome and healthy man.

When the trim, muscular body of his physician catches the Khan's eye, Shadrach's friends urge him to flee. But Shadrach decides to stay, to try to outfox the Khan and to initiate social reform across the land.

Ray Bradbury's many fans will welcome "Long After Midnight," his first collection of short stories in seven years – although only a few of the 22 selections can be classified as science fiction. The poignant title story focuses on the conversation of the police ambulance crew who pick up a suicide victim in the hours before sunrise. Some of these stories are very real; some very fanciful – all bear the unique Bradbury mark.

Traffic Violators

A county judge in Wisconsin says that when traffic violators appear before him the first thing they want to know is whether their names will appear in a newspaper.

The second thing they want to know, reports the National Automobile Club, is the number of points of the violation. Wisconsin has a point system toward removal of drivers' licenses.

The third thing they want to know is the amount of the fine.

'Bubbles' Charming Story By Bev

BUBBLES: A SELF-PORTRAIT. By Beverly Sills. Bobbs-Merrill. 240 Pages. $12.50.

"I have always been a kind of fatalist," Beverly Sills observes deep in this charming memoir. "I firmly believe that what's going to happen to any of us is already written down in a great big book. Someone up there looked down one day, pointed a long finger at me and said: 'That one is going to be a singer with very high notes.' I like that notion."

So must anyone who has ever had the privilege to listen to and to watch Miss Sills as she dominates the stage. Yes, she is a singer, and, yes, she has very high notes. And what she does with this fantastic gift of hers sticks in the mind – and ears – long after the curtain has come down for the last time and the final round of thunderous applause has trickled into silence.

It was not always so. Which is the purpose of Miss Sills' funny, sad, but always engrossing book. Starting off with "When I was only three, and still named Belle Miriam Silverman," Miss Sills takes the reader on a captivating tour of her life – a highly personal story but as warm and human as the opera superstar herself.

Miss Sills, encouraged by her family, developed a love for opera early. But it was to be years before she was to rise to the top in her chosen profession. First there was the rather roundabout entry into show business via such vehicles as appearances on Major Bowes Amateur Hour on radio, some singing on a local radio show called "Uncle Bob's Rainbow Hour," being the voice of a soap on radio commercials, before the breaks started coming her way.

Step by step, Miss Sills details her climb to the very top in the world of opera and a fine story it is, full of anecdotes and very human remembrances. As an added bonus, the book contains many photos both in color and black-and-white.

Erskine Caldwell Slowing Down - 1 Book In 2 Years

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) – Erskine Caldwell thinks it's time to slow down. He used to write a book in a year. Now, he figures he'll take two to do the job.

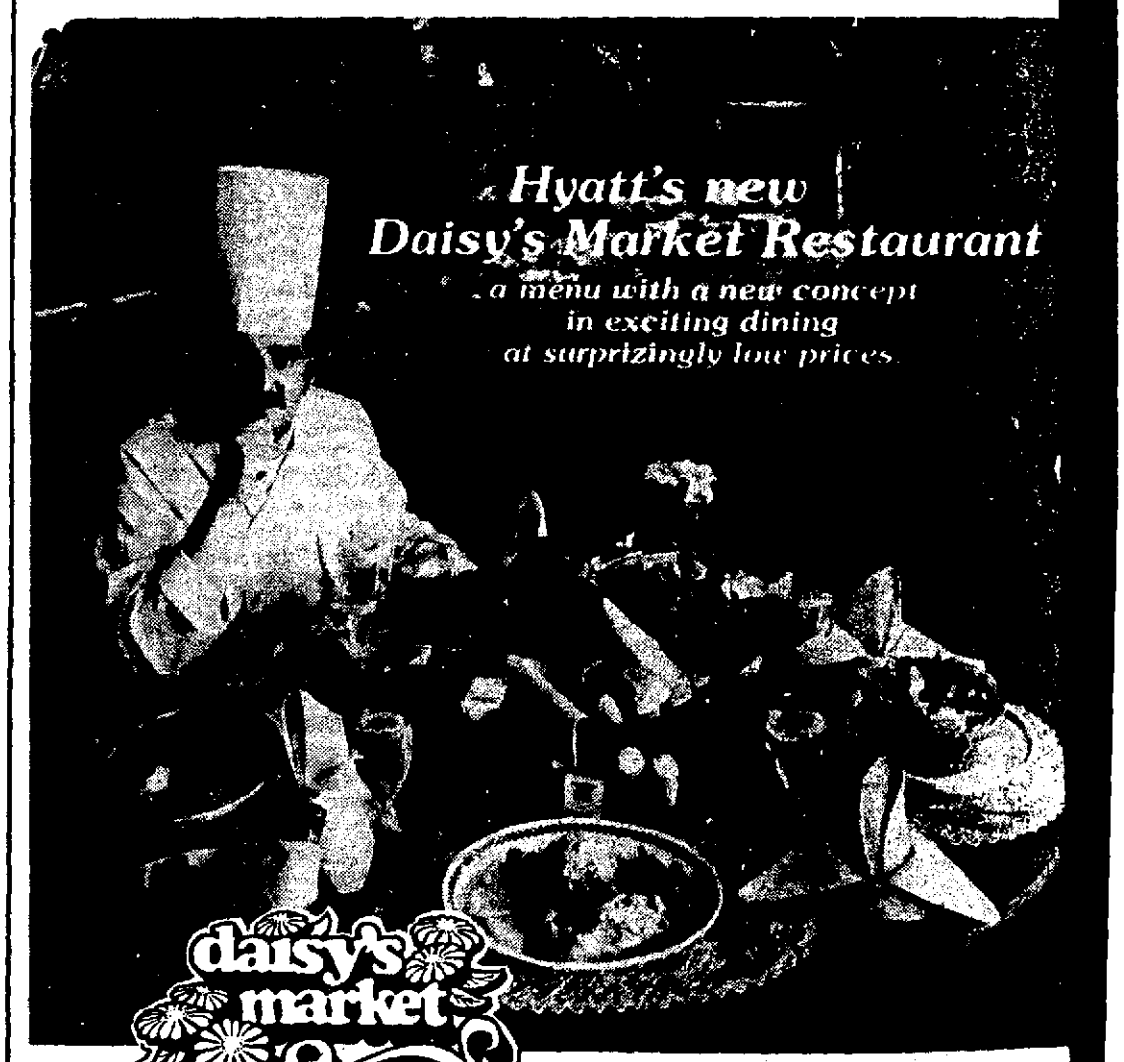
At 73, the tall, lean Caldwell – best known for his two early novels, "Tobacco Road" and "God's Little Acre," and a book of interrelated stories, "Georgia Boy" – says:

"When you're young you are in a great hurry. You want to do everything right now. But as you get older you tend to become more contemplative, more mature. So you slow down."

Caldwell recently published his 51st book, "Afternoons In Mid-America," and he has no immediate plans to do another.

"I'm not writing anything right now," he says, with a smile. "In fact, I don't want to think about writing. You have to put a book out of your head first before you can start another and this last one is still very close to me. It takes time before you can think of anything else."

Caldwell spent "two long summers" driving from Arkansas to Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma to obtain the material he needed to write "Afternoons In Mid-America."



"It was an ambition I'd had for a long time," he says. "As a boy I lived on the Mississippi River, and I always wanted to find out what was on the other side. I never had a chance as a boy to explore that other side. In later years I passed a lot through that territory – the area covered is essentially the original territory of the Louisiana Purchase – but I never had a chance to really look at it, to study it.

"So about two years ago I figured the time had come, now was the time. And I set out. I was looking to see what kind of people lived there, who they were, what they did, and what they liked, and what they disliked. It was a venture in observation as well as into the personal impressions I would get. And I was impressed by that country. It's a very important part of America."

Museums As Harbingers Of Culture

which opened Oct. 3, was sought by residents who "think of going to the city as a big production and wanted their kids to have easy access to art," said Mrs. Schweninger, program director.

Operating on a $130,000 budget from foundation grants, the museum borrowed hieroglyphics from New York's Metropolitan Museum for its first exhibit, and aims at getting children to respond actively to what they see.

"After they look at the hierglyphics, we have an easel where they write their own symbols and, occasionally, dirty words," Mrs. Schweninger said. "There's another section where they can decorate their faces."

On the campus of the Navajo Community College in northeastern Arizona, Museum curator Walters has two floors of the Ned A. Hatahli Cultural Center to fill with indian artifacts.

The museum is part of what Mrs. Bannerman calls a "trend of ethnic groups responding to a lack of correct handling of their culture."

It opens in February with an exhibit of weavings lent by the University of New Mexico and a "Chant Room" where visitors can listen to tapes and records of war cries and other tribal chants.

In Texas, an unprecedented wave of museum fever sparked plans for 140 new museums in addition to the present 350. That's too many, says Cindy Sherrell, director of the museum services division for the Texas Historical Society. Most of the new ones specialize in local history, but 20 are primarily for display of painting and sculpture, she said.

"We're going through a great nostalgic era," she said, "Once a town starts a museum, you get the old American competitiveness where another town 30 miles away has to have one too."

For example, she said, in Yorktown, a south-central Texas community of 2,723 persons, "somebody donated two buildings, they raised $65,000 and now they have a museum."

Mrs. Sherrell said she "tries to discourage" museum projects in communities that may be unable to support them once the initial private contributions have disappeared.

"I'm afraid more than 20 per cent of the new art museums will be closed within a few years," she said. "Most of them are relying on traveling exhibitions, and they just don't have the funds for local paintings."

Other areas of the South besides Texas also are experiencing rapid cultural growth.

Atlanta's High Museum of Art keeps no precise attendance figures, but it reports steadily rising attendance as "we've had more and more exhibits and we've added two new galleries," a spokeswoman said. "We're growing with the city."

In Birmingham, Ala., the 17 year old Museum of Art is getting 1,500 more visitors a month than last year, when total attendance was 85,000. A new wing has expanded floor space from 68,000 to 88,000 square feet. And the museum recently presented the largest show ever in this country of the work of Israeli sculptor Yaacv Agam.

"It's really astonishing when you realize that 25 years ago there was not even a museum here," said director John Farmer.

One of the few museums reporting a major attendance decline is the Detroit Institute of Arts, where economic troubles forced a shutdown a year and a half ago. Three weeks later it reopened, but for only five days a week instead of six, and with a donation requested at the door.

Attendance this year is down 45 per cent, from 555,000 to 300,000 and officials say part of the reason is lingering public confusion about whether the museum is open at all.

Noble, who besides heading the national association is director of the Museum of the City of New York, said museums are "already beginning to come out of their budget crises. The arts always operate about a year behind the rest of the economy.

"But even with money scarce, art has kept its new place in American life. This was really brought home to me at a print shop in Oklahoma City," Noble said. "There they were selling good prints, everything from Georgia O'Keefe to Andrew Wyeth to abstract expressionists.

"The farmer's wife is no longer content to clip the cover of the Saturday evening Post."

Alaska's Arty Aspirations

Ready to go at last, Robert Farley, a 30-year-old native of St. Louis with wide experience in a number of leading groups, came aboard as artistic director. Actor auditions in New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco corralled a nucleus of trained talent to round out home-grown performers.

"We proved a curiosity beyond what I'd thought possible," says Farley of the 500 members of Equity who tried out for parts. "Some of them told me they just wanted to see what Alaska looked like."

After only six months up there himself, the artistic director still is awed by the state's size – "it stretches as wide as going from Savannah to San Diego."

Although most of the first season – "Private Lives" and "Clarence Darrow" are the other shows – will be in Anchorage, both the directors and the arts council want ART to function statewide, with engagements widening past Fairbanks to Ketchikan, Sitka and other communities which have shown interest.

ART already has taken over an "actors-in-the-school" program which the council initiated six years ago. Richard Clairmont is the one-man troupe this year working with pupils in nine communities that include Nome, Wainwright and Eskimo communities above the Arctic Circle.

"Getting youngsters interested is very important for future audience development," Farley points out.

High on priorities, too, is an apprentice program so that casting eventually may be all-Alaskan.

The operating budget for the first season is a modest $300,000, but at an $8.50 ticket top Brown expects that only one-third will come from the boxoffice. The Anchorage area, the state's commercial hub, has a population of about 200,000.

The legislature this year doubled ART support to $60,000, and the Anchorage municipal council has posted $55,000.

Brown and Farley on visits to New York reported enthusiastic community support for the venture. Curtain Raisers is a volunteer service organization growing rapidly under the supervision of Joan Saxton, who finds "large doses of fun and personal satisfaction."

Mrs. Saxton is not the only woman playing an important part in ART's genesis. Head of the state arts council is Jean Mackin. Her interest traces back to radio acting during childhood and involvement in Minneapolis with the community campaign that resulted in the renowned Guthrie Theater.

Another activist is Pamela Towill, a native of England who went to Anchorage because her husband is an oil company executive. Now she chairs the theater's 12-member board of directors.

Asking Dick Kleiner

No. Sumerset is a soap opera that has been rinsed away – NBC cancelled it.

DEAR DICK: In movie, "Imitation of Life," with Lana Turner and Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., can you please tell me who played the daughter of the black maid? We have a difference of opinion and would like you to settle it. MARY ANN EMS, Levittown, Pa.

In the first place, Zimbalist wasn't in that one. John Gavin was Lana's leading man. But to your question – that part was played by Susan Kohner.

DEAR DICK: I am a great fan of John Denver. Do you know that jacket that John is wearing on the cover of his album, "Spirit"? I wonder where he got it and how much? KATHY SMITH, Tucson, Ariz.

That's a one of a kind jacket. It was handmade for him by another one of his great fans, who sent it to him and he loves it.

More On Harris

plays. For example, just before I went down on location, I was in the Beverly Hills Hotel, and I met this actor, a very big star.

"He invited me for a drink and against my better judgment, I accepted. Right off, he starts bemoaning about a whole career of commercial parts, how his last picture, which grossed some $10 million, was trash. He said he did it because his wife needed money to feel secure.

"I had to leave at that moment," Harris continued. "He had wanted to be rich, wanted people to recognize him behind the sunglassas on the street. He's gotten what he wanted. Now in his 40s, he's complaining about never having played Hamlet, and blaming everyone except himself, even his wife.

"I hate that kind of dishonesty. I have no desire to be worth $20 million. I wasn't raised that way.

"As long as I can live comfortably, I don't care about the rest."

Harris has been living comfortably in the Bahamas where he has a home. But even there he does not remain the quiet-spoken gentleman. He wrote a letter to an editor about his support of Ireland's right to free itself of British rule just as the British prime minister visited the Bahamas.

"It wasn't an emotional diatribe," Harris said, "but an objective statement on the British government's unwillingness to stop the slaughter in Northern Ireland, except on their own terms.

"Apparently it caused a stir because when Queen Elizabeth was due for a visit, the Bahamian prime minister politely asked me to leave the island – for a while. He told me how bloody lovely it was having me reside there and all, but would I please get lost for a while – take a holiday or something.

"I told him I was leaving anyway to film 'Return of a Man Called Horse' in Mexico."

Harris, who usually portrays rebels and has acted the part in real life, said his own bouts with the devil have quieted to a small roar.

"I've calmed down, gave up drinking, and have absolutely no vices left except smoking three or four packs of cigarettes a day – oh, and politicis," Harris said.

Cliff Robertson 'Hyphenating'

By LUCRETIA STEIGER

HOLLYWOOD – The man in the dark blue suit loosened his blue polka-dot tie, then the top button of his white shirt. He slouched back in the chair, tapping his fingers restlessly on the table before him.

Glancing around, actor Cliff Robertson was at it again.

He was acting, pretending that he's still the newspaperman he once was still in search of the big story, still the hard-bitten, heavy-drinking, questing reporter about whom all the plays are written.

And then he relaxed and talked about his marriage to actress Dina Merrill their 8-year-old daughter, Heather, their apartment in New York and the beachfront adobe house in La Jolla, Calif., and his new movie "Obsession."

Chameleon-like, Robertson projects the part that he is participating in at the moment. Now reporter, now editor, now actor, now Robertson. He also is an observant man with gray streaks in his hair who later talks about "Hollywood types."

The fact that he's made 33 movies, from portraying John F. Kennedy in "PT 109" to winning an Oscar for "Charly," a film he wrote, directed and believed in for seven years before production, doesn't seem to apply.

"Now I'm what they call a 'hyphen,' a writer-director-actor.

"It works, because when you're writing a film, you're living with it, you can't stop living with it. And then if you're a director, you lead your actors into the mind of the writer," Robertson said in an interview.

For an actor to develop as a director-writer, Robertson said, means developing "the technical third eye," which he managed to do by shooting a television tape right alongside the movie film, then editing and redoing scenes as necessary.

"Ideally, the filmmaker needs the objective eye, because he's now representing the people. The ultimate critic is the film audience.

"You know," he said, settling back in his chair, "life seems to be a series of plateaus. After I had been acting about five years, I knew it all.

"Then after 15 years, I knew I had to say, 'Wait a minute, you don't know this or that.'

"Now, after 20 years, I'm convinced I know nothing. But the young sophomoric actor has all the answers."

He doesn't need to get away to relax from filmmaking, Robertson said – although he does enjoy tennis – because "being intensely involved in something you love is a form of inner peace." He does like to visit different parts of America.

"I get thinking 'let's evaluate,' and then I like to go to Kansas or some other region and see what's going on. Sometimes that's scouting for movie locations, but not always.

"I'm a pilot and fly my own plane. I have this business of renting old airplanes to movies and television for commercials, for example.

"I have four old biplanes, English and French, and a World War II Spitfire Mark 9, and a Messerschmitt-108 which I keep at Santa Paula, Calif.

"But I fly a Beechcraft Baron. I used to balloon, but when I married Dina 10 years ago I gave up ballooning. I also threw away my little black book.

"My wife and I have worked together six or seven times and I've written a role for her in a screenplay I'm working on. But I hope it won't take as long as 'Charly.' "

He believed in that film, for which he won an Academy Award, for seven years before getting it produced, Robertson said. "I believed that it was an unusual, human and compassionate story, a story that needed to be told. It gave me great personal gratification."

Avoiding what he calls "dystrophy of the head" is one of his main projects in Hollywood, Robertson said, and he feels that he's a private person as well as an actor.

"I like to walk around in casual clothes and meld into the crowd. Of course, you can do that easier in New York than in Hollywood. In Hollywood, there is the concept, particularly among some of the agents who go around like star-spangled dudes, that the American public expects movie stars.

"So they put their royal rainment on, cruise in their Ferrari convertibles and let the fortunate throngs gaze upon their eminence. Some of them love this, but I find it hogwash."

Big Brothers To Nickelodeons

By REX DALTON

LOS ANGELES – To Dick Carty they are more than nickelodeons, they are orchestrions, instruments of precision; and constructing and restoring them is his life.

In addition to restoring old orchestrions and player pianos, he also collects antique phonographs, builds new orchestrions, has initiated the development of a cassette converter kit for player pianos and is involved in the constructionof an unmatched line of player pianos.

What started as a hobby in the early 1950s for Carty, has become both a livelihood and a passion.

Carty's shop is a maze of pianos of every vintage and style in various states of repair.

He directs a business concern that services orchestrions and player pianos worldwide, while developing new systems to spread the joy of what he considers a dying art.

Pointing out the finer degrees of his pneumatic machines, he says, "For years after they had been made obsolete by electrical components, player pianos and orchestrions were eyesores around homes.

"People in the East cut them up and used them for firewood, just to get them out of the house.

"Their value has increased with the current acceptability of antiques; but what I want to do is insure the older ones are restored properly and enlighten people with new ones.

"To the best of my knowledge," Carty says, "no one is building new orchestrions except me."

Orchestrions are player pianos which in addition to the piano keyboard have various percussion instruments connected to the pneumatic system.

He is putting the finishing touches on the sixth orchestrion in the series of 11 he is building.

The other instruments within the raised-back portion of the upright piano include wood blocks, a triangle, a cymbal, a xylophone and a snare and bass drum.

When the orchestrions are plugged in, an electric pump, similar to a vacuum cleaner pump, develops a suction within the labyrinth of hoses which are connected to the bellows on various instruments and keys.

As the player roll turns, spaces on the roll activate an air control system causing the bellows connected to keys, wood blocks or drums to close, resulting in the desired note or notes.

Orchestrions were developed from player pianos around World War I.

The various instruments within his shop represent a chronology of pneumatic pianos.

While he owns many of them, most are shipped to him to rebuild.

Roaming around his shop, Carty discussed the background of a varied assortment of antique pianos.

Carty is involved with two separate projects which he says he hopes will allow a larger segment of the population to enjoy the pleasure of player pianos. While he doesn't sell his orchestrions, which are on display in amusement areas like the Disneyland Hotel and are available to rent, he does have a commercial aspect to his art.

"We started the engineering of components here in the shop to develop a cassette converter kit for upright Ampico player pianos," he says.

"I still own a third in the company, International Music Industries, Inc., that makes them, but the other two partners, who put the finishing touches on the kit, market and make it.

"The cassette fulfills the function of the roll, allowing a wider variety of tunes.

"I am also involved in a firm, Universal Piano Co., that is building 250 new player pianos, which will be constructed of the finest parts money can buy.

"When we get done, not one more dollar could be spent on these machines to make them any better."

Your Pet's Health

By H.P. JANS, D.V.M.

Q. I want to purchase an AKC white female toy poodle. So far I've been unable to locate one. The local pet store gave me names of two breeders. One had no white ones, and the other one didn't impress me but had a 2-week-old white one. She asked $150 or $200, which I would pay if I was sure of getting a good dog. But no one could tell me at 2 weeks. I've been studying library books on poodles and have learned what to look for. My question is, where do I locate a dog of my choice? — Mrs. T. D., Orange, Calif.

A. There are many poodles available, many of them with major medical problems.

To assure yourself of a healthy dog, do not make any purchase without having the pup checked by a veterinarian. To find available animals, you may check for breeders in major dog magazines such as Dog World or AKC Journal. You may also call veterinary hospitals in your area.

Q. At times our 7-year-old male poodle will wet on furniture and walls but not all the time. We have found the wet spots but have not caught him in the act. Still, we have rubbed his nose in it and spanked him. Do you have any idea how we can break him of this habit? — Mrs. H. G., London, Ohio

A. Your dog is merely establishing his territory on the walls and furniture.

If this is intermittent, it may be associated with some stress in his environment, such as a new animal or person. Punishment will not solve this problem. If it is some stressful situation, you may try reassuring him by spending some time in positive reinforcement like training to do a new trick, or even an old trick such as fetching or sitting up.

If this fails, castration will solve 90 per cent of the wetting problem. See your veterinarian for a discussion of its benefits.

Q. Why do I have to spend hundreds of dollars running to a vet for itches my poor dog has? The only medicine that veterinarians have anymore makes the dog dopey so he doesn't notice the itch. Until a few years ago there were prednisolone products available at pet stores which stopped these itches within 72 hours.

And without side-effects. Then the so-called "Pure Food and Drug" Administration took those off the market. — Mrs. H.P., Tacoma, Wash.

A. The Food and Drug Administration rules are designed to protect the public. Medications that contain prednisolone are very beneficial under the proper conditions, but these same medications when used in the wrong instance can make a minor problem flare into a major one. Because of this, the FDA feels that it is always wise to use prednisolone under a doctor's care. This drug is commonly avaiable in veterinary hospitals and does not usually make the animals drowsy. For further information in this regard, your veterinarian should be consulted.

When making your exposure (especially at night) and shooting with the star filter, use the same setting you would normally use for a night shot and let the star filter take care of itself.

It is possible to use the star filter in daylight, using it to create a star effect on a point reflection such as the sun on a car bumper or reflection on the surface of water. Again, check your viewfinder to see what kind of effect you are getting before making the final exposure.

Remember, you will be shooting into a bright reflection so be sure of the exposure. Beware of exposing only for the highlight and the star, because the rest will go black.

Jerry Windle will answer questions of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of Sunday Department, The San Diego Union, P.O. Box 191, San Diego, CA 92112.

Have Leaks Checked

With a half-dozen fluids affecting the safety and dependability of your car, a leak can mean trouble.

One way to find out if a leak is serious, explains the National Automobile Club, is to slide a newspaper under the area of your car where you've discovered the leak. Leave the newspaper there overnight.

The next day take the newspaper to your mechanic. After examining the fluid, he will probably be able to tell you if the leak is coming from your car's transmission, engine, radiator, brakes, power steering, rear axle, or gas tank.

Orange County and the nation lost a good friend and prominent numismatist on January 8 when Gordon Greene passed away. Gordon held major offices in many numismatic organizations. He was the past president of state and city clubs and was serving as the Executive Director of the Numismatic Literary Guild which is regarded by many as a major prestige numismatic organization.

Gordon's help to the hobby was well-known. Those who knew Gordon also were aware of his many attentions given to helping beginners. He displayed his famous Lincolnia collection and was always there to answer questions.

The hobby will miss Gordon and his legion of friends can only bow their heads in memory of one who has left us much the better for having known him.

Recent columns indicating the possibility that the cent would be replaced resulted in mail from readers stressing the desire for the retention of our Lincoln cent. Many stated that the cent is used to buy a fraction of a gallon of gas, a fraction of an ounce of meat, etc. But the logic behind the elimination of the cent as quoted by outgoing Sectetary of Treasury William Simon is that the elimination of the cent will not add significantly to inflation. He stressed that items such as groceries could still be priced in units between one and five cents and rounding of the total would only be required on the final amount. The cost of the cent will be more than its face value in 1980 and some solution must be found.

(Incidentally, not a single reader sent a list of items which could be purchased for one cent.)

Simon also asked for the elimination of the half-dollar and reduction in the size of the dollar coin. His report emphasized that both coins are rarely used and two quarters substitute for the half-dollar while a paper dollar could be used instead of the Eisenhowers. The vending machine industry desires a new and smaller dollar because the problems of inflation make it obvious that the dollar coin has a future.

What does this mean to the coin collector? If the politicians have their way and replace the cent with a two-cent piece and/or eliminate the half-dollar, interest will quickly move to both denominations by hobbyists. This is a good time to select the best coins possible from circulation "just in case".

Incidentally, the Lincoln cents are already receiving added attention and prices for uncirculated coins (especially the low mintage ones) are starting to rise. Surprisingly, the Indianhead cents, which are only available from coin dealers and fellow collectors, continue to be in demand and even the common dates(those made from 1900 to 1909 with the exception of the S-marked cents) are rising in price.

The interest that seemed to be making the Eisenhower dollars more valuable appears to have slackened somewhat but collectors visiting Las Vegas and

STAMPS

By SYD KRONISH

The first of the much heralded Silver Jubilee stamps commemorating the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the throne will be issued by Bermuda on Feb. 7. Bermuda has announced three special stamps for this royal celebration. The full color set of three will be in denominations of five cents, 20 cents and one dollar.

The five-center will feature the Queen during her state visit to Bermuda in February 1975. She is seen admiring the panoramic view from Gibb's Hill. This spot is now known as "Queen's View" in honor of Her Majesty's visit.

The 20-cent stamp bears the great gold crown known as King Edward's Crown. It contains some 440 precious and semi-precious stones weighing nearly five pounds. The original crown is believed to have been that of Edward the Confessor (reigned 1042-1066) but was dismantled in 1649. However, its name and traditions live in the crown shown on the stamp which was made for Charles II and has been used in every coronation ceremony since that time.

The one-dollar adhesive illustrates the Queen in her "Chair of Estate" in Westminster Abbey. She is seen surrounded by the Bishops of Durham, Bath and Wells, plus her Maids of Honor.

Coin collectors will be interested to know that the 1907 Indian Head $20 gold pattern coin, valued at one million dollars by its current owner, is on public display at the Old Mint Museum in San Francisco. It is on loan to the museum for six months in celebration of the completion of the restoration of the Old Mint, a national landmark building.

There is much mystery attached to this piece. It was commissioned by President Theodore Roosevelt, who rejected the design in favor of the standing Liberty fi-

Caldwell Winding Down His Writing?

Caldwell has traveled much during his life. He was born in Georgia – "very close to where Jimmy Carter lives" – where his father served as a minister. "My father went from one church to another," he recalls, "and so my family moved all over the South, I lived everywhere down there."

In later years, he lived in Maine, Connecticut, Arizona, California, served as a war correspondent stationed in Russia during World War II and currently lives in Dunedin, Fla. "I've been in Florida six years," he laughs. "Maybe it's about time to move again."

After working as a newspaperman in his youth, he decided to write stories and books and moved from Georgia to Maine. "I gave up newspapering because I wanted to try writing fulltime, and I'm still trying. When I got to Maine it was during the Depression. It was hard but I raised potatoes and things and I also reviewed books. When I finished the books I sold them for cash and that gave me enough money to live on."

Caldwell published a couple of novelettes and a book of short stories before "Tobacco Road" – a realistic study of poor sharecroppers in the South – appeared in 1932.

"That book gave me enough to live on, but it was not a bestseller at the time. It was published during the Depression and people had no money to buy books in those days. But after it was made into a stage play – it ran for over seven years on Broadway – the book kept on selling and I still get royalties from it."

Caldwell says he "had trouble with the censors" with both "Tobacco Road" and "God's Little Acre." "They were banned across the country," he recalls, "but as the years passed the banning finally came off. The banning never really bothered me. I thought it was just part of being a writer. I didn't let it bother me. I figured someone doesn't like what you do so they try to ban it."

Caldwell concludes that even though he is best known as the author of those books "every one of my books is important to me. I say what I want to say, and I don't want to repeat myself. I put in a day's work for whatever it avails me. I don't believe in waiting for inspiration because it might not come and then I'd be lost."

Things Are Booming, But Dry On Hawaii's Island State, Maui

BY ANN TERRILL

Spouting whales, dancing porpoises and deep blue water are highlights of a trip aboard one of Seaflite's jet powered hydrofoils in the island waters of Hawaii.

Just back from sampling a two and half hour trip on the hydrofoil from Maui to Honolulu, it is hard to overlook this method of travel between the major islands, and easy to recommend as something new and different.

We nearly lost our power a number of times as strong swells near Oahu offered less than the smooth sea conditions such boats demand. This two-decker vessel was making a shuttle run between Hilo, on the big island of Hawaii, from Lahaina to Maui, Oahu (Honolulu) and Kauai. On the way from Lahaina to Honolulu, you see a goodly portion of Lanai, the Dole Pineapple island, and Molokai, which is gaining in tourism these days.

The little island of Kahoolawe, which is directly opposite the resort zone of Maui with its densely built up coastline, is currently the center of controversy in Hawaii. The U.S. government uses it for a bombing target practice site, and has for many years. Many Hawaiians want this stopped. The small island has no water of its own, and any resort development would be costly.

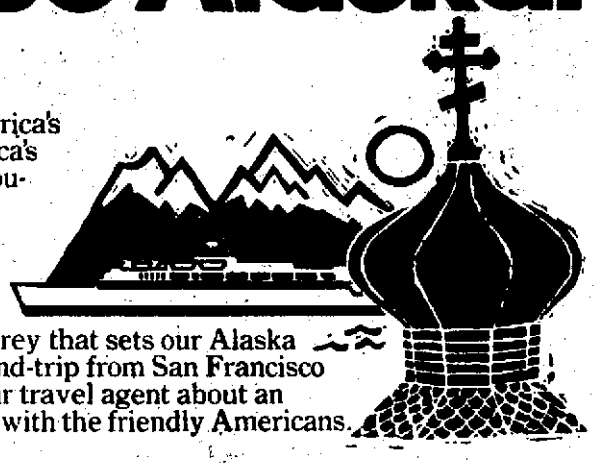
Meanwhile, Hawaii is suffering from the worst drought in its history. Maui is turning brown, and the famed Seven Sacred Pools near Hano were jokingly referred to as the Seven Stagnant Pools during a recent press meeting on Maui.

The big island of Hawaii is undergoing a set-back in tourism, and hotels and other tourist facilities are underbooked at the present time.

Meanwhile, a recent meeting on tourism held in Honolulu emphasized the fact that tourism is bread and butter to Hawaii and that it must be promoted.

Maui, of all the lovely isles, seems to be riding high. With more than one million visitors last year, the island state is currently focusing on the development of a plush and well planned resort at Wailea. Alexander and Baldwin are developers of the facility which will include at least three hotels, apartments, condominiums, stores, clubs and so forth. Seven thousand persons will be expected to inhabit the town when finished. Prices for condominiums will range from $60 thousand up.

Down the road a Japanese development company is planning a similar resort, to house at least six thousand persons, though wild figures are running as high as 60,000. The two planned communities will occupy a site at the foot of inactive volcano Mt. Haleakala. These should do much to provide more accommodations for the popular vacation island. Further to the southwest, scores of hotels, motels, apartments, luxury resorts and private homes line the shore, and a new resort is currently under construction almost halfway around the western portion of the island.



Under unique pricing and leasing/selling systems one needn't be a millionaire to vacation in a nice condominium on Maui these days. And there is plenty to see and do here and on neighboring islands.

During the next few weeks Leisuretime will cover some of the high spots about enjoying life in Hawaii.

Single Traveler Has Problems

By BETTY YARMON

What can a single traveler do to avoid the extra charges put on him or her by hotels all around the world?

Not very much. But the picture seems to be changing for the better, probably because singles have been complaining loudly and for a long time. As a result — as so often happens in American society — someone responds to a complaint by seeing an opportunity for a service business that will help others meet a need. In this case, enterprising travel agencies have been springing up to specialize in the needs of the single traveler.

The rationale for the extra charges is not hard to comprehend. Hotels, pressed economically like everyone else, explain that it costs them just as much to operate a room for one person as for two or more. Since the size of the single room generally is the same as that for two, the hotel pays the same portion of its real estate taxes. Then, heat and light and maintenance are approximately the same even though it is true that the maid has to make up just one bed rather than two.

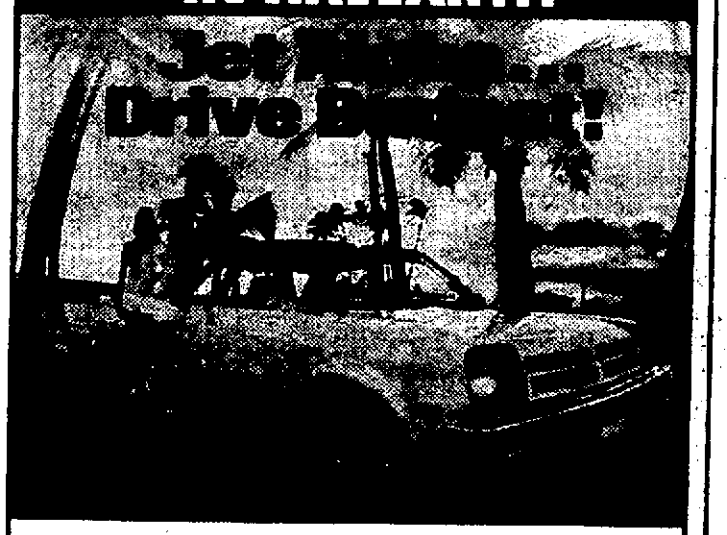
Whatever the rationale, single travelers often are charged as much as $200 or more on the more expensive tours. Beyond that, some singles complain of other discriminatory indignities, like being assigned inferior rooms, being relegated to the back of the bus, and others.

Nor is the problem going to disappear — not with as many as 50,000,000 single households already in existence in the United States. Whether they are of men and women who have never been married, liberated women who have given up family life, widows or widowers, or retired persons with the savings of a lifetime, generally they have fewer responsibilities than the rest of us, and therefore they are more able to get away.

What then can the single traveler do? Here are some possibilities:

1. — Find a compatible companion with whom to travel and share accomodations so that you will be considered a couple rather than two singles. In this way, you will, of course, avoid the surcharges. The advantage here is that your partner will be someone of your own choice, someone whose foibles and eccentricities you presumably know and understand — and who knows and understands yours.

2. — If for one reason or another you can't manage this for yourself, you can go to one or another of the travel agencies that have been forming just for the purpose of matchmaking. These agencies are in the business of trying to link up couples so that they will make up couples who will get along.



Here are a few such agencies:

Travel Mates, 580 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10036; Travel Match, P.O. Box 22, Lenox Hill Station, New York, N.Y. 10021; Company To Go, Suite 206-A, Benson East, Jenkintown,, Pa. 19046; Friends in Travel, 9300 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212; the Widows Travel Club, 17 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. You may also be able to locate one in your own community, in business for the same purpose. If not, perhaps your local travel agency can do the job for you on a one-time basis, matching those who have come in for travel arrangements and who have explained their reluctance to pay the singles surcharge.

3. — Join one or another of the so-called singles tour clubs. The largest around is Gramercy Travel Systems, of 444 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, which runs Singleworld tours. You pay a fee to join, and for it Gramercy guarantees you will not have to pay any singles surcharges. Presumably, they have enough buying muscle so that hotels are prepared to agree to this stipulation. Gramercy's Singleworld tours, incidentally, are made available to other travel agents, so you may be able to arrange to join through your own local agency.

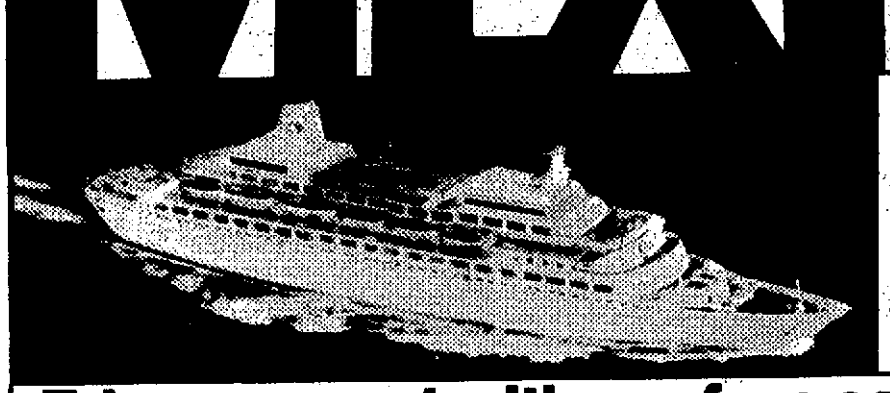
TAOS (New Mexico): A nine-day snowstorm at this resort was quickly spread around the country and for the first time there have been waiting lines at the lifts, according to an informant. The lack of snow in some parts of the nation brought an unusual bonanza to Taos. Records were set every day as beds in the Valley were turned into black market items and true Taos afficionados shrugged shoulders in dismay. It was situation "unwanted."

At the ski area, everyone prays for snow at brother resorts in order to reduce the mass inflow and allow a return to the more relaxed and cordial Taos ambience.



The final analysis is..."Skiing in the Rockies is not up to previous years — but resorts are in full swing and many skiers who aren't used to the Rockies superlative norm are finding the skiing and entire resort experience quite special."

SHIRLEY TEMPLE BLACK: "When I was a little girl, I had many heroes. I met Eleanor Roosevelt when I was nine years old and I think she influenced me, got me interested in human rights and human dignity for all people. I admired Amelia Earhart for getting out on her own and doing something women hadn't ever done before."

PRINCE PHILIP, husband of Britain's Queen Elizabeth, on one of the biggest problems facing the world and the compromise we must make: "The most important compromise is to control our rate of breeding. The world is simply overpopulated, and either we get out of this by self-control or it will be solved for us by disaster. Meanwhile, it is only reasonable to save what we can out of the natural environment. Development planned with consideration need not damage the natural environment, and it is up to the communities to see that it does not damage the human environment. Like all good ideas, conservation has given rise to extremists. There are a lot of religious fanatics about, but they do not invalidate the basic message of, for example, the Christian gospel."

TRIP OF THE WEEK

Whiskey Gulch Where Action Is

In the old days, Kernville was known as Whiskey Flat. The name was earned when a bartender came to a small mining settlement nearby and set up his bar on a clear-off level spot near the Kern River. In those days, the region was wide-open and miners were busily gouging holes in the Greenhorn Mountains, as well as along the rocky riverbed. The gold and silver fever had gripped California and Kernville was not ignored.

Today, Kernville is actually under the waters of Lake Isabella, a man-made body of water formed from the Sierra run-off and from the waters of the Kern River, which meanders through the new town of Kernville. Some of the old buildings were moved from the lake to the dry shore where the town now sits. But visitors to Kernville are often amazed to see rows of trees and other things sticking up from the lake. Such bricabrac make good homes for fish, and fishing is good here, in season. So are raft-runs on the river, also in season (Inquire of the chamber of commerce for details).

Meanwhile, Kernville takes it annual nostalgic look at history Feb. 17-20 with Whiskey Flat Days. Events will include a barbecue, tours of old mining camps, beard growing contests, fiddlers, frog-jumping contests, and greased pig contests.

Motels are sparse but they're there. Secluded nooks along the river are often available.

The mountains, which are a backdoor to Sequoia National Forest (NOT the park of the same name) are covered with snow right now, though conditions may change almost overnight.

If planning to attend Whiskey Flat Days, it is best to phone ahead for reservations. Contact the chamber of commerce for information.

To reach Kernville, take Interstate 5 north of Bakersfield to the Kernville turnoff, and follow the highway, which is part freeway, to town.

Fatalities, Injuries

Forty-six thousand fatalities and almost two million disabling injuries, reports the National Automobile Club, occurred as a result of motor vehicle accidents in the United States in 1975.

The total cost, including wage losses, medical costs, insurance administrative costs, and property damage costs, was more than $21 billion.

Senate Overhaul Of Panels Voted

Cuts 'To Increase Efficiency'

WASHINGTON (AP) – In what one lawmaker calls "the most sweeping reorganization of either body of Congress since the early 19th century," the Senate is revamping its committee structure to increase efficiency.

The plan approved Friday reduced the number of Senate committees from 31 to 25 and is expected to trim the total of subcommittees from 174 to about 125. It also limited the numbers of committees and subcommittees a senator can serve on.

"It's the most sweeping reorganization of either body of the Congress since the early 19th century when the committee system, which is the heart of Congress, was first created," declared Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., who chaired a special bipartisan study panel that recommended the restructuring. He was also the chief sponsor of the final plan approved 89 to 1 Friday.

Stevenson's panel had recommended an even broader reorganization to cut the number of committees to 15. But in the Rules Committee and on the floor several committee chairmen and their allies succeeded in preserving their panels.

One who did not was Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., who was the prospective chairman of the now abolished Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Burdick cast the lone vote against the reorganization.

The Space and District of Columbia committees also were abolished, along with the Joint Atomic, Joint Congressional Operations and Joint Defense Production committees. The House must agree to the elimination of the joint panels, but is expected to do so.

The abolished committees' functions and staff will be absorbed by other committees, but some staff may be fired after July 1.

Several of the 25 remaining committees have only a short-term lease on life. The Nutrition Committee will survive only until the year's end with its membership reduced from 14 to 9. Two joint committees on printing and the library also may be eliminated later if the House agrees. A new Indian Affairs Committee was established for two years only.

Stevenson said the chief failures in the revamping action were the continuation of the Small Business, Veterans

'Conservative GOP' Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) – Ronald Reagan called Saturday night for a "New Republican Party,' rebuilt on conservative principles and shed of its country club image.

"My friends," Reagan told the Conservative Political Action Conference, "the time has come to start acting to bring about the great conservative majority party we know is waiting to be created."

Although some of the ideas in his speech at a "Salute to Ronald and Nancy Reagan" dinner had been floated earlier, it was the first comprehensive presentation of his blueprint for the conservative future and his strongest personal assertion of leadership since his presidential campaign died just short of nomination last August.

Related Story, Page D4

Reagan said the answer for conservatives is not to start a third party but to seize and restructure the GOP.

"I believe the political success of the principles we believe in can best be achieved in the Republican party," Reagan said. "I believe the Republican party can and should provide the political mechanism through which the goals of the majority of Americans can be achieved.

"For one thing," he said in his text, "the biggest single grouping of conservatives is to be found in that party. It makes more sense to build on that grouping than to break it up and start over.

"Rather than start a third party, we can have a new first party made up of people who share our principles."

Reagan has suggested that the Republicans look for a new name, but he said in the meantime he would call the dreamed of conservative majority "The New Republican Party."

"The New Republican Party I envision will not, and cannot, be one limited to the country club-big business image that it is burdened with today," the former California governor said.

Frigid East Still Reeling

By The Associated Press

The eastern half of the nation was put to the test last week as blizzards and frigid weather turned everyday life into a struggle for endurance and put severe strains on supplies of natural gas.

By Saturday, the worst of the cold appeared ended for most areas. But the problems caused by the weather were far from over.

Rapid passage of energy legislation requested by President Carter enabled the administration to divert natural gas from the West and move it to fuel-starved areas of the East and Midwest.

But there was not enough fuel to reopen factories which have a low priority on the list of natural gas users and an estimated 1.5 million American workers remained off the job.

Schoolchildren in many areas got an unexpected holiday as classrooms were closed to conserve natural gas needed for homes and hospitals.

The cost of the cold was still mounting. The legislation that enabled Carter to allocate gas to places where it was needed most, also allowed pipelines to temporarily purchase the fuel at prices higher than current federally regulated levels.

Utilities said the higher priced natural gas mixed in with regular supplies would not cause a severe boost in customers' bills. But there were estimates that the cold itself would add billions to heating costs as well as food prices.

The week started with a snowstorm that hit hardest at Buffalo, N.Y., virtually isolating the city. Thirteen persons died in the upstate New York community; they were among nearly 100 cold victims across the country. As the week wore on, the snow continued intermittently.

President Carter on Saturday declared nine northern and western New York counties, including Buffalo, a disaster area.

"This is something that is rarely done except under extreme circumstances," Carter said as he signed the declaration.

It will provide unemployment assistance for the self-employed and migrant workers, low-interest loans for businessmen and home owners, and emergency food stamps.

Carter Bids To Remold Bureaucracy

WASHINGTON (AP) – In a first step to redeem a major campaign promise, President Carter has asked Congress for four-year authority to reorganize the federal bureaucracy, subject to vetoes by either the Senate or House.

Carter said the plan would provide "an efficient way for Congress and the President to work together to streamline our government."

The legislation would authorize Carter to propose reorganization plans that would automatically take effect unless vetoed by either branch of Congress within 60 days.

The President's blueprint would permit him, subject to veto, to transfer all or part of

Deserter Hunt Policy Called Too Expensive

WASHINGTON (AP) – The congressional audit agency says "it makes little sense" to spend millions of dollars hunting down military deserters because most of them eventually are expelled from the armed services anyway.

The General Accounting Office of Congress suggested that because of this Secretary of Defense Harold Brown reexamine the policy of treating military deserters as criminals in peacetime.

The GAO proposed that Brown consider "stopping the apprehension of deserters except when the individual is wanted for some specific purpose, such as another crime or security matter, and discharge them in absentia after they have been absent for a stipulated period."

Or as an alternative, the GAO said, the Defense Department and the FBI could hold back on "aggressive apprehension efforts" until a deserter has been gone long enough to indicate that he is unlikely to return voluntarily.

The investigators dismissed arguments by military officials that treating deserters as criminals deters other servicemen and women from "going over the hill."

The GAO study deals with the future and says nothing about the issue of extending President Carter's pardon of Vietnam-era draft-evaders to military deserters of that period.

Self-Reliant Amish Find Winter Easier

KIDRON, Ohio (AP) – When you're used to doing without electricity and natural gas, the winter of '77 is a lot less forbidding.

The Amish, whose religion forbids the use of many modern conveniences, have found it easier to cope with the cold than those who are accustomed to automobiles and gas heat.

"The wood had kept us warmed pretty good and the buggy can still go where a car can't," said Joe Hershberger, who gathered at the Kidron Town and Country Store with other Amish to explain the differences between their winter and the winter for city people.

Menno Hershberger, Joe's brother, had just come in from hitching his black buggy around the corner from where some motorists were running their cars to warm them up.

"Last weekend, the roads got so bad they were closed even to horses," Menno said. "But if that happened, you could always take them across the fields. We've had frozen water pipes for two weeks, but other than that, we haven't had any real problems."

The Amish home is self-sufficient in the worst of weather. Coal or wood is burned for heat, and the barn is kept warm by the body heat of animals. Canned food was put up months ago, so there is little reason for housewives to go outside.

Amish children usually have no problem with school because Amish schools are heated by wood-burning furnaces.

One of their few problems is when the Amish have to come in contact with the mechanized

Russ Flies To Arms Of U.S. Woman

NEW YORK (AP) – An American woman and her Russian fiance were reunited Saturday after a six-year wrangle of red tape.

Carol Theimer, 26, now of Manhattan and formerly of Rumson, N.J., had a joyful reunion with Vyacheslav Nepomneschy, 29, of Moscow at Kennedy Airport.

"I do not have the words to express the joy I feel after such a long wait," Nepomneschy said.

The couple, who met in 1970 when Miss Theimer visited the Soviet Union, plans to wed in April.

Nepomneschy repeatedly sought permission to leave the Soviet Union, but permission was denied until Jan. 24 when he was allowed to depart for Vienna. Once in Vienna, he caught a plane for New York.

TRAGEDY INVESTIGATIONS OPEN

Motorman Blamed In El Train Crash

CHICAGO (AP) – City transit officials blamed a 34-year-old motorman Saturday for a rush-hour elevated train collision that killed 11 persons and injured 200.

James McDonough, chairman of the Chicago Transit Authority, said the Loop elevated train system remains safe for commuters despite the collision that sent cars and passengers plummeting onto a downtown street. Some riders were buried under tons of twisted metal.

As federal and local investigators opened an investigation into the latest tragedy on the accident-plagued Loop "L," which was constructed in the 1890s, McDonough said at a news conference that safety equipment installed after the last serious crash remains in proper working order.

Although he blamed motorman Stephen Martin, who remained in serious condition in a hospital, McDonough refused to say precisely what the driver of the train had done wrong. He said investigators questioned Martin and the answers convinced him the problem was "man failure."

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told reporters the wreck should hasten the replacement of the "L," which has been troubled by a series of major accidents over the years.

Percy said the tragedy should add impetus for action on a 5-year-old plan to tear down the elevated tracks that circle the downtown district and put in a subway system.

Chicago's elevated trains and subways are the main mode of transportation to work for hundreds of thousands of workers at offices and shops in the downtown district.

In 1972, state officials announced that the federal government had awarded $5.8 million to the city to study a Loop subway to replace the "L." Chicago recently got another grant of $3.5 million for engineering and environmental studies for the project.

Although officials said they hoped to get the project rolling before this year, the plan supported by both the late Mayor Richard Daley and acting Mayor Michael Bilandic, tentatively known as the Franklin Street subway, has been stalled. The city says it lacks money to begin the work.

McDonough said he was "confident that the CTA sys-

Snow Hampers Aid To Loaded NY Oil Barge

BEAR MOUNTAIN, N.Y. (AP) – Ships and equipment were rushed here Saturday night as the Coast Guard battled to prevent the sinking of a foundered barge carrying 2.5 million gallons of heavy fuel oil.

The partially submerged barge leaked oil into the icy Hudson River, a Coast Guard spokesman said. But he added, "It's not possible to estimate how much oil has been lost because it appears to be under the ice."

The barge apparently struck an underwater rock two miles north of Bear Mountain on Friday night.

Weather conditions at the scene of the accident deteriorated rapidly Saturday. At nightfall the salvage operation was conducted in 40-mile-per-hour winds, with snow falling in the subfreezing temperature.

A Coast Guard team of anti-pollution specialists and heavy-duty pumps were flown to the scene from North Carolina in an attempt to speed the transfer of fuel and water.

Fair Skies

Fair skies will continue to favor Southern California, forecasters said Saturday. The weather bureau says temperatures will be a little lower today and higher Monday, with highs of 72 today and 75 Monday.

Reagan Pitches Conservatism

I am speaking about is going to have room for the man and woman in the factories, for the farmer, for the cop on the beat and the millions of Americans who may never have thought of joining our party before but whose interests coincide with those represented by principled Republicans," he said.

Reagan also said the foundation of the new version of the party should be the conservative platform which his followers hammered through the 1976 Republican convention.

Reagan pictured a political majority built on a grass-roots, populist conservatism, resting on economic rugged individualism, an aversion to social engineering and a demand for military strength.

Despite his call for high principle and doctrinal purity, Reagan said he does "not view the new revitalized Republican party as one based on a principle of exclusion."

"After all," he said, "you do not get to be a majority party by searching for groups you won't associate or work with. Conservatism is not a narrow ideology nor is it the exclusive property of conservative activists. We are not a cult. We are members of a majority. Let's act and talk like it."

Earlier, former New York Sen. James Buckley, who won as a Conservative and lost as a Republican, also told the conference that the Republican party is still the only practical vehicle to conservative victory.

"Whatever its past flaws and problems, the Republican party represents the instrument by which the necessary political realignment of this country can be achieved," Buckley said.

But Buckley said if the GOP is to win, it must "go about the job of transforming itself" and "rediscover a sense of purpose.

The former California governor, tanned and vigorous as ever, shows no signs of giving up his leadership of the conservative wing of the Republican party. And he doesn't count himself out of presidential politics in 1980. He turns 66 today.

"I don't know where I'll be in 1980," is Reagan's way of keeping the door open for 1980 without committing himself to a campaign.

Reagan's message on the stump also hasn't changed much in the past decade – an ode to free enterprise and a collection of horror stories of the government bureaucracy.

"My attention now is on 1978," Reagan says. "My attention is going to be on seeing if we can't whittle away at that (Democratic) majority in Congress and the state legislatures."

To help him in that whittling process, Reagan has about $1 million left over from his "Citizens for Reagan" presidential campaign fund.

That money has been placed in a new organization with the same CFR initials, "Citizens for the Republic," with Ronald Reagan as chairman and Lyn Nofziger, Reagan's longtime political adviser, as salaried executive officer.

The new CFR will use the 1976 campaign surplus to help friendly candidates, and it will also be a vehicle to raise more funds, said Nofziger.

Don't believe those stories that former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller is retiring from politics, Reagan said in a column published Friday.

"It's about as likely as the sun suddenly reversing course and setting in the East," the former Republican California governor said, describing Rockefeller as "my old friend and sometimes adversary."

"Nelson Rockefeller instinctively likes to be in the arena in the thick of things. And, it is hard to imagine him just sitting on the porch at his estate, watching the world go by," Reagan wrote.

"In fact, don't bet on it. ...Wielding power seems to be something he just accepts as the natural state of things," Reagan added.

But he cited the "many influential scholars and administrators (who) owe patronage to the Rockefeller resources.

"Two of President Carter's cabinet members, Treasury Secretary (Michael) Blumenthal and Secretary of State (Cyrus) Vance, were members of the executive committee and the board of the Rockefeller Foundation."

Reagan said Blumenthal and Vance have also served on a commission organized by David Rockefeller, and that Carter's National Security Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski and Secretary of Defense Harold Brown also served on the David Rockefeller commission.

In addition, Rockefeller holds "large amounts" of stock in Blumenthal's Bendix Corp. and IBM, for which Vance, Blumenthal and HUD Secretary Patricia Harris have served as members of the board of directors.

"Nelson, even in retirement, your magic spell is everywhere," Reagan concluded in the column, distributed by King Features to about 100 newspapers.

WILLIE JOHNSON HOLDS 'FLOWER GOAT' BILLY JACK AT JUNKYARD WEDDING
Elsa Morales and Don Crabtree, Center, Were Married By The Rev. Browne, In Foreground

Junkyard Wedding Has 'Old' Values

By PAUL CHAPPLE
Register Staff Writer

HUNTINGTON BEACH – When guests arrived for the wedding Saturday of Elsa Morales and Don Crabtree, they were cautioned to be wary of the flower boy; he had been known at times to butt people just for the joy of it.

But Billy Jack, who is a goat, behaved beautifully throughout the entire ceremony, not once butting anybody as the Rev. James Brown, Santa Ana, soberly intoned the wedding vows for the happy couple.

Billy Jack bedecked with flowers was held in check by Willie Johnson. Jim Ellis, proprietor of the J & L Auto Wrecking Yard, also attended the 3 p.m. ceremony.

Elsa and Don, both helpers at J & L Auto Wrecking, say they fell in love some weeks ago. "It just sort of happened," said Elsa happily. "I always wanted to be married in a junkyard," agreed Don with a smile.

It was the first marriage for Elsa, 24, and the second for Don, 41. Both reside in Santa Ana. Best man for the occasion was Norman King.

"We wanted nothing fancy," said Don. "Sort of a 'come as you are' thing is what we figured."

"Honeymoon?" said Elsa. "We kind of wanted to go to Las Vegas, but that takes money, so –," and her voice trailed off.

Surrounded by old De Sotos, beat-up Mustangs, aged Buicks and some clobbered Chevies and Fords, Elsa and Don tied the knot as J & L's three watchdogs looked on approvingly.

Naphtha Spill, Blast Rocks River Barge

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) – Firemen fought for nine hours to extinguish a flaming spill of volatile fuel they called "liquid dynamite" Saturday after a barge exploded on the Mobile River.

The barge, one of four carrying an estimated 4 million gallons of highly flammable naphtha, crashed into the Cochrane Bridge shortly before 5:30 a.m., sending a shudder across this port city.

No injuries were reported, but the blast turned into a raging fire five miles north of downtown Mobile.

Winds and currents kept the fire from spreading to the other three barges. The fire finally was extinguished late Saturday afternoon. The extent of damage to the bridge was not immediately known.

Weather Keeps Balloon Down

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) – Winds continued to refuse to cooperate for balloonist Karl Thomas Saturday, forcing still another delay in his attempt to resume the next leg of his stalled cross-country flight.

Thomas had planned to lead Hope, Ariz., early today, landing his 95-foot-tall hot air balloon somewhere north of Tucson later today or early Monday.

But the latest weather reports indicated that the winds would not cooperate until at least this afternoon before permitting Thomas, 28, of Troy, Mich., to continue towards Florida.

Amish

20th century. Last week, for example, the Amish had some trouble getting their milk to market because the dairy trucks which pick up the farmers' milk couldn't travel the ice-slicked roads.

Joe Hershberger had another problem last week when he couldn't get his horse shod because the blacksmith's truck got stuck in the snow and the blacksmith couldn't open his shop.

Hershberger said that many outsiders often wish they had to do without mechanical contrivances.

"They say they wish they could live like us," he said. "They could – it's a choice. We're used to nothing else. We have problems, too, with the winter, but we've looked forward to supplying our own needs. With something like this winter, the conveniences are all cut out for the people who need them...For us, it's just an old fashioned winter."

Senate Panels

Affairs and Aging Committees. The constituencies they serve lobbied hard against having these panels merged into other committees.

The action clears the way for the Democrats and Republicans to make committee assignments for the present Congress. The 18 freshmen senators have received only temporary places on committees so far. Some other senators are also expected to shift around.

With some exceptions, senators will be limited to serving on three full committees and eight subcommittees. The average now is 18 committees and subcommittees and some senators serve on more than 30.

The reorganization is expected to allow senators more time to concentrate on particular fields and to afford new senators greater opportunities to share in the work of Senate committees.

It also is designed to eliminate much of the present fragmentation in the legislative jurisdiction of committees. A new Committee on Energy and Natural Resources will have wide jurisdiction over energy matters, now scattered among several committees. A Committee on Environment and Public Works will handle environmental measures.

The plan also provides for more equitable apportionment of committee staffs between the majority and minority parties and computerized scheduling to avoid conflicts in committee meetings and Senate sessions.

The committee system had not been overhauled for 30 years.

Motorman Blamed

tem is safe ... and even though the investigation is not complete and is very preliminary" the cause was "man failure."

"The motorman indicated that the equipment was properly functioning," he said.

Besides refusing to say what led him to the conclusion, McDonough also declined at the news conference to detail CTA regulations involving the distance that a motorman must maintain behind the train ahead of him.

Preliminary testing of Martin for drugs or alcohol proved negative, McDonough said.

Although he described the system as safe, he added in response to a question: "Everything is subject to man failure."

Earlier, McDonough suggested a "nudge" theory of how the collision could have happened. He said it was possible that the motorman may have nudged his train forward, cheating on a multi-million dollar automatic safety system installed after the last major wreck on Jan. 9, 1976, when two persons were killed and 333 injured.

McDonough said that there is a button that a motorman can press to override the safety system. But he said that to do so the driver must shatter a panel of glass. He said the glass on Martin's train is cracked but not shattered.

But McDonough said there also is a system under which the motorman can cheat on the system and bring the front of his train closer than regulations allow to the rear of the preceding one.

"The only way the motorman can get that close is to brake when the safety beeper starts, then start again and nudge forward some more, then brake again, and nudge again, and so on," McDonough said.

Some CTA workers have said that this practice is not uncommon at rush hour.

Asked about the possibility of criminal charges being filed in connection with the crash, CTA spokesman Tom Buck replied: "It's not under consideration at all."

Meanwhile, investigators for the National Transportation Safety Board arrived in Chicago to begin searching for the cause of the crash.

Milton Pikarsky, chairman of the six-county Regional Transportation Authority, which finances the CTA, announced plans for a panel to investigate the crash. He named Richard D. Buck, a director of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, to head the group.

Martin's train, a Lake-Dan Ryan train bound for the western suburb of Oak Park, slammed into the rear of a Ravenswood train headed for the Northwest Side, at about 5:30 p.m. at Lake Street and Wabash Avenue. The lead train was stopped on the tracks.

Witnesses said there was a loud crack and a flash of white light as the coaches derailed, sending passengers on a horrifying trainride into space. As the cars fell, shrieking riders tumbled from windows and fell to the street only to be buried under falling wreckage. Others were trapped inside the mangled coaches.

Two cars lay in the street on their sides. One came to rest with one end on the pavement and the other leaning against the superstructure that supports the tracks. A fourth dangled from the girders, one end resting on one of the horizontal coaches.

The passengers sobbed and moaned. A witness heard a girl screaming, "My mother is dying in there ... my mother is dying in there."

Carter Bureaucracy War

an agency's functions to another; abolish functions, consolidate activities of several agencies and change agency names. He could neither create nor abolish Cabinet departments, nor could be consolidate two or more departments into one.

During the campaign, Carter said he thought "the present 1,900 federal departments can be reduced to no more than 200 with a great savings in tax money and a streamlining of services to our people."

Asked if Carter still had 200 departments and agencies as a reoganization goal, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said, "Nothing has certainly changed since the campaign."

But he emphasized that any resulting personnel reductions would be achieved through attrition and not firings.

Meanwhile, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, said he will introduce a bill Monday permitting changes in the executive branch only if Congress votes its express approval.

Brooks argued that "to let the President propose and enact a law unless Congress vetoes it is to stand the Constitution on its head."

He said his bill protects the President, however, by letting him make changes in it during congressional hearings but preventing Congress from adding amendments.

Expressing hope that Brooks would come around to the President's point of view, Carter argued that any plan calling for affirmative approval of reorganization proposals by both houses of Congress would be futile – that members of both parties recognize reorganization would be stymied by such a requirement.

Powell said Justice Department lawyers have advised the White House that a one-house veto, such as that proposed by Carter, would be constitutional.

Presidents had reorganization powers similar to what Carter is asking under a law that was permitted to expire in 1973 because of congressional fears at the time about possible moves by then-President Richard M. Nixon to centralize federal authority in the White House.

The Carter bill would make several changes in the old law.

– He would not be bound by an old requirement that he could submit only one reorganization plan during a 30-day period. Carter argued there might be a need to "speed up the reorganization process by dealing with more than one plan at a time.

– The old law limited the scope of each reorganization plan to a single "logically consistent" subject. Carter wants to be able to cover more than one subject.

– Other presidents were barred from amending reorganization plans once they were submitted. Carter wants to be permitted to amend the plan within 30 days after submission, provided it has not already been vetoed.

Under the Carter legislation, filibusters would be ruled out during congressional consideration of plans by a proviso that debate on any resolution of disapproval be limited to 10 hours.

Gandhi Speaks At Stormy Rally

NEW DELHI, India (AP) – Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's first campaign rally for the March parliamentary elections ended abruptly Saturday when thousands in the crowd walked out even before the politically embattled Indian leader finished speaking.

About 100,000 persons packed the Delhi fairgrounds for the well-publicized rally to kick off the ruling Congress party's campaign, but large groups became unruly and defied baton-swinging police and the pleas of party volunteers to remain seated.

Bates Stable

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – Charles Bates, the veteran FBI agent who headed up the 19-month search for Patricia Hearst, was reported in stable condition Saturday after suffering an apparent heart attack.

Bates, 56, was stricken at his office Friday, the third anniversary of the kidnap of the newspaper heiress on Feb. 4, 1974.

Slaying Suspect Dies In Car Crash

WALDHEIM, La. (AP) – A Texas man driving home to commit suicide on his wife's grave died in a car crash while fleeing from sheriff's deputies trying to arrest him in the murder of his wife and two other persons, authorities said.

Edward Arnold may have deliberately taken his own life Friday rather than surrender, St. Tammany Parish deputies said.

A note found in Arnold's car said he was returning to Laredo, Tex., to kill himself on his wife's grave, Sgt. Keith Bruhl said.

"However, the note stated that if he was interrupted during his return trip, he would then kill himself at the time of interruption," the sheriff's office said in a prepared statement.

The 50-year-old gun collector had been sought in the January slayings of his wife, mother-in-law and stepdaughter.

His car crashed head-on into another car as he fled from deputies near Waldheim, about 30 miles north of New Orleans.

Both people in the other car, Huey Powe, 42, of Bogalusa, and his wife Lillian, 46, were seriously injured, state police said.

The sheriff's statement said a pistol was found in Arnold's car. However, the statement said it would not be known until after an autopsy today whether Arnold shot himself and lost control of the vehicle or whether he deliberately rammed the other car.

East Still Reeling

By midweek, in most areas, temperatures had moderated somewhat, moving into the 20s. "It has stabilized," said Harold Meyer of the Wisconsin Public Service Commission. "It hasn't worsened." But Meyer warned: "We aren't out of the woods until the end of February and problems could still develop in March."

Like Buffalo, Preston County, W.Va., was inundated with snow – nearly 200 inches this season. "It's unbelievable how some people are living," said Pvt. Joe Williams, 20, a National Guardsman on emergency duty in the county. "It's been below freezing in some of these houses," he said. "People are just cut off from everything."

Richard Wolfe, Preston's director of emergency services, said his part-time office has been on overtime for several weeks. "It's been a losing battle," he said. "As soon as we get a road cleared, the wind shifts the snow and buries it again."

Individuals turned down their thermostats; many, like Carter in his "fireside chat" to the nation Wednesday night, wore sweaters indoors. Businesses were required to limit their hours of operation and keep temperatures low. The curtailments cost millions. But there were some unexpected benefits.

"I love it," said A. D. Chewning, owner of a Roanoke, Va., grocery store that used to be open from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. and now operates from noon to 6 p.m. "I haven't lived for years," Chewning said. "I'm doin' almost as much business in six hours as I used to do in 17 and I'm saving on heat and electricity."

Despite the curtailments to industry and the voluntary cutbacks, the Virginia energy office reported at the end of the week that natural gas supplies were 2 per cent lower than they were on Jan. 29 when the governor declared an energy emergency in the state.

Temperatures in Ohio eased above freezing for the first time since Christmas on Thursday, but more snow fell Friday and zero readings were expected again by today. State school officials said that two-thirds of the state's school districts are closing for varying lengths of time because of diminished gas supplies. Some districts in the Columbus area announced month-long closings beginning Monday.

For some, the new week will bring an easing of restrictions. Some 7,500 persons laid off at a General Motors plant in St. Louis because of a shortage of parts from weather-struck operations elsewhere will return to work on Monday. Schools in two snowbound North Carolina counties, closed since Christmas, are scheduled to resume classes on Monday, depending on snow conditions.

The curtailments to industry will remain. Maryland's Columbia Gas Transmission Co. said curtailments would last at least through Wednesday as did utilities in most of Ohio; Georgia authorities said some plants would not be able to reopen until spring.

A 10-day embargo on shipments of fresh citrus fruit from Florida ended on Thursday, but industry spokesmen said there was no major rush to get the fruit to northern markets; too many roads were still blocked. The freeze not only destroyed and damaged much of the fruit and vegetable crop, but also left 50,000 migrants out of work.

Japan Sailor Back At Sea

FORT BRAGG (AP) – A stubborn Japanese sailor, determined to reach San Francisco, was back at sea Saturday after surviving 72 days adrift in a small crippled sailboat and reduced to drinking salt water.

Tomio Ikegawa motored out of this small Northern California coastal city at 2 p.m. Friday, only 15 hours after he and his dismasted boat were towed to shore, the Coast Guard said.

Ikegawa said he was determined to sail 120 miles south to San Francisco, the goal he set for himself when he left Japan last Oct. 10.

Marcella, 'Grand Old Lady' Elephant Of Circus Retires

VENICE, Fla. (AP) – The grand old lady of the circus has packed her trunk for the last time. Marcella, the elephant, has retired.

After 29,700 performances under the Big Top, there are no more hectic road tours, glittery show girls or custom-designed wardrobes for the 7,000-pound star of the center ring.

The aging pachyderm will spend her days lazily munching apples, hay and sweet feed and roaming with giraffes and zebras in a large menagerie at Circus World.

Nobody knows for sure how old Marcella is, but she's over 60. She was brought by ship from Ceylon in 1922. In those days, under the importation law, elephants had to be at least six years old to make the long, hard voyage.

She is the oldest of Ringling Bros. Barnum & Bailey elephants, and for 55 years a mainstay of the traveling show. She had a solo dance routine as the circus played in 45 cities across the country each year.

Last week, Marcella's circus friends gave her a farewell party. There was a huge elephant-shaped cake – which Marcella ate. And a dozen fresh-cut roses. She ate them, too.

Her age shows in the deep-set wrinkles and the hollowed cheeks. Her pace has slowed. Once, with her great strength, she was able to help pull up the rigging for the mammoth tents.

"It will be a long, long time before any others retire," said Buckles Woodcock who rode Marcella 25 years ago. There are few elephants left from her generation.

Trainer Axel Gautier, who has taken care of Marcella for 18 years, is sure that if she could talk "she would tell him she doesn't want to quit."

But, if it's true that an elephant never forgets, Marcella will never be out of the spotlight.

Postal Fee Hike Canceled

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Postal Service has canceled plans to raise the cost of mailing a letter from 13 cents to 16 or 17 cents later this year, postal sources say.

The Postal Service changed its mind because of continuing improvement in the agency's financial picture, the sources said. They said the Postal Service soon will announce a surplus for the second consecutive quarter.

Previously, the Postal Service was a consistent money loser, amassing nearly $3 billion in deficits during the preceeding five years.

The mail agency already had announced a $15 million surplus for July through September 1976. The size of the latest quarterly surplus, for October through December, could not be learned, but Postal Service financial data shows a $36.3-million surplus between Oct. 9 and Dec. 3. This compares with a $289-million loss during the same period of the previous year.

Postal officials attributed the July-September profit mainly to a reduction through attrition of the number of postal workers on the payroll. They also cited a continued small increase in mail volume during the period.

Before the unexpected financial improvement, postal officials had expected to ask the Postal Rate Commission for higher rates, effective in the fall of this year.

But the sources said the surpluses will make an increase unnecessary this year.

The sources stressed that further deficits still are expected in the future because of anticipated increases in the cost of providing mail service. Pay increases are built into existing labor union agreements and officials expect cost increases due to inflation, especially in fuel costs for transportation.

"We are not out of the woods yet. But obviously there has been a significant brightening of the financial picture," a Postal Service official said.

At one time, the Postal Service had expected to lose about $1 billion during the current fiscal year. In November, Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar announced the first surplus and said he hoped this year's anticipated deficit could be held to $500 million.

The sources said there will still be a deficit for the current fiscal year but that it now is expected to be significantly lower than the $500 million.

PENTAGON WARNS

Russ Beam Weapon Research Advanced

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) – A Pentagon report says Russian scientists are conducting major research on "weapons of the future" that would demolish space satellites, missiles or other targets with beams of intense light or charged atom particles.

"We must be concerned with Soviet activities in the area of directed-energy weapons," the report warned.

The United States knows few technical details of the Soviet programs, the report said, "but the scope and degree of commitment of their interests in these weapons of the future is quite large, as judged by their investments in physical plant for research and development."

A number of veteran U.S. intelligence experts reject the idea that the Russians are anywhere near achieving a "ray gun" weapon. They say the Russians appear to be trying to master the technology that conceivably could lead to such weapons. A few intelligence specialists take a more urgent view of the possibilities.

Both the United States and Russia are known to be at work on research aimed at developing weapons using very high energy light beams generated by lasers. But senior U.S. scientists estimate it will take at least 10 years before this country can develop actual weapons. They estimate the Russians are at about the same stage.

U.S. scientists suggest that high-intensity beam devices might disable enemy satellites or disarm approaching missile warheads. They discount the use of such weapons as "death rays" to kill troops.

Many problems remain to be solved, the scientists say, including reduction of the huge laboratory devices to a manageable size.

"There was an increase in the size of Soviet facilities that we know to be engaged in high-energy laser research and development from 1971 to 1975," the Pentagon reported. It also said, "there are indicators which point to Soviet interests in particle beam technology which may have advanced weapon applications."

U.S. scientists say the Soviets are at least as far from achieving atom beam weapons as they are from a practical laser beam weapon.

The report also expressed

Senators Deny Korean's Gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) – Senators named in a purported memo allegedly based on documents of Korean businessman Tongsun Park have denied that they had received any contributions or gifts from the controversial figure.

The memo, allegedly prepared by a U.S. Customs Office agent in Anchorage, Alaska, in 1973, was released in Baton Rouge, La., Friday by Clyde Vidrine, a witness in a federal grand jury probe into alleged influence buying by Park.

Vidrine, a former employe of Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards, said he released the memo to enhance his credibility in accusations he has made about gifts which Park allegedly gave Edwards.

The Customs Office refused to confirm or deny the memo but did acknowledge that the customs agent whose name appears on the document was stationed at Anchorage on Dec. 8, 1973, the date on the memo.

The former customs official in charge of the Anchorage office acknowledged three months ago that a 1973 search of Park in Anchorage turned up a list of congressmen and that Park boasted to the agents that he had paid thousands of dollars in campaign contributions to those on the list. Government sources said at that time that Justice Deparment officials had not been able to determine if Park actually made payments to those on the list.

The alleged author of the document released by Vidrine said he discovered a listing of congressmen in a folder carried by Park when the Korean businessman entered the country at Anchorage in 1973. He said in the memo that "I estimate 70 to 80 names were on the unnumbered list."

The agent did not copy the list but did supply in the alleged memo the names of 14 persons which he said he recalled were on the Park list. Some of those on the list still are in Congress. Others have retired and some have died. One name on the list does not match any person in Congress in 1973.

Beside the list of names in the memo is the notation: "amounts shown on the lists ranged from 5 to 50; when asked, Mr. Park stated that the figures represented hundreds of dollars."

The alleged customs memo did not give first names in many cases. There was no further linking of names and figures.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, whose name was on the list, denied ever receiving money from Park and said he knew of no reason why his name would be on a list carried by Park.

"I doubt if I've ever met this guy," Inouye said. "In fact until all the publicity about him came out I didn't know anything about this."

Operations Of OC Fair 'A Mess,' Director Says

By GEORGE GREY
Register Staff Writer

COSTA MESA – Operations of the Orange County Fair are now "in a mess" said director Clint Hoose. But he said, "We think we now know all the problems and are on top of the situation."

The "problems" referred to by Hoose include allegations ranging from mismanagement, theft of equipment and supplies, financial "confusion," racial discrimination, questionable hiring practices, an investigation by the district attorney and state attorney general, the December firing of the fairgrounds general manager and recent discharge of the assistant fair manager.

Hoose, vice president of the Orange County Fair board of directors, said he was "angered and disturbed" by press accounts of the beleaguered county fair and felt there had been "many misquotes" in the press. He said the board was "slowly getting the situation under control" and hoped to have new management by March to put the fairgrounds operations "back in shape."

On Dec. 17 the board of directors fired former general manager James Porterfield and last week Jeannie Edwards, the former typist-secretary, who had been promoted to assistant fair manager by Porterfield, was relieved of duty. The explanation was that she had failed to pass her civil service examination.

"She was not fired," Hoose said, "even though some press reports said she had been fired." Miss Edwards agreed she was fired. Hoose said the problems besetting the county fair could all be boiled down to "management problems."

"We now have 166 acres of fairgrounds to maintain and operate and, of course, we have problems, but we are not under investigation. In fact," he said, "the board of directors requested an investigation from the district attorney and you will find they are investigating Porterfield, and not the board."

Robert Angelo, chief of fairgrounds security and maintenance, recently held a press conference and ticked off a "laundry list" of allegations about the county fair operations.

Among the charges Angelo said he could document and prove were allegations that the management discriminated against maintenance workers. "They paid everyone else $3.50 per hour," he said, "but the Mexican workers were paid $2.50 per hour." He said he has

Offer Of Warm Home Accepted In Wisconsin

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) – A California couple's offer of rent-free living quarters has been accepted by an unemployed electronics technician who says, "It's a little too cold in Wisconsin."

His new hosts may even have found him a job.

Tom Sampson, 55, of Fond du Lac, Wis., said Friday that he will drive to Sunnyvale as soon as his car is fixed. He says his wife Dolores, 50, and their 17-year-old daughter will join him after their house is sold.

Harold and Frances Stark had offered Wednesday to share their two-bedroom mobile home with a needy Eastern or Midwestern couple who want to escape freezing weather. Mrs. Stark said the couple would only have to provide their transportation and pay half the monthly food bill.

Sampson said he saw an As-

Sheets Of Plastic Keep Minnesota Family Warm

WAHKON, Minn. (AP) – David and Lois Bassett and their three children are snug and warm, even though several layers of plastic sheeting are all that separate them from temperatures as cold as 48 below zero.

The Bassett family is spending one of the coldest Minnesota winters on record in a shelter made of tree branches covered with polyethylene sheets.

Bassett, 25, said the winter weather scared the family a little, but they wanted to get onto their own land so he built the shelter near Mille Lacs Lake in central Minnesota in November.

It took two days to build the shelter and install a metal heating stove so Mrs. Bassett, 23, and the children – April, 5; Nathan, 1½, and Benjamin, 3 months – could move in.

The house was built by bending over tree branches to form the outline and support for it. The house has a wood back and front and see-through plastic sides. No windows were needed, but there is a vent at the top for a stovepipe and a little air for ventilation does get in because the plastic is not sealed tightly.

The wood used to warm the shelter and for cooking is scrap left by a logging company which formerly owned the land. During the day, the sun helps warm the shelter, and Bassett said one log will keep the home warm. At night it takes a little more.

"I have seen frost on the door hinges," he said.

The Bassett's home is an extension of an idea that more and more owners of conventional homes have been using to seal drafty windows in the wintertime. The Federal Energy Administration, in fact, says covering windows with plastic creates cheap and effective storm windows. The plastic is usually installed inside the house, rather than on the outside.

Visitors who step through the wooden door of the Bassett's plastic shelter know they've stepped into a home, however unconventional. There are wood floors that are washed weekly, a cook stove, a table and chairs, a bed for Bassett and his wife, a pull-down bunk for the two older children and a basket for the baby. The house has two big rooms, but only one is being used right now.

The Bassetts also have an A-frame outhouse and a well.

A big metal washtub keeps clothing and the Bassetts clean. "I can wash two loads of clothes and rinse them with 20 gallons of water," Lois Bassett said.

The kids take baths in the tub, but David and Lois hook up a coffeepot full of warm water and stand in the tub to take a shower.

"The kids have fun in the tub, but it's kind of squishy for us," Mrs. Bassett said.

The family uses three oil lamps for light during winter evenings.

The Bassetts get a newspaper on weekends and have a battery-powered radio to get news and music in the shelter, which they plan to replace with a hand-built cabin in the spring.

Response from neighbors also has contributed to the feeling of warmth in the Bassett home. "The neighbors have welcomed us really warm," Bassett said. "Everyone on the road (five families) has visited us."

COULD MEAN FURTHER PRICE HIKES

Rust Disease Invades Coffee Plantations

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) – A destructive "rust" attacking the coffee plantations of Central America could wipe out thousands of acres of plants and further drive up the record-high world price of coffee.

Coffee is the economic base for most Central American countries, and the spreading disease will pose a difficult choice for their governments: burning every plant in infected areas, or spending millions of dollars in an effort to control it.

The rust is a fungus transmitted by tiny windborne spores that can be carried to fields miles away by men and machinery. It invaded Nicaragua last November and has already infected 12,946 acres of its 266,868-acre coffee region.

"There is no doubt the rust will reach the rest of Central America. The question is when and where," said George H. Berg, director of a U.N.-sponsored project for plant protection and quarantine in Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean.

No one knows how the rust got to Nicaragua. It originated in Africa, spread across Asia and in 1960 crossed the Atlantic to Brazil. Nicaragua's first attempts to eradicate it have failed.

The governments of Nicaragua and neighboring countries have agreed to invest $20 million in a massive campaign to impede the rust's spread.

Some countries have considered stopping all imports from Nicaragua to keep out spore-carrying goods, but they have not yet acted on this proposal.

Coffee experts say the rust usually wipes out 30 per cent of production within three years, the time it takes to destroy individual plants. In some countries 90 per cent of the crop has been lost. Sri Lanka switched from coffee to tea production after the rust ruined its crops.

Dr. Dorothy Shaw, an Australian plant scientist who successfully killed off coffee rust in New Guinea in 1965, says the coffee countries must choose between total eradication and undertaking expensive control measures to retard the spread of rust.

"There may be a chance to stop it if it comes through the main ports," Dr. Shaw told a recent conference of government officials and growers in San Salvador. "However, neither you, nor I, nor anyone know where windborne spores might land. This is the difficulty I see with El Salvador."

She said eradication can be accomplished only through a scorched-earth policy – using herbicides and fire to destroy all the plants in an infected area.

"Even a delay of one day might be the difference between success or failure of an eradication campaign," she said.

Nicaragua has not yet announced which method it will follow. The other Central American countries have begun a quarantine program at seaports and border crossings, hoping to keep the rust out or at least to discover its presence quickly enough to contain it.

Central America exports about 13 million to 15 million bags of coffee a year, worth about $1.9 billion at current prices and representing about 17 per cent of world production.

Miguel Muyshondt Yudice, director general of the Salavadorean Coffee Institute, estimates the growers could lose more than $1 billion if the rust spreads uncontrolled through the Central American isthmus.

"These figures don't count the social and political problems that would result from reduced wages and unemployment," he said.

The rust has arrived as Central American growers are enjoying windfall profits from high international prices. Coffee prices in the United States have more than doubled to about $3 a pound because of severe weather problems that cut into production in Brazil and elsewhere over the past two or three years.

In El Salvador, some of these profits have been passed along to pickers, who recently received a 50 per cent wage increase and now make $4 a day.

Crossbreeding May Tame Argentina's Killer Bees

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) – Government experts are preparing to crossbreed Argentina's killer bees with a calmer strain as the first step in an effort to stop attacks on people and animals.

Swarms of the deadly bees, which originated in Africa, have attacked people four times in tropical northern Argentina so far this year, the same number reported for all of last year.

In one attack, on Jan. 6, bees killed a man on a highway in Tucuman Province. The next day, a swarm of bees attacked people at a burial. No one was reported killed in that episode. A 6-year-old boy died in the first attack in Argentina, in 1975. Scores of farm animals have died.

"First, we will try to replace all queen bees of the African or Africanized variety with calmer bees and then the law will come in with support to ban transfers of bee hives from infested areas to free areas," said Dr. Moises Katzenelson, the chief government entymologist.

He said various crossbreeding techniques will have to be tried because the African bees often kill other bees.

He said the infested areas are rain forest and tropical regions north of the 32nd Parallel below the equator. That parallel crosses central Argentina south of Entre Rios, Santa Fe, Cordoba, La Rioja, and San Juan provinces, where most recent bee attacks have been reported.

The bees are descendants of an aggressive strain that escaped from a laboratory in neighboring Brazil in 1956. There had been fears they would eventually make their way to the United States, but experts now believe the bees cannot survive outside tropical areas.

Katzenelson, who replied to questions in writing from a research outpost in the northern part of Buenos Aires Province, said it may take 10 years to bring the bees under control.

"We can say that areas north of Parallel 32 are all infested because the areas are more tropical than areas to the south which have colder climates," he said.

According to bee experts here, the recent spate of attacks was due to higher than average summer temperatures in Argentina, where seasons are the opposite of the Northern Hemisphere. If the winter season in July is harsh, the killer bees are expected to disappear until hot weather returns.

Experts say there is no way to completely eradicate the killer bees because they number in the millions and are hard to pick out because they are similar to gentler strains common to South America.

The experts said they will have to move carefully to pinpoint the exact breeding and operating grounds of the killer bees so as not to damage the regular bee industry. Argentina is the fourth-ranking producer of honey in the world.

Bee experts said an American geneticist, Dr. Robert Kerr, introduced African queen bees into Brazil in 1956 in an attempt to upgrade local strains because African bees reportedly produce between 25 per cent and 100 per cent more honey. Descendants of the 26 queen bees that escaped Kerr's laboratory were discovered in Argentina in 1967.

Munich Crash Kills 4 Yanks

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) – Four students at the American High School in Munich died when their car slammed into the rear of a parked truck, police reported Saturday.

Police said those killed late Friday night were the driver, 20-year-old Ronald Vogtmann, Michelle Finn and Sandra Webb, both 17, and an unidentified 18-year-old woman.

Michelle Finn's 16-year-old sister Catherine was injured in the crash. She was hospitalized.

Police were unable to say what caused Vogtmann, who was initially thought te be a member of the U.S. military forces in Germany, to collide with the truck.

German police were unable to provide the victims' American home towns.

Doolittle, Armstrong Start Lindbergh Memorial Fund

Gen. JIMMY DOOLITTLE, leader of the first air raid on Tokyo in World War II, and NEIL ARMSTRONG, first man to walk on the moon, have kicked off a memorial fund for another hero, the late CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

At a luncheon in Washington, they launched the Lindbergh Memorial Fund, whose goal is to raise $5 million this year, which marks the 50th anniversary of the Lone Eagle's solo airplane flight from New York to Paris. Doolittle and Armstrong are campaign co-chairmen of the fund, which will provide annual fellowships and grants to young scientists, researchers and explorers in the fields to which Lindbergh was dedicated – aeronautic research, medicine, conservation and wildlife preservation. They said contributions could be sent to the Lindbergh Memorial Fund, 30 East 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Secretary JOSEPH A. CALIFANO JR. of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has announced the reappointment of Dr. DONALD SHARP FREDRICKSON as head of the government's huge health research arm at Bethesda, Md. Califano's move was the first step in fulfilling his promise to depoliticize the National Institutes of Health. Fredrickson was appointed head of NINH in April 1975 by former President Ford.

NAMES IN THE NEWS

ROGER VADIM, the French movie producer once married to BRIGITTE BARDOT, and CATHERINE SCHNEIDER, his fourth wife, have asked for divorce by mutual consent, their attorneys said in Paris. Vadim and Miss Schneider, a member of a wealthy steel-making family, were married in 1975. They are parents of a daughter. Miss Bardot and Vadim, producer of the film that made her famous as a sex symbol, were married in 1952 and divorced five years later. He later was married to Annette Stroyberg, a Danish actress, and Jane Fonda.

Silent screen actress PAULINE STARKE has died in Santa Monica after suffering a stroke, a family spokesman said. She was 76. She was a silent screen celebrity in the 1920s, starring in "Dance Magic" and other movies until the advent of talkies forced her retirement from show business. Miss Starke is survived by her husband, former producer-director George Sherwood, and three step-children, Robert Sherwood, David Sherwood and Mrs. Audrey Hillard.

Daredevil EVEL KNIEVEL has successfully undergone a bone graft operation on his right forearm, broken earlier during a motorcycle crash, a hospital spokesman said in Chicago. Doctors at Michael Reese Hospital performed the bone graft and placed a plate in the arm, fractured Monday during a practice leap over a 90-foot-long tank filled with sharks. Knievel was to have performed a similar leap that night on a television special. He was injured when he lost control of his motorcycle on landing. Knievel later blamed the mishap on pressure from promoters of the event and on unsafe conditions.

American film actor DAVID CARRADINE has married 26-year-old LINDA GILBERT of Malibu, Calif., in a private ceremony at the Schwabing district registry office in Munich, West Germany. A spokesman for the film company for which Carradine had been working said the couple left immediately after the ceremony for Los Angeles. The lanky actor had been in Munich since October making the movie "The Serpent's Egg" with Liv Ullman under the direction of Ingmar Bergman. Miss Gilbert joined him recently.

ALEX M. ARMENDARIS, director of the Office of Minority Business Enterprise, and SAMUEL J. CORNELIUS, deputy director, have resigned, the Commerce Department said in Washington.

JOHN O'LEARY has been sworn as the new head of the Federal Energy Administration in Washington. O'Leary took the oath from federal appeals court Judge DAVID BAZELON at the ceremony attended by President Carter's principal energy adviser JAMES R. SCHLESINGER and about three dozen FEA officials. Schlesinger noted that much of the planning for Carter administration energy policies will originate in O'Leary's agency.

President Carter said in Washington he will nominate RICHARD B. PARKER, a foreign service officer, as ambassador to Lebanon succeeding FRANCIS E. MELOY JR., slain by terrorists in Beirut last June. White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter did not clear Parker's appointment with his ambassadorial advisory board because he wanted the post filled before his secretary of state vists the Middle East. The board was created to examine the qualifications of candidates under consideration for ambassadorial posts. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will visit the Middle East this month. Parker, who entered the foreign service in 1949, has served in consular and embassy positions.

Ex-Mental Patient Held Against Will Awarded

WASHINGTON (AP) – Kenneth Donaldson, a former mental patient, will receive $20,000 in damages from the state doctors who kept him against his will in a Florida institution, his lawyers announced.

It is the first time in their knowledge, they said, that a mental patient or ex-patient will receive money damages for violation of a constitutional right by state officials.

Donaldson, 68, said the award means a lot to other patients who are not dangerous to themselves or others and are held against their will.

"I'm so pleased ... It isn't just a personal victory. ..I just feel so good today," Donaldson said at a news conference called by his attorneys to announce the award.

Donaldson was held for almost 15 years in the Florida State Mental Hospital in Chattahoochee, Fla.

A consent judgment was signed Friday by U.S. District Court Judge William Stafford in Tallahassee, Fla., ordering Dr. John G. Gumanis and the estate of the late Dr. J. B. O'Connor each to pay $10,000 to Donaldson, his attorneys said.

O'Connor was the hospital's superintendent and Gumanis was a staff doctor.

In Donaldson's court effort to be released from the institution, the Supreme Court ruled in June 1975 that a state hospital's involuntary custodial confinement, without treatment, of a mental patient not dangerous to himself or others violates the constitutional rights to liberty.

by Vidrine, denied that Bayh ever had received money from Park.

"Birch Bayh has never had any dealings with Tongsun Park except knowing him socially the way everyone else does and has certainly never taken any money from him in any form," said spokesman Bill Wise. He noted other reporters had contacted him in the past about such a list and suggested someone might be "playing games."

Kathy Pearson, spokeswoman for Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., also said she had been contacted before about such a list.

"This has come up before," she said. "We've gone over our contribution list. There is nothing at all that we can find in any way connected with him (Park)." Asked if Goldwater had taken money for personal expenses from Park, she replied "Oh, heavens no."

A spokesman for Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., also said his boss had been contacted about the list before and had denied ever receiving any money from Park. The spokesman said Proxmire continued to deny the allegation and had no further comment.

Murray Flander, a spokesman for Sen. Alan Cranston, said:

"Cranston has absolutely no idea whatever how the name Cranston got on this list. Cranston has never received a dime or gift or whatever from Tongsun Park or anyone connected with him."

Flander said Cranston had received questions on the list or memo before.

A spokeswoman for Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, whose name was on the list, also denied any gifts or contributions from Park. Betty South, press secretary to the Minnesota senator, said "Neither Sen. Humphrey nor members of his staff are aware of any contribution, gift or gratuity of any kind to the senator from Tongsun Park."

The list also contained the name Hannah. There has been no member of Congress with that name in recent years but there was a member of Congress named Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., in 1973. Hanna previously has acknowledged receiving $22,500 from Park's Pacific Development Corp., an import-export business.

deep concern about previously reported Soviet tests with satellites to hunt and destroy other satellites. This is believed to pose a nearer threat than the beam weapon research.

"The USSR is seizing a new initiative and creating the prospect of a new dimension of military conflict – war in space," the report says.

This is a reference to four known Soviet tests of anti-satellite weapons last year after a lapse of more than four years. U.S. intelligence experts generally have rated the tests, in which a hunter satellite was sent after a target satellite, as failures. In no test did a Soviet hunter satellite destroy a target satellite.

"Our lead in space technology is a strong one," the report says, "but we have deliberately restrained the development of an anti-satellite capability."

It is known, however, that the United States has started some research into possible methods of destroying enemy satellites and is more advanced in work on safeguarding U.S. satellites from destruction.

'Reye's' Major Factor In Deaths Of 2 Children

ATLANTA (AP) – Reye's Syndrome, a rare complication of Influenza B, was a major factor in the deaths of two children at an Atlanta hospital this past week, the children's doctor says.

Hospital officials did not release details of the cases or the victims' names, but the attending physician in both cases, Dr. Paul Cohen, said influenza was strongly linked to the deaths.

The disorder, which affects the brain and liver, usually occurs in children under 16. Most cases of the syndrome have been linked to Influenza B, but the disease can be a complication of other viral disorders, health officials said.

Symptoms of the disease are vomiting, followed by convulsions and coma. The patient often suffers a viral infection before becoming confused and lethargic.

The mortality rate for Reye's syndrome is 60 per cent to 70 per cent. Health officials said little is known about the disease and asked states to report cases to the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta in an attempt to learn more about it.

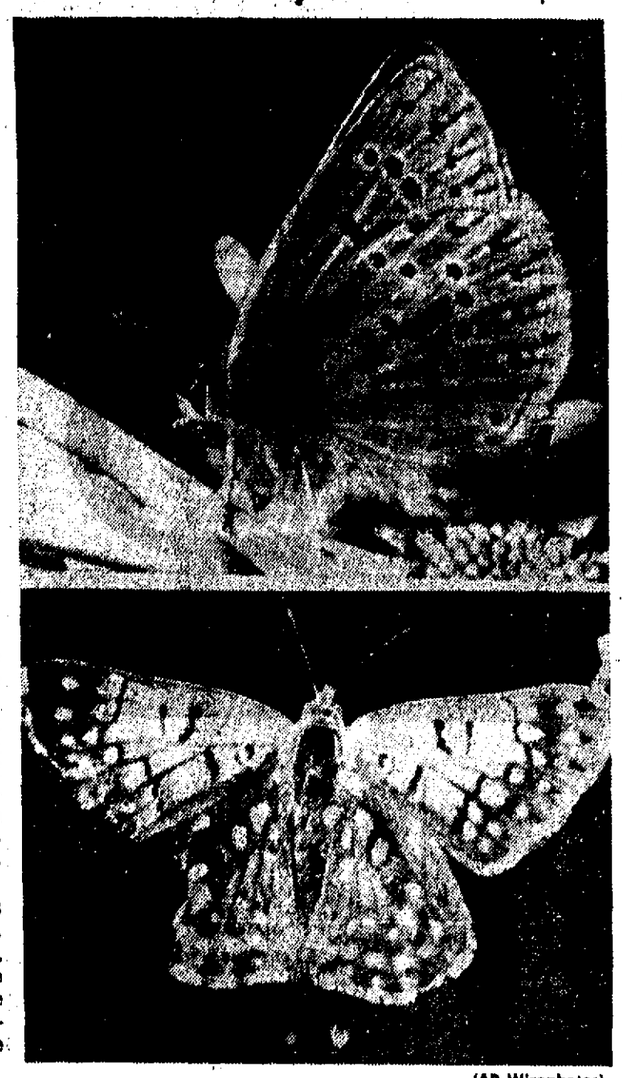
Preserves For Survival Of Butterflies Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) – Parts of the Los Angeles International Airport, an oil refinery and a rifle range are among nearly 100 square miles of California land proposed as habitat critical to the survival of six endangered species of butterflies and two plants.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said the proposed rule does not mean that the refinery, airport or the Army must change operations.

"But this is proof that some endangered species can continue to co-exist side by side with human activities," said Keith M. Schreiner, associate director of the service.

One of the species, the El Segundo Blue Butterfly, exists nowhere in the world except in a two-acre area at a Standard Oil Co. of California refinery and at the west end of the Los Angeles International Airport.



The refinery has built a chain-link fence around the area to protect the inch-wide butterflies. The government rule would probably not affect a private oil company but it might control development of Los Angeles airport where federal funds are used. Such an order "is not expected to severely impact existing activities," a spokesman said.

Another species, the Smith's Blue Butterfly, is on the U.S. Army installation at Ft. Ord, but has been disrupted by the introduction of ice plants. The Army is trying to establish several preserves to protect the remaining butterflies.

After reading written arguments, the government will decide in April what to do. If approved, the rule would prevent federal funds from being used to destroy or change the environment of these butterflies.

Most of the areas proposed as critical habitat are along the California coastline and include isolated sand dunes, bogs and mountain-areas. California's human population is along the same coastline, and changes in the land have isolated these species.

The Lange's Metalmark Butterfly – Industrial and agricultural development have confined the species to a few acres of sand dunes near Antioch.

Support Asked From U.S. For African Rule

ZANZIBAR, Tanzania (AP) – President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said Saturday that intervention by the United States in support of black majority rule in southern Africa would help avoid bloodshed.

But he warned visiting U.S. envoy Andrew Young, "Time is short."

Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, met Kaunda on a goodwill and fact-finding tour undertaken at the request of President Carter. The two talked for an hour at the waterfront Bwawani Hotel on this tropical spice island in the Indian Ocean where Tanzania is closing a week-long political celebration including visits of neighboring leaders.

"Let the U.S. take over the leadership in pursuing majority rule in southern Africa if they are interested in avoiding racial confrontation complicated by ideological confrontation," Kaunda told reporters after his talk with the 44-year-old ambassador. "We want it peacefully solved. If it continues we'll fight to the end."

Kaunda made clear he did not mean military intervention, but beyond that did not say what action he expected of the United States. "Who am I to tell the U.S. what to do?" he asked.

Young told reporters his conversations with African leaders gathered for the Tanzanian celebrations were "far more substantive and even moderate" than their public statements and his briefing notes had led him to expect. In addition to Kaunda, he has had talks with President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and the leaders of Burundi, Rwanda, Somalia and the Comoro Islands.

Black Landowners See Threat By White Buyers

ATLANTA (AP) – Some black landowners in the South have organized in an effort to stop whites and big business from buying up land owned by blacks. They called Saturday for more federal aid to black landowners so they can keep their land.

Members of the National Association of Landowners, at their first convention Saturday, charged the federal bureaucracy has set up barriers between the black landowner and federal assistance.

Joseph F. Brooks, director of the Atlanta-based Emergency Land Fund, said that 330,000 acres of black-owned land are being sold to whites each year.

He said the convention, which attracted about 300 landowners from seven Southern states, represented only about 30,000 acres of land.

"That's reflective of the relative non-ownership of blacks," Brooks said, noting that blacks own about three-tenths of one per cent of all privately held land in the United States.

Blacks are losing their land because of financial hardships, because huge corporations are buying up agricultural land at growing rates and because of problems they encounter with federal agencies, convention participants said.

They said the National Association of Landowners hopes to exert pressure on the federal government to cut some of the red tape.

Gloria Cousar of the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington said the problem of blacks being forced off their farmland in the South has contributed in a direct way to the nation's urban problems.

"When housing and agricultural assistance don't come through (for the black farmer), people are forced to go to the city," she said. When they get there, they find jobs scarce and they often end up on the welfare rolls, she said.

COMMON CAUSE FOUNDER RESIGNS AS CHAIRMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) – John Gardner, founder of Common Cause, announced Saturday he is stepping aside as chairman of the citizens' political action group although he will remain as a member of the board.

"Every organization must renew itself," Gardner said in announcing to a meeting of his organization's governing board that he will not seek a new term as chairman when his current term expires this spring.

Gardner, who has served two three-year terms as Common Cause chairman, said he would head a 10-member committee to search for a successor.

David Cohen, president of the organization who assumed Gardner's duties as a chief executive officer last year, is a member of the committee and considered a prospect to take over.

Older Workers

Approximately one-fifth of men aged 65 and older are still working, says the American Council of Life Insurance. In 1950, about one-half of that age group were still on the job.

Carters Dine With 'Mentor' Adm. Rickover

WASHINGTON (AP) – President Carter had a nostalgic, private lunch Saturday with a man who was his mentor and who now salutes him as commander-in-chief.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, dined with Adm. and Mrs. Hyman Rickover in the secluded residence wing of the White House. Rickover, 77, is considered father of the nuclear navy.

Carter spent much of his Navy career in nuclear power development under Rickover.

As head of the Navy Nuclear Propulsion Division, Rickover has been plain-spoken in his criticism of Pentagon red tape and what he regards as occasional failures to obtain excellence and efficiency from defense contractors.

"Adm. Rickover had a profound effect on my life – perhaps more than anyone except my own parents," Carter wrote in his campaign biography, "Why Not the Best?"

He worked for Rickover until 1953 when he decided to resign from the Navy because "I had only one life to live, and I wanted to live it as a civilian, with a potentially fuller opportunity for varied public service."

THREE YOUNGSTERS VICTIMS

Family Fleeing Violence, Death Of Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) – The Maguire family, whose loss of three children in communal violence gave birth to the peace movement in Northern Ireland, is emigrating to New Zealand.

Jackie Maguire, 33, an auto mechanic, said Friday the New Zealand government has accepted the applications of himself, his wife Anne and their suriving son, Mark, who is six. They hope to leave in June for Auckland.

"We expect to sell up everything," Maguire told reporters. "Perhaps we will say something about it nearer our departure."

Tragedy struck the Maguires on Aug. 10, 1976. British troops in Belfast's Roman Catholic Andersonstown district, where the Maguires live, opened fire on a car that ignored a halt order. The driver was killed and the car plunged out of control into Anne Maguire who was on the sidewalk with her four children.

Andrew Maguire, age six weeks, and his eight-year-old sister Joanna were killed instantly. Their brother John, 2½, died in a hospital the following day. Their mother was seriously injured.

The car driver was later identified as a gunman in the underground Irish Republican Army.

The funeral of the children was followed by a mass march through Andersonstown by Catholics and Protestants. The marchers called for an end to the sectarian violence over British rule. This week the conflict claimed its 1,700th fatality in seven-and-a half-years.

The march led to the formation of the "Peace People" by two Catholics, Mrs. Betty Williams and Miss Mairead Corrigan, sister of Mrs. Maguire.

Tens of thousands of people of both religions attended peace rallies organized by the movement in Northern Ireland and in Irish communities in Britain. They recited a declaration of the right to "live and love and build a just and peaceful society."

Family friends said Mrs. Maguire has made a good recovery from her injuries.

Mrs. Maguire's brother Michael has lived in New Zealand for three years.

After the news of the family's intended emigration was broadcast on television Friday night a government official, who did not wish to be named, said to a reporter:

"This is a most significant factor in the whole depressing situation. Here's a couple from the heart of the ghetto who have had their youngsters killed and they want to get out of it. They've had enough and they feel there is no hope in Ulster. It is symbolic of the hopelessness."

Ammo Planted On Civilians; 5 British Soldiers Sentenced

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) – Five British soldiers who admitted planting ammunition on civilians being searched were denounced in court Friday as no better than terrorists and given prison sentences ranging from one to five years.

The judge, Lord Ambrose McGonigal, said the soldiers from the Scottish Black Watch regiment had descended to the level of the terrorists and criminals they were supposed to be policing in Northern Ireland.

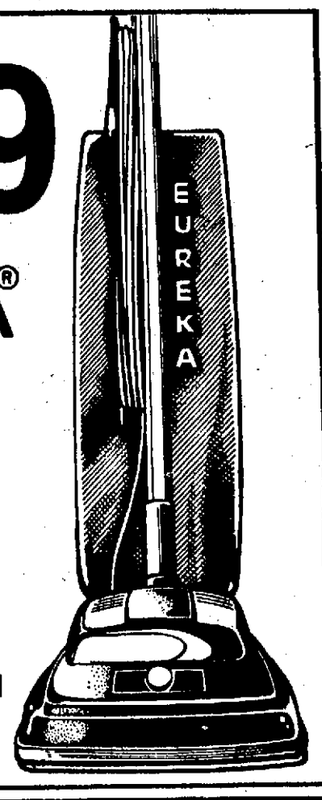
The judge praised the Royal Ulster Constabulary for proving the innocence of the victims. The searches were carried out in 1975 in Andersonstown, a Roman Catholic district of Belfast.

Cpl. Ross McKay, 24, described as the ringleader, received a five-year sentence. One private got three years and three other privates were sentenced to one year each.

Army units are in the British province to counter terrorist attacks by the Irish Republican Army, which wants to unite the province with the predominantly Catholic Republic of Ireland to the south, and by paramilitary Protestant groups combatting the IRA.

Persian Silk Rug Goes For $200,000

NEW YORK (AP) – A Persian Heriz silk carpet has been sold here for $200,000 – the highest price ever paid at auction for any rug.



The carpet was found in an attic and was put up for sale by the beneficiaries of the estate of Emily Stifel of Wheeling, W.Va. The auctioneers, Sotheby Parke Bernet, said the beneficiaries had no idea of the carpet's value.

The 12½-by-9-foot rust-red rug, with a flowering vine-filled border and triple arches centering light blue medallions, was in very good condition.

CIA Drive To Counter 'Warren' Critics Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Central Intelligence Agency directed its offices around the world in 1967 "to employ propaganda assets" to counter doubts raised by critics of the Warren Commission's investigation into the assassination of President Kennedy.

The propaganda campaign was to be waged in part by passing unclassified information about the assassination to CIA "assets" who could use the material in writing "book reviews and feature articles" that would "answer and refute the attacks of the critics," according to a newly released CIA document.

The document said its aim was "to provide material for countering and discrediting the claims of the conspiracy theorists, so as to inhibit the circulation of such claims in other countries."

The document was among some 850 pages of material released Friday by the CIA under the Freedom of Information Act.

The documents show that the CIA examined copies of almost all books about the November 1963 assassination, including one by then-congressman Gerald R. Ford. A CIA officer called Ford's book "a re-hash of the Oswald case" and criticized its "loose" writing.

A Ford chapter rebutting the claim that Lee Harvey Oswald was an FBI agent "is just loose enough to permit quotation out of context," a March 1966 memo to Richard Helms, then-deputy CIA director for plans, says. "... the chapter, as written, could be used by the lefties (Mark Lane et al) to continue the campaign of which you are already aware."

Ford was a member of the Warren Commission that concluded that Oswald was solely responsible for the assassination. Ford quoted extensively from secret sessions of the commission in his book, titled "Portrait of an Assassin."

Many of the documents released deal with internal agency assessments of charges raised by Mark Lane in his book "Rush to Judgment," by Edward Jay Epstein in a book called "Inquest" and by former New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison, who alleged he had uncovered a conspiracy to assassinate Kennedy.

The 1967 dispatch to "chiefs, certain stations and bases" says that the rash of books and articles criticizing the Warren Commission's finding "is a matter of concern to the U.S. government, including our organization."

"Efforts to impugn (the) rectitude and wisdom (of commission members and staff) tend to cast doubt on the whole leadership of American society," the memo said.

"Moreover, there seems to be an increasing tendency to hint that President Johnson, himself, as the one person who might be said to have benefited, was in some way responsible for the assassination.

"Innuendo of such seriousness affects not only the individual concerned, but also the whole reputation of the American government."

In using propaganda assets to refute these charges, the dispatch said, "our play should point out, as applicable, that the critics are (1) wedded to theories adopted before the evidence was in, (2) politically interested, (3) financially interested, (4) hasty and inaccurate in their research, or (5) infatuated with their own theories."

DETECTIVE STORY AUTHOR DRESSER DIES OF CANCER

SANTA BARBARA (AP) – Davis Dresser, known to millions of readers as Brett Halliday, author of the Michael Shayne detective series, has died of cancer, his family said Saturday.

Dresser, 72, died of cancer Friday at his Montecito home near here. No funeral services are scheduled.

Dresser, under the name Halliday, wrote more than 50 books on the adventures of one of the first private eyes.

Born in Chicago in 1904, Dresser spent his childhood on a small ranch near the Pecos River in Texas. While traveling throughout the south, he worked at a variety of different jobs, including farm hand, mule skinner, gravedigger, deckhand on an oil tanker, and short order cook.

Dresser began his writing career in 1930 and once said that he wrote 2 million words before his first book was published. His first Shayne book, written in 1935, was rejected by more than 22 publishers before finally getting into print.

His second Shayne novel was made into the first of six Shayne movies, starring Lloyd Nolan.

Each Shayne novel sold more than a million copies in the United States and was translated into from eight to 12 languages.

In addition to the Shayne books, Dresser wrote about 60 novels under 12 pseudonyms, including 20 westerns and four mysteries. He is survived by his widow, novelist Mary Savage; a son, Halliday, and daughter, Chloe Johnson of Tannersville, N.Y.

Mental Patient Commitment Laws 'Vague', Panel Claims

LOS ANGELES (AP) – A legal panel has reported that thousands of mental patients are committed every year under laws that are vague and perhaps unconstitutional.

The law says a person can be committed against his will if he is "a danger to himself or others." But the Mental Health Advocacy Project's report said that even psychiatrists admit they cannot predict who will be dangerous.

"The dangerousness standard in its present form is probably subject to constitutional challenge," said the report, which was submitted to the Assembly Subcommittee on Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities at a hearing.

The project's leaders also announced a trial program to advise mental patients at two state hospitals about their rights.

Beginning Feb. 11, about 35 lawyers, law students, paralegals and psychologists will aid patients at Metropolitan and Fairview State hospitals, said Mary Ann Bannan, a member of the panel. The Los Angeles County and Beverly Hills bar associations sponsored the project, and the American Bar Association is funding the pilot program.

The panel, after studying commitment laws for two months, recommended in the report that:

– The justifications for involuntary hospitalization of patients be examined;

– Laws be enacted giving mentally disabled persons the same rights of due process when being involuntarily committed that criminal defendants are granted.

Among them would be the requirement that a patient's condition be proven beyond a reasonable doubt; that the patient have the right to invoke the Fifth Amendment during psychiatric interviews, and that the patient have the right to confront witnesses as to their fitness.

The cormorant, a bird with no nostrils, breathes through its mouth.

WITNESS SAYS

Laetrile Smugglers Protected 'Business'

SAN DIEGO (AP) – American cancer victims using the drug Laetrile were discouraged from bringing it into the country themselves from Mexico because smugglers wanted to protect profits, jurors in the conspiracy trial of a doctor and three others have been told.

The allegation was made during trial Friday of four men charged with 15 other defendants with conspiring to illegally import the apricot-kernel extract into the country over a period of years.

The testimony came from Emma McClure, who began helping the government build its case after being arrested for Laetrile smuggling and perjuring herself before a grand jury investigating the alleged consiracy.

She told of working for a boarding house in Imperial Beach which catered to cancer patients visiting San Diego to make trips to neighboring Tijuana for legal Laetrile treatments.

She said her salary at the boarding facility was $250 per week, with a $50 bonus each time she smuggled Laetrile into the U.S.

She said the patients paid $87.50 a week for room and board, transportation to the airport and trips to Tijuana. The fee also included their "future needs," meaning a continuing supply of Laetrile, which the Food and Drug Administration lists as useless in cancer treatment, Miss McClure said.

The patients were told not to try to bring the substance back on their own because it was against the law, she said.

"We wanted to make the sale ourselves and get the money," Miss McClure testified.

OC Fair Operations

payroll records which would document his charges.

Angelo said many underground pipes were leaking and needed replacement. He said the former manager had ordered $35,000 in new pavements that would have to be dug up later to replace the leaking pipes, at an additional cost of $15,000.

He said that 14 valuable horses had burned to death last year because of improper and illegal wiring and that he had tried to get management to bring the fairgrounds up to "building codes."

Hoose said that some of the charges made by Angelo were true, but that many others were "exaggerated." "As directors we cannot be expected to know every blade of grass cut on the grounds or every tiny detail," he said. "We had depended on our manager to take charge of those problems. Now he is fired, and Mr. Angelo and others have brought all these matters to our attention," he said.

"We intend to correct all these items, but we must first obtain a new manager. I have been in emergency meetings three times this week," Hoose said. "We are not standing idle. We know we are in the frying pan and that things had gotten out of control. But misquoted stories in the press have not helped."

Another director, Gene Tunks, agreed generally with what Hoose said and added, "We will have this cleared up as soon as we get a new manager, hopefully by March 1."

"It is a mess right now," Tunks said. "I cannot give you any information because there is an investigation going on by the district attorney," he said. "Mr. Angelo is a good security and maintenance man, in my judgment, but he has been under pressure and he should not be talking to the press until we can get all this cleaned up.

"I know that some of the things Mr. Angelo has complained about are true. But we should all wait now until we have proper management, and then the board will take firm action to follow up on all the claims and get our operations back in shape."

Several calls to state officials in charge of the California Division of Fairs and Expositions in Sacramento confirmed that the Orange County Fair and its operations have been in "legal hot water" for the past several months.

Thomas Bair, director of the divisions, and his aide, James Youde, confirmed that the state had been forced to intervene in Orange County fairgrounds operations and that state officials had ordered the firing of Porterfield and had requested an investigation by the state attorney general.

"We ordered an audit of the Orange County Fair books back in December," Bair said. "It was found that there were certain 'irregularities' in those books. So we ordered an investigation to see if some of the things we found were of a criminal nature. That investigation is now under way."

At stake in the current muddle surrounding the county fair operations is up to a half-million dollars in thoroughbred horse racing money. Recently granted 14 racing days by the State Racing Commission, the Orange County Fair board of directors could come under scrutiny of the state board and could lose horse racing rights if "criminal" actions are found, according to the state officials.

Tunks expressed his concern about such an event. "The horse racing is expected to bring in about $100,000 or even a quarter of a million dollars for the Orange County Fair," he said.

"This could create about 500 jobs and would give a boost to Orange County," Tunks said. "So you know we members of the board want all this ironed out and we want to assure the public that our operations of the county fair are in order."

3rd Fragment Of Meteorite 'A Rare Find'

WASHINGTON (AP) – Searchers on Friday found a third fragment of a meteorite which exploded loudly earlier in the week over Louisville, Ky., a relatively rare event in a populated area.

A large chunk of the biggest fragment, a dark gray rock about five inches in diameter and weighing 2.31 pounds, was dispatched to the atomic installation at Richland, Wash., for analysis. The hope is that this will advance scientific knowledge.

"This is the first time ever that analytical work has been done so quickly," said Graham Hunt, professor of geology at the University of Louisville.

"They tell us that this will be the earliest research ever, which will help us understand better the change from one element to another, which we call radioactivity."

Hunt and Thomas E. Boone, director of the Rauch Memorial Planetarium at the University of Louisville, earlier brought two fragments of the meteorite and consulted with specialists at the Smithsonian Institution.

The largest damaged a roof in the west end of the city near the Ohio River. A second, about the size of a table tennis ball, pierced a storm window and fell between it and the house window. The third was found on the hood of an automobile, which it had dented.

Mitchell, Haldeman File New Trial Bids

WASHINGTON (AP) – Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and one-time White House aide H. R Haldeman, each convicted for a pivotal part in the Watergate scandal cover-up, told the Supreme Court on Friday they deserve new trials.

The trial that ended in their convictions Jan. 1, 1975 should have been postponed until the "massive and extraordinarily extensive" publicity surrounding the Watergate scandal had died down, their appeal said.

Each was sentenced to prison for 30 months to eight years. Neither has served a day of that sentence, pending appeal.

John D. Ehrlichman, a former Nixon aide convicted along with Mitchell and Haldeman, already had appealed to the Supreme Court. Ehrlichman, however, chose to begin serving the prison sentences he received for his cover-up conviction and a separate conviction stemming from the 1971 burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsburg's psychiatrist.

He is now a prisoner at the Swift Trail Federal Prison Camp at Safford, Ariz.

Aside from the publicity issue raised in their appeal, Mitchell and Haldeman said their rights to a fair trial were denied when:

– Presiding U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica refused to disqualify himself despite his alleged bias against the defendants.

– Their testimony before the Senate Watergate committee was used as evidence in the criminal proceedings.

– Sirica refused to allow them to subpoena testimony from Richard Nixon, either in person or in writing.

It is now known that Nixon also played a key role in the intricate cover-up that began shortly after the 1972 break-in at Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate cover-up complex here. Government prosecutors, however, chose not to prosecute Nixon after he resigned from office.

Man Sentenced In '71 Skyjack

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) – A 44-year-old former Berkeley man has been sentenced to 15 years in federal prison for hijacking a National Airlines jet to cuba eight years ago.

Allan Creighton Sheffield, who spent seven years abroad as a fugitive before returning last year, was charged with air piracy, but pleaded guilty Dec. 28 to a reduced charge of armed interference with a flight crew.

The San Francisco-to-Tampa, Fla. flight carried 55 passengers

Test Tampering Voids Deputy Promotions

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Results of an examination used to determine promotions in the sheriff's department have been voided, delaying several promotions, after officials discovered some of the exam books had apparently been stolen, authorities say.

"We heard there had been a breach of security at the time the test was administered," said James R. Tweedy, administrator-counsel of the Association of Los Angeles Deputy Sheriffs. Tweedy said several members complained that some deputies had access to the exam questions before the tests were administered Jan. 22.

More than 1,500 deputies in line for promotion took the exam, with about 100 likely to get promotions, said Herbert Kaplan, chief county personnel director.

The voiding of the test results will delay a number of promotions for at least six months, Kaplan said.

2 BLACK SOUTH AFRICANS TOURING U.S. TO DEFECT

LOS ANGELES (AP) – Two black South Africans on tour with a theatrical troupe in California say they have decided to defect from their racially-troubled country.

Themba Ntinga, 24, and Don Maredi, 34, said Friday they definitely will not return home after their year-long American college tour.

Both men are part of Black South African Theater Project '77, which kicks off a nationwide tour of campuses beginning next week.

The troupe's main presentation, "Survival," is an improvisational study of South Africa as a prison for blacks.

"We portray the way of living, the stupidity of the laws, the anger among blacks," Ntinga said at a news conference here.

The troupe included some of the few nonwhite South African entertainers allowed to leave their country since last year's race riots which left 400 people dead.

The visit was arranged with the aid of Rep. Yvonne Brathwaite Burke, D-Calif., other members of the Congressional Black Caucus and Prof. James Bertholf, chairman of the Orange Coast College drama department. A $3,000 bonding fee was required by South Africa for the black actors.

Viet PX Probe 'Star' Crum Dies

HONG KONG (AP) - William Crum, 58, an American businessman named in a 1971 Senate investigation of illegal activities at U.S. military post exchanges in Vietnam, died Saturday in a fire at his home here, a government spokesman said.

Crum, who was born in China, the son of an American pilot on the Yangtse River, built a multimillion dollar business empire which included a monopoly on slot machine sales to U.S. Army clubs in Vietnam.

Devotees Claim Pyramids Wonderous Source Of Power

EDITOR'S NOTE – If you are to believe the believers, a pyramid in your home, your office, or even over your hospital bed will do wonders for you. Scientists may scoff, but pyramidologists carry on, and for some there's real gold in it.

By CINDY ROSE
Associated Press Writer

According to a widening circle of devotees, pyramids provide new power for the people. They can sharpen razor blades, sweeten wine, cure sick plants, lessen pain, improve sex life and boost psychic energy.

The lack of scientific evidence to support such claims hasn't daunted the legion of believers: housewives, athletes, gardeners – and pyramid salesmen.

"It seems so funny. Who wouldn't laugh? It seems like a big hoax, like a pet rock, until you try a pyramid yourself and see that it really does do some things people claim it does," says Rick Tiller, a 26-year-old pyramid proponent from Pittsfield, Mass.

It all works, if you believe the faithful, by putting yourself or whatever you want treated under or directly over the apex of a precisely positioned scale model of the Great Pyramid of Cheops in Egypt.

The scientific community has greeted such notions with resounding skepticism.

"I never saw the energy," says Dr. George Alexandrakis, head of the physics department at the University of Miami. "I think physicists just dismiss this pyramid thing completely. It has nothing to do with reality."

But the scientists' frowns haven't stopped the pyramidologists.

–The Toronto Maple Leafs started Stanley Cup hockey playoffs with a single pyramid under the bench but soon had multi-colored ones scattered in strategic positions around the rink.

"They send a vibration, a wonderful vibration," Coach Red Kelly said after a winning game. He wasn't so enthusiastic when Toronto lost the series 3-4.

When Ted Sizemore played for the Los Angeles Dodgers last year he put a foot-square pyramid in his locker and said the team lost most road games when he didn't have the pyramid along. "There's gotta be something to it," he says.

–A Winter Garden, Fla., car dealership opened three showrooms under pyramids. Owner Al Ewing got into it unwittingly and laughed when he discovered he had joined a fad. "But I started asking the salesmen, and they say cars really do sell better under the pyramid," he says.

–A slew of razor blades are reposing inside scale-model pyramids in bathrooms in Europe, Canada, the United States and behind the Iron Curtain. Users claim the pyramids keep the blades sharp.

–Drs. Leonard Linkow of New York and Paris Garefis of Los Angeles, both dentists, are experimenting with pyramids to determine if the geometric shape improves a patient's ability to accept dental implants. Garefis has 72 pyramids hanging in two rows from an operating room ceiling. "We haven't stopped any conventional dental methods, so there is no way I can tell you whether the pyramid really works," he says. "But a lot of people think it helps. Maybe it's just psychological."

–A colony of believers has started construction on a dozen pyramid-shaped homes on 110 acres near the Central Florida community of Bell.

–An eight-page newsletter published bimonthly in Santa Barbara claims circulation of 6,000. Subscribers pay $6 a year.

–Distance swimmer Benson Huggard of Freeport, N.Y., trained for a long ocean swim from Marathon in the Florida Keys to Freeport in the Bahamas a year ago with Miami hypnotist and self-proclaimed pyramidologist John Tobin.

The program included meditation beneath a metal pyramid frame set up on the beach. Huggard didn't quite make it to Freeport, but he did swim 151 miles. "As far as I'm concerned," he said, "I couldn't have done it without John and his pyramid."

Nobody's gathered figures on the number of pyramid power devotees, but through advertisements and word-of-mouth support the fad has become widely visible.

"It's blowing my mind," says Shelly Seigel, production manager of a Santa Monica wholesale firm that supplies pyramids. "There are always the fanatics who say their fingers work better under a pyramid – a segment of the population is always a little screwy. But then there are people who just say it works."

Seigel got into it solely as a business. "It's just a fact to me whether they're selling or not selling. And they're selling."

The marketplace is replete with pyramids: little pyramids and big pyramids; plastic and cardboard pyramids; pyramid frames made from plastic or aluminum piping; pyramids for sleeping in; pyramids for meditating in; pyramid "generators" consisting of little pyramids grouped together.

Seigel says sales records for his firm show that more than 100,000 people have bought six-foot pyramids at $89.95 retail in the past five years. He figures a recent order for 25,000 boxes of 9-and 12-inch pyramids, selling upwards from $6.95, will be gone within a month.

"What's important, though, is that for every person who buys a pyramid, there's at least an equal number building their own," he says.

Tobin says anybody can try it simply by cutting four isosceles triangles with two equal sides 11.4 inches and base 12 inches square, taping them together, making sure the angles of the base are exactly 90 degrees, and aligning any side of the pyramid with a compass along the earth's magnetic north.

"The whole thing with the pyramid is that you don't need a scientist to tell you what it does," Tobin says. "You can take one home and do your own experiments.

"I've used pyramids to sharpen razor blades, help sick plants get healthy, sweeten wine. I use the pyramid in meditation and in my work in hypnosis with athletes," he says.

While pyramids have long fascinated dabblers in the occult, the current craze seems to have its inception in a book called "Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain." The book, published in 1970, told about a Czech, Karel Drbal, who may have been the first to claim the razor blade affinity for the pyramids. He patented the shape in 1959 and soon produced miniature cardboard pyramids for the bathroom.

Pyramidologists like to point to G. Patrick Flanagan as a scientist who takes the pyramid seriously. Flanagan, 32, was listed in "Who's Who in American Science" at 15 because of his work with lasers, microwaves and other energy forms.

He became interested in pyramids in 1970, proclaiming his enthusiasm for pyramids as powerful receptacles for a form of energy he called "biocosmic." Since then, dozens of companies have become involved in pyramid promotion and sales, as has Flanagan himself.

Flanagan likens the pyramid to a directional antenna. "The energy is already there, and the pyramid just transmits it," he says. "There's phenomenon connected with the pyramid."

What about those ancient originals, the pyramids of the pharaohs? Most scholars consider them tombs — elaborate, majestic, built in conformity with Egyptian religion and ritual, but just tombs. Today's pyramidologists believe the Egyptians knew all about pyramid power.

Some claims of pyramid devotees have foundered on fact, as a favorite one that Italian dairies use pyramid-shaped containers in order to keep the milk fresh. Not so, says an official of the Italian Tetrapack Co. in Modena, Italy — they're using the pyramid shape because it saves material.

And pyramidologists might have thought they had a recruit in the Rev. Sean Malloy, whose Divine Mercy Roman Catholic Church on Merritt Island, Fla., is being built in the shape of an 85-foot-tall, aluminum-plated pyramid.

Pure coincidence. Father Malloy influenced the design not because of pyramid power, but because there was a pyramid-shaped church in his native Ireland. But when the church is finished, he jokes, "I'm going to put razor blades in it."

Researchers who take the time to experiment with pyramids tend to be people who want them to work, Dr. Marshall F. Gilula, a Miami psychiatrist, says. He suggests the pyramid might work like a placebo — medicine without effectiveness in itself but which the patient thinks helps him — and which therefore does help in a way.

A pyramid, Dr. Gilula theorizes, might be like a placebo "giving us permission to go ahead and use our own powers."

Howard Nelson of Toronto got attention last April when he dangled a pyramid over his hospital bed where he lay with a broken leg. Nelson said his pain ebbed.

His physician was skeptical. "But it's not interfering with his treatment, so what's the harm?" Dr. Alasdar Conn said. "There's always some psychological involvement in the treatment of pain."

Find A Friend, Not A Convent

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and I want to join a convent. The problem is, I am not Catholic. I'm not really anything, but I want to become a nun because I've never had a date and I'll probably never have one, and if I were a nun in a convent I wouldn't have to make any excuses. After all, who ridicules a nun for not having a boyfriend?

How does a girl go about signing up to be a nun? Please answer in the paper because I don't have any privacy here. If anyone in my family found out I asked such a question, I'd never hear the end of it. Thank you.

FUTURE NUN

DEAR FUTURE NUN: Sorry, dear, a convent is not a place for a girl to hide because she thinks she needs an excuse for not having a boyfriend. Women become nuns because of their deep religious convictions and desire to dedicate their lives to the service of their church. You need a mature friend with whom you can talk frankly about your feelings. Counseling from a Catholic priest could be extremely helpful.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps my feelings of frustration and anger can be alleviated by writing to you. I hope so, because right now I'm all tied up in knots, and it's bad for my blood pressure.

I just had a phone call from my sister and did she ever let me have it! She started out by demanding, "WHO the h--- have you been talking to for one solid hour?" (I meekly told her, although I now realize that it was really none of her business.)

Then she did a number on me for spending so much time talking on the phone, and like a dummy I apologized for it.

Abby, I don't have a party line so if I want to talk all day (or all night) why shouldn't I?

And why should I be made to feel guilty because my line is busy when my sister calls?

FRUSTRATED AND ANGRY

DEAR F AND A: Direct your anger where it belongs—at yourself—for lacking the courage to speak up to your sister. Tell her what you've told me, and you'll feel better.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for seven months and my problem is a friend of mine. (I'll call her "Barbie".) It seems that Barbie can't keep her hands off my husband's bod. Barb has a husband of her own, but she likes to pinch my husband, punch his biceps (playfully) and feel his chest. It's always in a joking way, but I don't like all this feeling and touching with my guy.

I'm not jealous, I'm just upset. Barbie's husband either doesn't notice, or he doesn't care.

My husband says I'm making something out of nothing. My sister says I should come right out and tell Barbie, "Hands off my man!"

What is your advice?

ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: It's your husband's "bod," and if he doesn't like being pinched, punched and touched, it's up to him (not you) to say so.

Pardon Offer Made Polish Food Rioters

WARSAW, Poland (AP) – The Polish government has offered a conditional pardon to those convicted of rioting last year against food price boosts.

The state council, which made the announcement, attached the condition that anyone pardoned "show repentance" and demonstrate he would "not return to crime."

A group of dissident scholars in Poland declared solidarity with human rights activists in four neighboring Communist countries – the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and East Germany.

A leading member of the group of intellectuals known as the Committee for the Defense of Workers hailed the government decision as "a great social victory" but added that it should have been "a straightforward amnesty" for all.

The committee of 23 scholars was formed last August to seek amnesty for the convicted rioters and to aid their families. The Roman Catholic church also has urged amnesty. Following the riots, the government canceled announced increases in food prices.

Thirteen accused riot leaders in Ursus, a Warsaw suburb, and Radom, 60 miles to the south, were sentenced to terms ranging from three to 10 years in prison. The supreme court later reduced some sentences.

Hall Of Fame Will Honor Five Inventors

WASHINGTON (AP) – Photography, electricity, television and the "super slurper" are the focus of this year's "National Inventors Day" with the induction of five new members to the National Inventors Hall of Fame.

Arthur Seidel, chairman of the National Council of Patent Law Associations, will preside over the formal ceremony on inventors day, today, at the Patent Office, site of the hall of fame.

Inventors to be inducted at that time are George Eastman, Lee DeForest, Edwin H. Land, Charles P. Steinmetz and Vladimir K. Zworykin.

Land and Zworykin are expected to attend the ceremonies. The others will be represented by descendants.

Also at the ceremonies, Patent Commissioner C. Marshall Dann will present Land with his 500th patent, this for a new type of battery.

Four coinventors will share the Inventor of the Year Award presented by the Association for the Advancement of Invention and Innovation.

They are Mary Ollidene Weaver, Edward B. Bagley, George F. Fanta and William M. Doane.

They are employes of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Peoria, Ill., and are being honored for developing the "super slurper" compound, formally known as "highly absorbant starch-containing polymeric compositions."

This is a combination of starch from corn, potatoes and other crops, combined with a manmade chemical, and the result can absorb as much as 2,000 times its own weight in water.

More than 80 possible uses have been predicted, ranging from coating seeds to increasing the absorbency of towels and diapers.

More than 30 other inventors and their new developments will also be on hand for the ceremonies, including exhibits by major corporations.

Eastman, a native of Waterville, N.Y., is being honored for his work in the development of photographic film.

DeForest, a native of Council Bluffs, Iowa, was selected for his work in amplifying electrical currents, which was instrumental in the development of radio and talking movies.

The Land Camera, with film which develops itself before your eyes, is the basis for the selection of Land of Bridgeport, Conn.

Steinmetz, of Germany, is being honored for development of the system for distributing alternating electrical current.

And Zworykin, a Russian now residing in Florida, developed the cathode ray tube, which is vital in television, radar and other uses.

The Hall of Fame was established in 1973 with the selection of Thomas A. Edison as its first member.

Added in 1974 were Alexander Graham Bell, Eli Whitney and the inventors of the transistor, John Bardeen, Walter H. Brattain and William Shockley.

Additions to the hall in 1975 included Wilbur and Orville Wright, Guglielmo Marconi; electric motor inventor Nikola Tesla; Samuel F. B. Morse, and William D. Coolidge, who invented the tungsten lamp filament.

Last year the hall of fame added Cyrus H. McCormick for the reaper; Charles M. Hall who developed the process to make aluminum; Charles Goodyear for vulcanized rubber; Enrico Fermi for the atomic reactor; Rudolf Diesel, who developed the engine that bears his name, and Charles H. Townes whose work led to the laser.

Warren G. Harding was the first President to ride to his inauguration in an automobile.

Food Re-Used; LA Restaurant Will Pay Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) – The menu at Scandia restaurant offers expensive gourmet dishes, but the state attorney general's office said some food previously had been served to other diners.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Sanford H. Feldman also alleged in a civil consumer suit that the exclusive West Los Angeles restaurant's "homemade ice cream" actually came from a local supermarket.

The restaurant, which caters to the rich and the celebrated, has agreed to pay $7,500 in civil penalties to end the suit. The action was filed after an investigation by the County Health Department.

Owner Kenneth Hansen, without admitting guilt or wrongdoing, agreed in a stipulated judgment signed by Superior Court Commissioner Leo Rich to halt the alleged illegal practices.

The state prosecutor said the restaurant had served customers food which had been served to other diners and returned to the kitchen uneaten. The suit said re-serving food violates the Los Angeles County Public Health Code and unfair competition statutes of the Civil Code.

Under the judgment, Scandia can re-serve only items in sealed packages, salt or other condiments in containers with self-closing and tight-fitting lids or in shakers or squeeze bottles, or rewashed fruit and nuts with unbroken skins or shells.

The suit also alleged that the restaurant's "puree of fresh peas" actually were frozen peas.

Hansen agreed to a ban against falsely representing that a food is homemade or fresh and to allow representatives of the attorney general's office "reasonable access" to the restaurant, its kitchens and to all books, ledgers and receipts.

Kenya Honors Queen With Celebration

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) – A special celebration at Treetops game lodge Saturday marked the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the British throne.

The queen, then the crown princess, was visiting Kenya, then a British colony, and watching wild life by night at the lodge when her father died in England in the early hours of Feb. 6, 1952.

The British high commissioner to Kenya, Stanley Fingland, was among distinguished dinner guests Saturday at Treetops lodge, built in the branches of a giant fig tree near Nyeri, 100 miles north of Nairobi. Within the Commonwealth a high commissioner is the equivalent of an ambassador.

New Social, Political Unrest Surfaces In Communist Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) – New unrest is visible in Communist lands of East Europe, from the Urals to Berlin.

The trouble as seen from Washington flows from political, economic and national difficulties.

Political dissension is spreading. This has brought inevitable police reprisals in several key centers.

Economically, every country in the Red camp is deeply in debt. Mainly to the West, but also to Moscow. This tacitly confirms that Communist managers, even in a time of world recession, need capitalist help. Terms of trade last year turned against East Europeans by up to 20 per cent.

In Poland, food riots compelled the government to begin dealing with an informal alliance of disenchanted workers, intellectuals and Roman Catholic churchmen. Never before has a one-party, Marxist state deigned to do business with an "opposition." The Warsaw government has long subsidized food prices. Now it wants to stop. To do so, it will have to raise wages. The fate of Prime Minister Edward Gierek may well be in the balance.

Through the whole region, dissenters are campaigning for long-lost political, intellectual and religious rights promised in the 1975 Helsinki Agreement underpinning peace and security in Europe. This has brought them in conflict with state authority. Police and secret services are cracking down on their activities.

Despite all this, east-west detente, or accommodation, is going on at superpower level. American-Soviet exchanges on several subjects proceed. The Carter administration's priority aim is the completion of a second-phase pact on the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT II) by September.

Yet there's little doubt that while the superpowers, concerned with the avoidance of war, intend to go about their business, the bloom is gone from workaday detente. This is because the Communist countries have done little or nothing to fulfill their promises at Helsinki to restore rights of free movement, worship, thought and expression to their people.

As a consequence, from Warsaw south to Belgrade, from Moscow west to Berlin, tensions are visible.

Police are harassing political dissenters in Prague, would-be emigrants in East Germany and Jews in the Soviet Union dreaming of living in West Germany or Israel.

A mystery bomb that killed four persons and hurt more in a Moscow subway early in January stirred speculation that the KGB men, not protesters, planted it.

Allied and Communist diplomats alike question whether all this will explode into open revolt.

Yet they acknowledge that if these icy blasts reach gale force and the danger is not dismissed, it could spell trouble for President Carter at the start of his term and for Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev nearing the end of his.

Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, could be involved because if a single East European fellow ruler loses control it would be a near certainty that Soviet tanks would begin to roll again.

Carter has portrayed himself as a champion of universal human rights, and any forceful articulation of them is likely to create difficulties in his relations with the Soviet bloc.

There has been some involvement already. After the State Department issued a warning to the Soviet Union on Jan. 27 against silencing dissident Andrei D. Sakharov, Carter told reporters that this was his attitude, too. He also noted that he had not known in advance about the statement, and that any such pronouncement should come more appropriately from either himself or his secretary of state.

A day before the Sakharov statement, the State Department accused the Czech government of violating the Helsinki accords by its treatment of dissenters.

Analysts in the Carter administration say current events in East Europe must cast doubt on the validity of the 1975 Helsinki Agreement.

That agreement embodies a series of three accords signed by heads of 33 European governments and by the United States and Canada. They ratified the postwar boundaries of Europe. They also tacitly acknowledged Moscow's control of the East in exchange for nonbinding promises of greater civil liberties for Soviet and East European citizens. One Western aim was to interlock Communist lands with their neighbors in a variety of functional arrangements so as to underpin peace, security and cooperation in the Old World.

But controversy is building over the way the Communists are fulfilling their side of the bargain.

"It was a bargain that always stuck in their throats," remarked one allied negotiator who spent months in Geneva and Helsinki working on the accords.

And that controversy seems certain to gather in intensity with the approach of a conference in Belgrade in June when foreign ministers of the 35 countries meet to review the workings of the Helsinki accords.

Some Western authorities reckon it's just possible that the Kremlin and its cohorts are cracking down hard now on dissenters in order to be able to ease shortly before June – and make themselves look better in Belgrade.

Equally, they suggest that leaders of the hundreds of thousands clamoring for what they believe to be their rights have set out to push harder – even in the face of mounting police pressures – in the hope of attracting Western attention and rallying Western backing for their cause in Belgrade.

Thus some of the elements of a volatile situation seem to have been built up – as they have been built up before in East Europe.

Single incidents, or innocent-looking trends, in the past have sparked major explosions in parts of the Red empire – three times in Poland since 1956, once in Hungary that year, in East Germany and in Czechoslovakia. In some cases, it took massive Soviet intervention to restore the situation.

These perils are known to be in the minds of Carter and Brezhnev, according to some of their senior diplomats.

Consequently, both leaders are in a hot spot with tough judgments to make.

Carter, for instance, must decide how best to fulfill his inauguration day vow to work toward the achievement of "individual human rights" and liberties for oppressed peoples everywhere.

Yet, while saying that, Carter made a clear distinction between an aim of making life easier for subjugated nations and his priority goal of insuring mankind's survival by negotiating a second-phase pact with Russia to limit – and later to reduce – nuclear weapons (SALT II).

Brezhnev, for his part, has said he shares Carter's drive for a SALT II pact. But he also has said he wants no confrontation with the West at Belgrade. And he has disavowed any intention to liberalize Soviet policies to satisfy the dissenters and has branded Western demands along these lines as just plain "interference in our affairs." Detente to him, he has said, means merely the avoidance of war.

Carter, who will be meeting with key Western heads of government in an economic summit this spring, nevertheless has some leverage in his dealings with Brezhnev in the months ahead.

Even before he was elected, he took time to spell this out. In a memo to Sen. Henry M. "Scoop" Jackson, D-Wash., on the subject of economic dealings with the Russians while the Russians continue trampling on human rights. Carter wrote in part:

"I share your deep concern over the problem of human rights and freedom of immigration in the Soviet Union and throughout the world. The legislation which you co-authored, which is the law of the land and which is aimed at securing these rights, will be effectively implemented by a Carter administration."

The Jackson amendment denied most-favored-nation treatment and unlimited credits for a country, such as Russia, that bars freedom of immigration and human rights. But the President is allowed to waive both provisions if he thinks he can achieve progress towards his goals.

Hungry for Western grain, trade and, most of all, technology, Communist countries urgently need even more than the $40 billion worth of Western credits they now have.

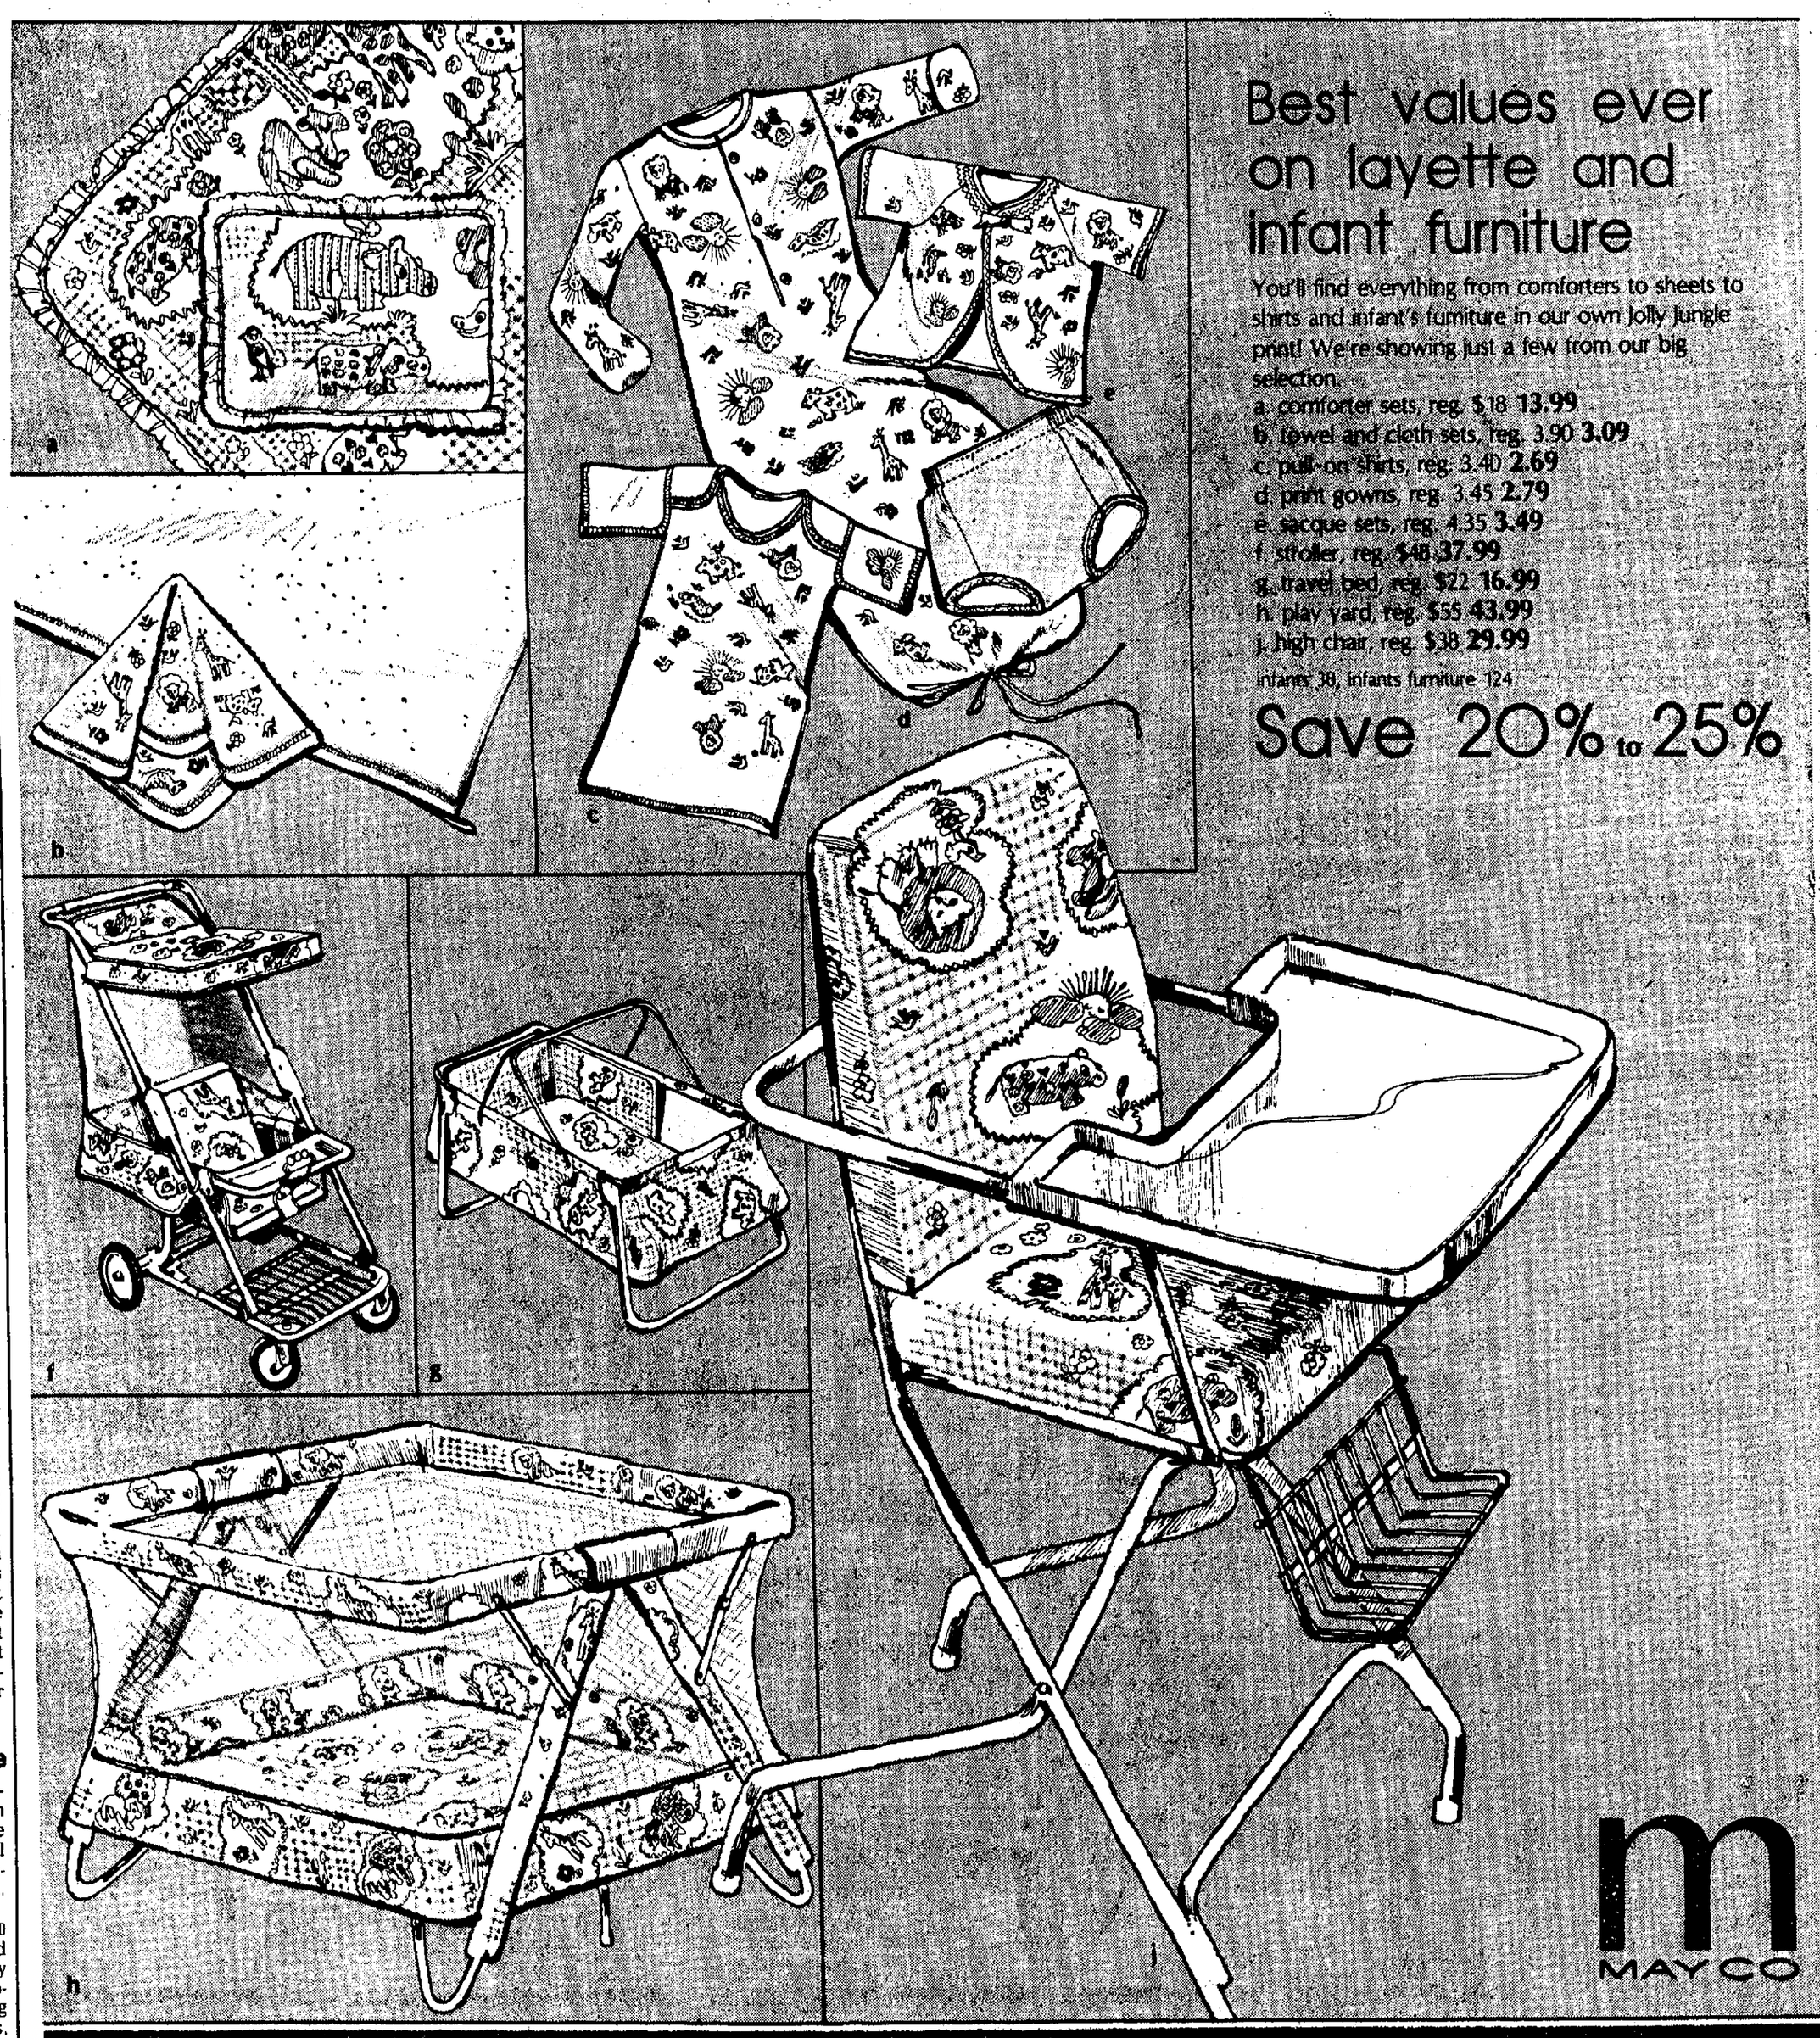
A breakdown of Communist countries' indebtedness to the West at the end of 1976, provided by U.S. sources, shows:

- Bulgaria owes $2.3 billion.
- Czechoslovakia owes $2.1 billion.
- East Germany owes $4.7 billion.
- Hungary owes $2.6 billion.
- Poland owes $10 billion (plus $1.5 billion to Russia).
- Romania owes $3.3 billion.
- The USSR owes about $14 billion.

Against this background, then, it is no accident that this should be a winter of discontent for the people of the Communist part of Europe.

The impact of the West's recession initiated by the 1973 Arab oil blockade has spilled over into their economies. Their goods are harder to sell abroad in a shrunken world market. The goods they buy are dearer, and they have earned less hard currency.

They also have come to learn that the seemingly endless building up of Soviet – and Warsaw Pact – military power has been depriving them of an easier life now. It also has diverted scarce raw materials from consumer to non-productive military use. Manpower needed in their factories and for public works has been redirected into armaments production, compelling countries such as Czechoslovakia to import cheap Yugoslav and Cypriot labor.



And, with some surprise, it has hit them that the Soviet-Cuban thrust into Angola seriously undermined Western confidence in their collective good faith to respect the spirit, letter and purposes of detente.

Gym Proprietor In London Reduces 'Gray Flannel Flab'

EDITOR'S NOTE – Al Murray, a former Olympic coach, has turned his talents to the most unfit of all, the beleaguered British businessmen, and claims he can shape 'em up in less time than it takes to break for tea. And all that without undue demands on middle-aged flab.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) – What the ambitious, aggressive, anxiety-ridden businessman needs most this year, even more than a tax break, is just 40 minutes of exercise a week to keep pace in the rat race.

"The typical time-addicted, successful executive is what we call an A-type person, a doer and a go-getter and a prime candidate for a heart attack," said Al Murray, proprietor of the City Gym in the bowels of London's financial district where high-powered bankers, high-pressure American businessmen, puffing Members of Parliament and the likes of Sir Lawrence Olivier, Peter Sellers and John Fields, associate director of the Royal Ballet, turn up three times a week for 15-minute workouts.

Denis Howell, Britain's Minister for Sport and a former soccer referee, also is a regular at this sweat shop dedicated to reducing gray flannel flab with a minimum of time and effort.

Seven years ago, with research grants from the British Heart Foundation, the Sports Council and the Medical Research Council, Murray, a former Olympic coach and trained physiotherapist, and Dr. Malcolm Carruthers, a renowned biochemist, embarked on a study of unfit middle-aged business executives with the aim of determining the least amount of exercise needed to help them avoid a coronary.

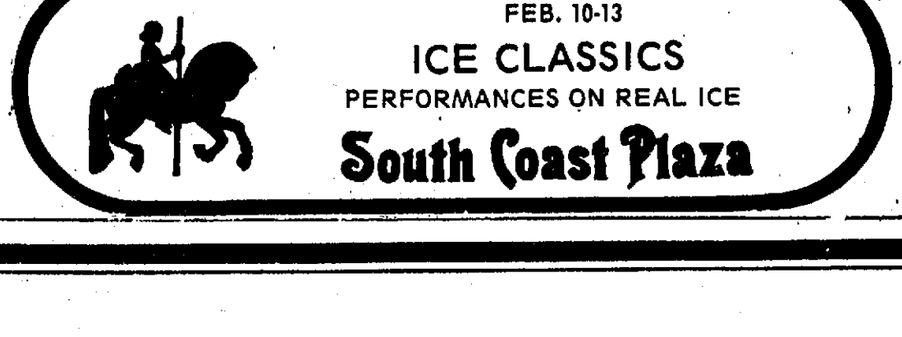
The result is "f-40" – fitness on 40 minutes a week, a series of minimal exercises that can be done at home, without equipment, but designed to produce the maximum measureable results in lowering blood pressure, blood fats, cholesterol count and coagulating factors.

The British have been interested in executive blubber since a study of Her Majesty's civil servants some years back showed that those who participated in any kind of vigorous sports for even as little as a half-hour a week suffered one-third fewer heart attacks than their chairbound colleagues.

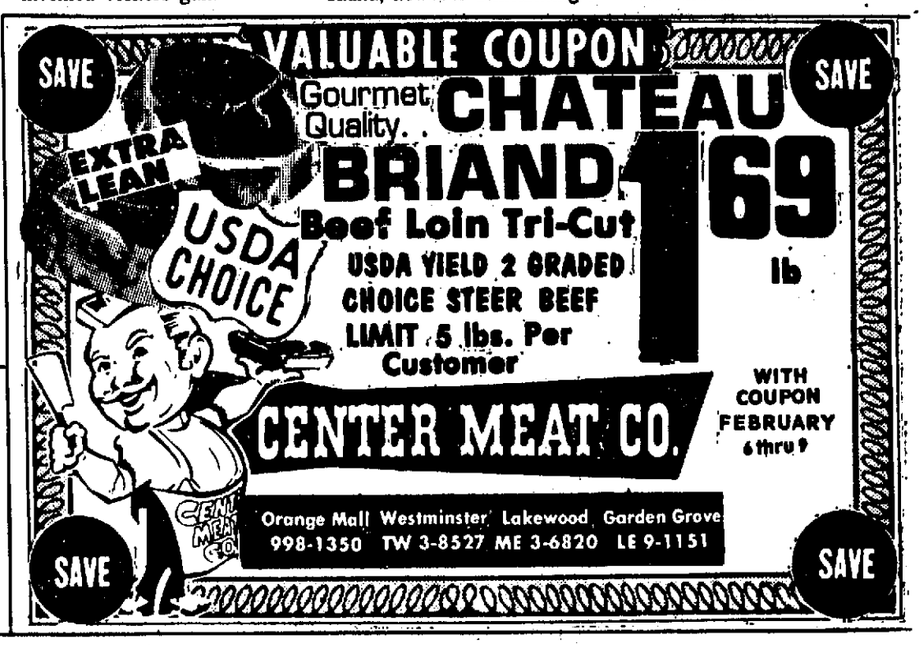
Research by the British Heart Foundation proved that anger, anxiety, stress, frustration and similar emotions boiling under the executive bowler give the body a powerful shot of a hormone called noradenaline, also found in the blood of racing car drivers and top athletes after competition. The hormone leads to the production of blood fats and eventually hardening of the arteries.

"There are more cases of high blood pressure and heart condition among the executive class than any other," says Murray, who spent most of his life training Olympic athletes before opening his gym for sedentary office types in 1963. "It's not what they eat but what's eating them that does the real damage."

The f-40 exercises, as performed at the City Gym and now outlined in a paperback booklet that has become a best seller, are vigorous enough to make the over-pressured management type work up a sweat and raise his pulse rate above 100, or what Murray calls "get a glow on."

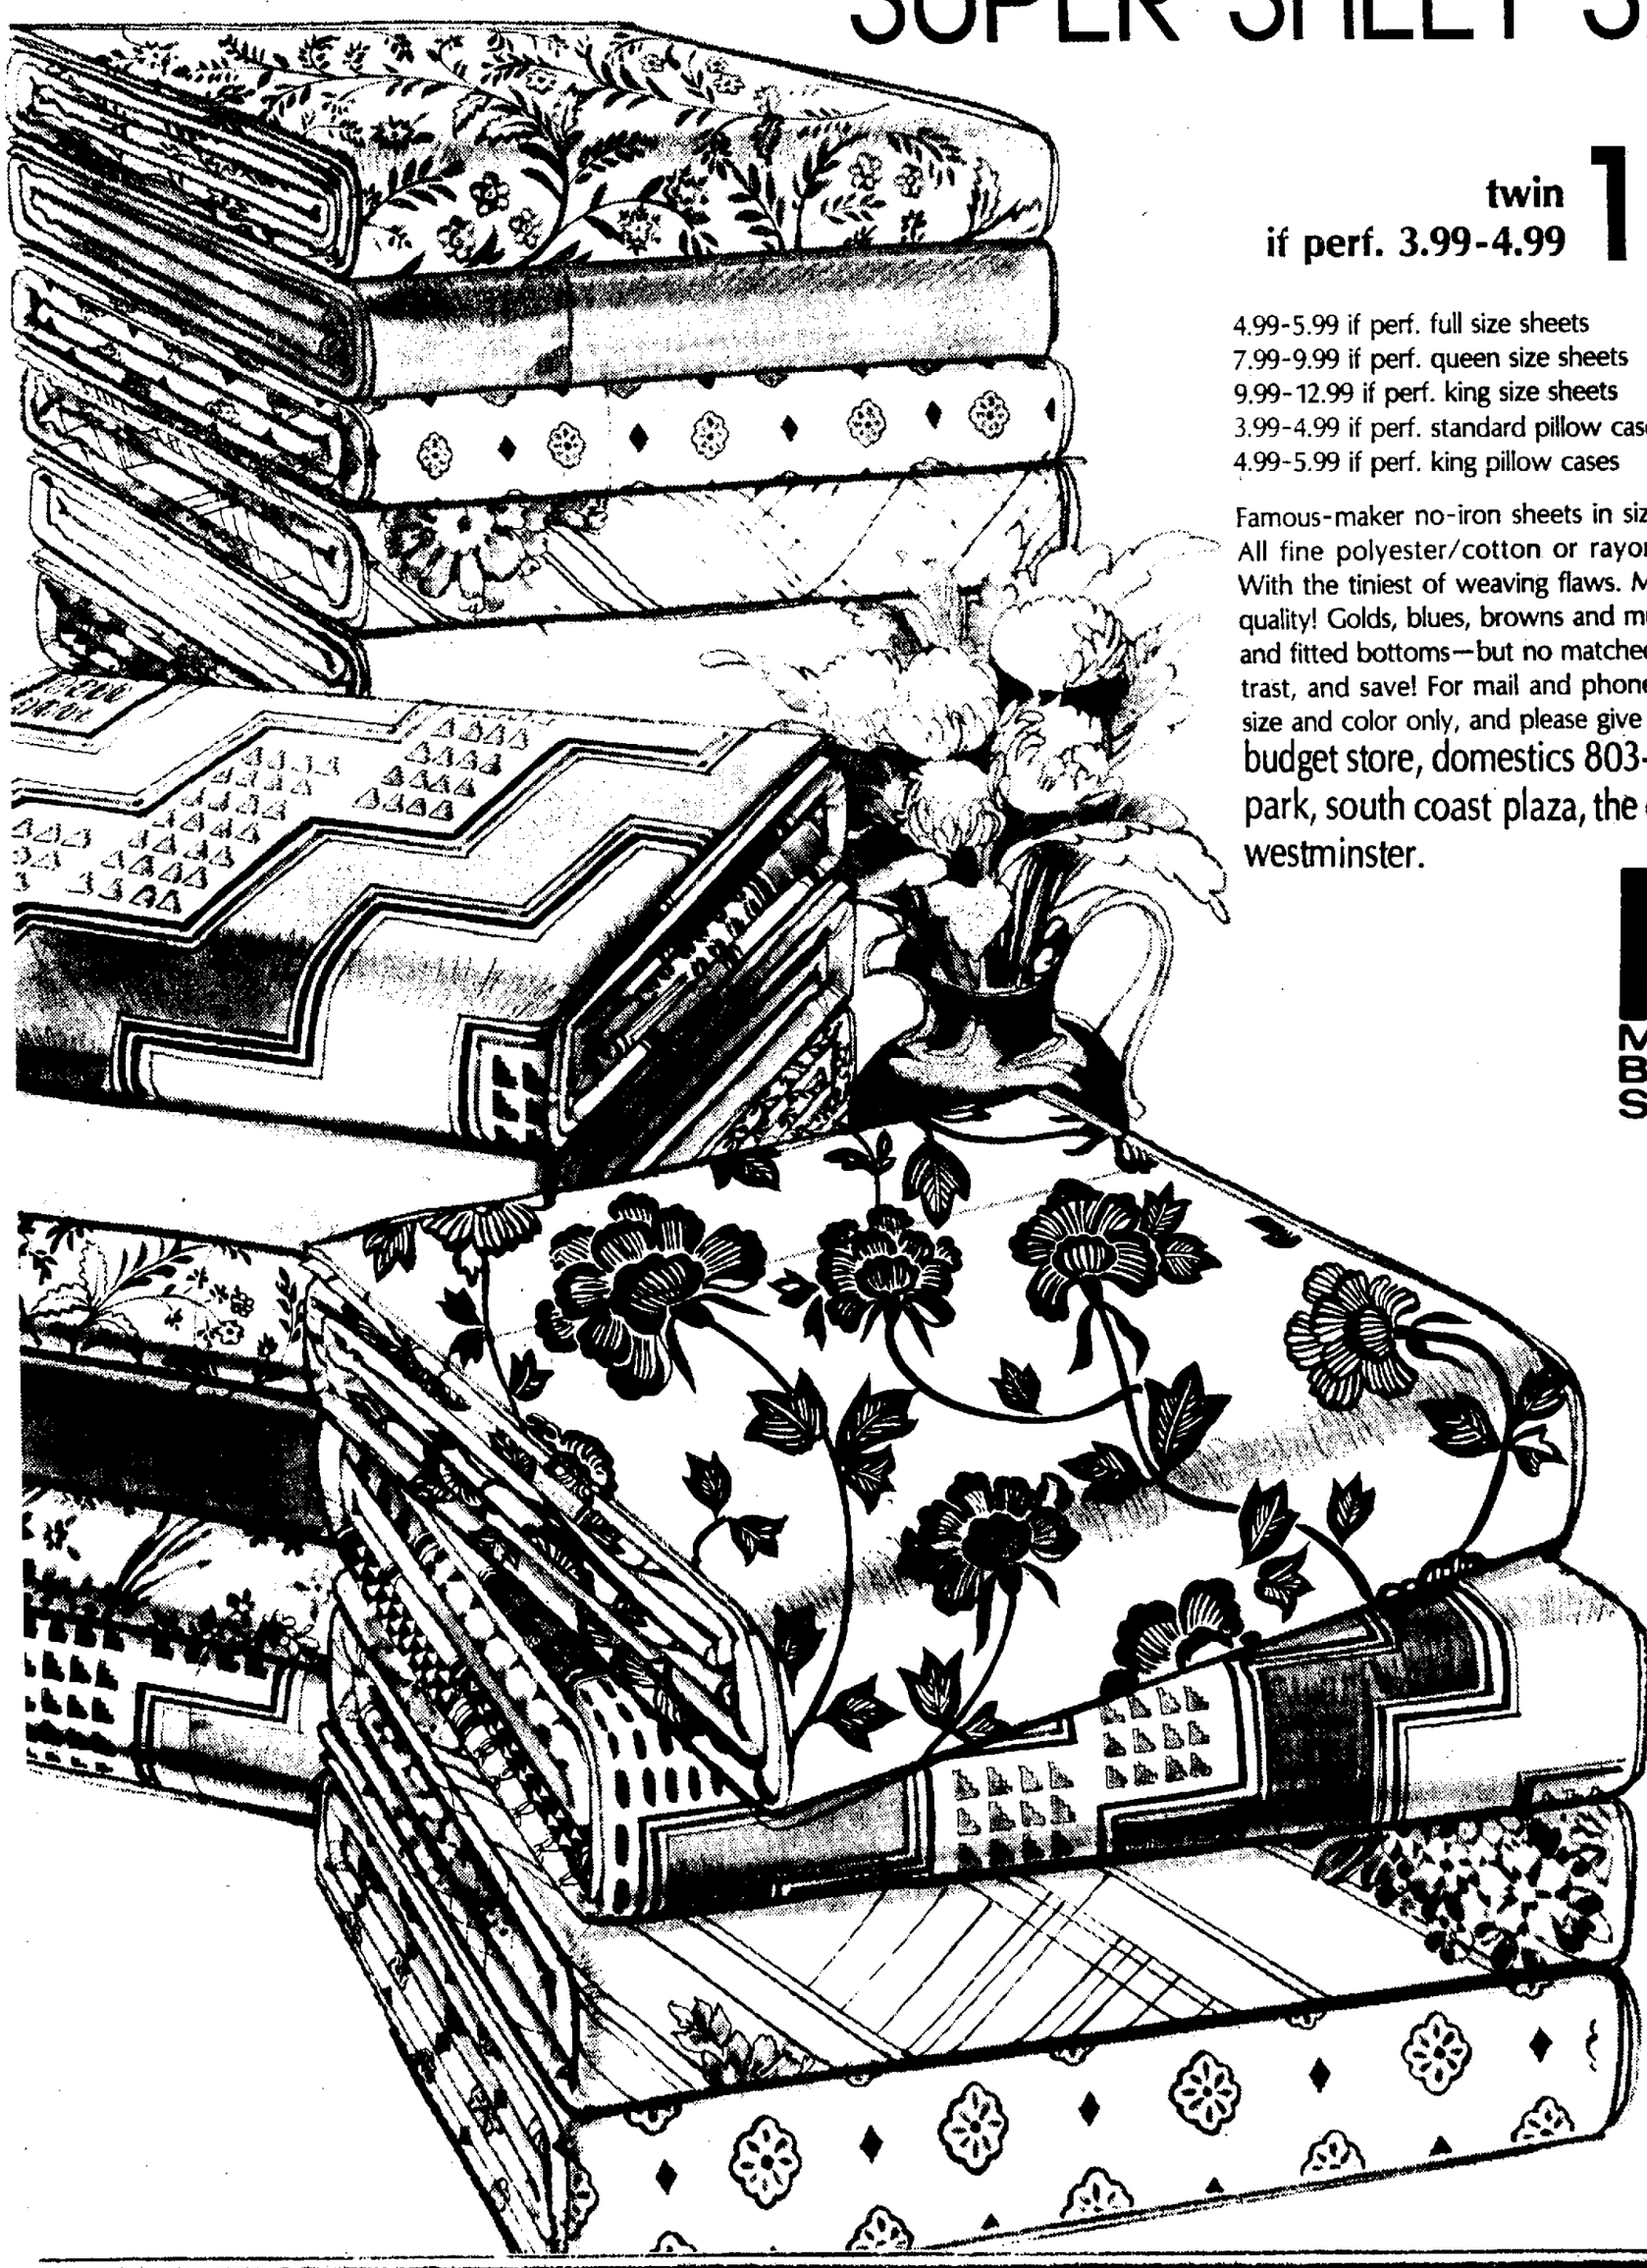


Research on more than 300 brokers and bankers who pay $150 a year to attend the City Gym brought the happy news for those who hate to exercise that the beneficial effects of a brief but vigorous workout lasted for several days, even weeks. Those who turned up twice, or preferably three times a week for the 14-to 20-minute sessions began to feel better and show marked reductions in blood pressure and blood fats in as little as six weeks. There also was a cutoff point beyond which too much exercise did more harm than good.



The program begins with five simple mobility exercises, which cover the major muscles and joints, repeated 10 times in a quiet, unhurried manner. Keeping track of his pulse rate, this A-type exerciser moves on to a series of strength exercises, done with weights made at home by filling plastic detergent bottles with water or sand, and then to some light endurance exercises to strengthen the heart and lungs.

"Begin as if you were an unfit old lady, it's easier and safer to speed up as your level of fitness increases," advises Murray, who starts off most of his charges with "a tire check," using "flab calipers" he designed to measure the rolls of fat around the executive middle. The 62-year-old Scot, who for 20 years coached British national and Olympic weightlifting teams, also has devised the "Murray pulse monitor," a set of bars that when grabbed register the pulse rate.



Murray, who describes himself as an A-type person, "a driver and a work addict," was Scottish weightlifting champion at 19, no mean feat in a land where the laddies toss telegraph poles about the glens to work up a sweat. At 21, he set a British weightlifting record, then became a stage acrobat. He turned to physical education in the army when as an instructor he devised a program of exercises that made the ammunition handlers strong enough to pass the 56-pound shells for the newly-invented Vickers gun.

They further caution that, "having a cold shower after a sauna, however stimulating it may be, is a variety of circulatory gymnastics which is not recommended."

RENT CREDIT
Dear Trouble Shooter

Your readers who are qualified renters or who live in a mobile home should be interested in filing for a refundable credit of $37. To qualify, they must have been a resident of California on March 1, 1976, and renting a dwelling in California which was their place of residence. (Owning and occupying a mobile situated on rented land satisfies this requirement.)

The AARP (American Association of Retired Persons) has tax aide counseling centers in 20 locations in Orange County. We have more than 80 counselors to help retired persons with their income tax forms and the renters credit. Service is free.

Please tell your readers to call 638-6703 for locations in their area.

Happy to pass along word of the AARP service to folks who need it, Ma'am. Thank you for writing.

NON-SMOKERS
Dear Trouble Shooter

We are organizing a non-smokers trailering club and held our first meeting Feb. 4. Any non-smoking campers who want to join our group (or just look us over) can call us at 557-3781.

Ten couples have already joined us, but more are welcome. Owners of trailers, motor homes, campers, etc., are eligible.

One of the nicest things about the Ol'Trouble Shooter's job is that it gives him a chance to help folks get together with others who share the same interests. You should be hearing from a passel of others who like to go trailering and who don't clutter up the outdoors with their smoke.

MEXICO REUNION
Dear Trouble Shooter

On June 1, more than 300 Santa Monica High School graduates from the years 1950 through 1954 will gather at Los Angeles International Airport to begin a 5-day 25-year reunion in Puerto Vallarta, Mex.

Will you urge any Samohi alumni who live in Orange County to get in touch with the reunion committee?

You betcha! The number to call is (213) 348-1388.

MONEY ORDERS
Dear Trouble Shooter

I am one of the unfortunates who bought money orders (about $200 worth from Universal Money Orders to pay our bills.

My husband has been averaging only 20 hours a week at work, so this really hurts. The store where I bought the money orders gave me a number to call. I've tried all hours of the day, but the line is always busy.

My husband thinks the store should be responsible for our loss since they sold the money orders. I'm not interested in who's right or wrong, just where do we go from here?

I understand such companies are bonded. Whom do we see about getting our money back?

H.C.
Garden Grove

The store that sold you the money orders was acting only as an agent for the money order firm. They made the sale in good faith just as you made the purchase.

Here's what the State Banking Department recommends:

Try to work out something with the creditors you paid with the money orders. Some of them may be willing to wait along with you until matters are out of bankruptcy court.

Hold onto the money orders as proof of claim (or at least know where they are if your creditor refuses to release them).

Obtain a form from the store that sold you the money orders and fill it out. The State Banking Department wants to know where you bought the money orders, your name, your address and phone number, the amount of each money order and the 9-digit serial number on each order.

Mail this information to: State Banking Department, 600 S. Commonwealth (Suite 1501) Los Angeles 90005.

The money order firm is bonded and insured, but what percentage of this money will go to the folks who kept it going (those and others like you who bought money orders from it), will be determined only after the bankruptcy court referees are through.

Several stores, one in Sacramento, another in San Diego and one in Oxnard have made good on the money orders purchased from them. Owner of the Oxnard store (located in a financially deprived area) said he considered it a personal and moral obligation to folks who had been his long-time customers. He plunked out more than $20,000 of his own money to redeem the worthless money orders, saying that he could absorb the loss better than some of his patrons.

The Trouble Shooter wishes there were other stores financially able to do the same thing. Most of those hurt by the money order firm's failure are those who have no checking accounts and scanty financial reserves, if any.

'BATTLE' SCARS
Dear Trouble Shooter

I am a reformed drug addict and have been drug-free and on parole since 1971. I'm happy. My boys are active in Cub Scouts and Boys Club activities. There are several things I would like to get involved in, but I'm afraid. No one can tell I'm a former drug addict except for one thing, the scars (nasty scars!) on my arm.

I am afraid to meet my neighbors and get active in community affairs. I find myself withdrawing because I am self-conscious about someone's noticing these scars and commenting on them.

Do you suppose there is a plastic surgeon "angel," who would do a skin graft for me according to my ability to pay? I'm willing to do volunteer work or give speeches on drug abuse in return. My stability can be checked through my parole agent.

Please do not use my name or identify me, but will you ask if someone will help?

No Initials
No City

The Trouble Shooter will ask if there's a plastic surgeon willing to help you, Ma'am, and he'll let you know pronto when, and if, he hears from one.

However, why not wear those "battle scars" of yours proudly, admitting to those you come in contact with that you had a major problem, and that you licked it?

The mere fact that you've weathered the storm can help others and can discourage other young folks from experimenting with dangerous drugs.

Anyone who shuns you because of the scars isn't worth knowing in the first place. Good luck and hang in there!

UNKNOWN MOTIVE
Dear Trouble Shooter

Yesterday I couldn't believe my eyes! A woman was balanced in the opening of a Salvation Army receptable. She had a long stick with a makeshift hook and was pulling sacks of soft goods out of the collection shed. She stuffed at lease five bags into her station wagon before she saw that I was writing down her license number.

How can people steal from the donations of others? I wrote a note to the Salvation Army giving them the license number, but maybe a word in your column would scare off anyone else considering similar action.

H.J. McN.
Westminster

Let's leave it up to folks at The Salvation Army to take action against the lady, if they consider it will accomplish anything to do so.

Meanwhile, let's console ourselves with the thought that perhaps the woman has problems we don't know about. (A large family that needs clothing and she's too proud to ask for help?)

Got a Problem? Write The Trouble Shooter, P.O. Box 11626, Santa Ana, Calif., 92711. PLEASE DO NOT TELEPHONE YOUR PROBLEM TO US. Due to the volume of mail, not all letters can be answered or acknowledged. Those published will be signed with initials only, but you must include your name, address and telephone number.

EIGHT SCHOOL DISTRICTS IN COUNTY INVOLVED

Programs Give Pregnant Teens A Choice

By ESTHER BAUER
Register Staff Writer

Georginne was a bright bubbly girl of 14, a bit overweight perhaps, but she looked pretty much like any other ninth-grade student except for one thing. She and her long coat were inseparable.

She wanted to hide even from herself the fact that she was pregnant.

She is just one of the nation's one million school-age girls who get pregnant each year – a national concern to school officials because pregnancy continues to be the major reason girls drop out of school.

But Georginne didn't, instead, she transferred to one of the separate high school campuses in Orange County for pregnant students.

About 560 other girls also attended special state tax funded "pregnant minor" programs last year at eight of 14 unified and high school districts here.

While proponents of such programs claim they are "welfare preventives" and cut down on the drop-out rate of pregnant students, opponents say the programs, in effect, subsidize promiscuity.

Georginne (not her real name) claims most girls would drop out if they were offered no choice but to remain at regular high school campuses.

According to state school law, tax-supported schooling must be available to all school-age children, including pregnant teens.

And school districts are subsidized with "aid to the handicapped" school tax funds – school-age pregnant girls are classified as physically handicapped to qualify for the subsidy – if they offer the special schooling. Students like Georginne, from districts without "pregnant minor" programs, can transfer to those that do.

"Here we're all in the same boat. Everybody is either pregnant or has kids," she said of the special campus. "You feel weird at other schools. Everybody stares and you always think they're talking about you," the brown-haired girl said, wincing.

Coordinators of the special programs, called SAM (School Age Mother) or TMP (Teen Mother Program), say the main thrust is to give girls a chance to finish school without judging their morality.

However, in most TMPs the girls must transfer back to regular campuses by the end of the semester in which the baby is born.

This gives little time for them to build self-esteem or acquire valuable job skills, counselors complain. And those who choose to keep their infants usually drop out at this time because they don't have anyone to watch the children while they're in school.

Georginne kept her baby. However, she transferred to one of two districts offering nursery care for infants up to two years old. At break and lunchtime she can feed or play with her baby, which counselors encourage.

By the time her baby is two years old, she again would face potential baby-sitting problems since ordinarily she just would be entering the 12th grade. But the district has relaxed graduation requirements from 200 credits to 160 so she can graduate earlier. Not all districts do this, however.

Besides regular high school curriculum, job training is available through six-week internships with cooperating businesses in most districts.

Though unpaid, girls can get on-the-job experience in several areas including secretarial, receptionist, cosmetology, child care and restaurant-related fields.

The importance of a job and career goals are emphasized so the girls will be more likely to want a job than welfare handouts, coordinators say.

To be in any of the programs, they must be under a doctor's care. The welfare of the unborn infant is always stressed. Stillbirth, premature birth and birth defects caused by venereal disease are twice as high as in any other age group, according to national statistics.

Because about half of the girls, including Georginne, are married (she was married after the baby's birth), marriage counseling is offered both to the girls and the usually insecure young husbands. Few husbands, however, come in for counseling, teachers reported.

So the main effort is to help young wives cope with the problems and responsibilities early marriage and parenthood can incur. Divorce, poverty, unemployment and child abuse rates are highest among teen parents, according to TMP counselors.

The TMPs stress self-reliance and though they don't have statistics to back up the claims, school officials interviewed had "gut feelings" that TMPs help to reduce the drop-out rate and the number of pregnant girls that go on welfare.

Dr. Anne Brennan, coordinator of Garden Grove Unified School District's TMP, said the program could be more successful if more girls heard about them.

"They (school officials) are afraid to advertise them because it would look like we're promoting premarital sex," she said, adding that pregnancy is as much a stigma to the wed as unwed student.

Georginne, a straight-A student, originally was transferred to a continuation school when administrators discovered she was seven months pregnant.

"I felt like a criminal. I wasn't given a choice," she said.

She said she never was informed of TMPs in other districts. She heard of them through a friend.

Dr. Brennan said that is how most girls hear about them. Other district TMP coordinators added that publicity could threaten their programs' very existence, because of some school board opposition to the extra cost. So they try to keep a low profile.

Combined, the special programs cost taxpayers $594,957 last year, county records show.

Regular state tax funding paid about $270,000 of the total, and state physically handicapped subsidies paid $112,500, with a possible $389 per student annual reimbursement for transportation costs. The remaining cost was picked up by local taxpayers, a spokesman said.

Elizabeth Robertson, Santa Ana Unified School District trustee and long-time critic of the district's five-year TMP program, said she believes the $3,080 cost per student is exorbitant when compared with $1,192 state funding for each regular student.

She claimed nursery care, which was state and federally funded for $16,000 last year, is a further waste of money, saying, "After delivery, they (the mothers) belong at home if they decide to keep the baby."

Without "special spending" programs, pregnant students have the opportunity to graduate through high school equivalency testing and adult education classes, she said.

"Anytime you say they won't do it for themselves unless the government steps in to do it for them, you are heading for a totalitarian state," Ms. Robertson said.

"You will always have people who won't behave themselves. You have to let them suffer the consequences," she said. "When society begins to reward the wrong things, the wrong things begin to multiply."

Doris Allen, school board member of the Huntington Beach Union High School District, said, however, it's unrealistic to think many pregnant students would stay in school without special help.

"I don't think they should be rewarded," she said. "But it would be even more detrimental to society not to educate them."

How successful the programs are in achieving their goals is difficult to measure. Santa Ana Unified is the only known district to conduct a follow-up survey.

Taken a year ago, the study showed that of 150 girls, 50 were on welfare, 50 had been but were not at the time, and 50 never had been on welfare, reported Angie Hildum, principal of Carl Harvey School, location of the district's TMP.

Of the estimated 500 girls to enter the program since February 1971, none had a stillbirth and four had babies born handicapped – two severely and two minor, the study showed.

Six cases are known of girls who had dropped out and returned pregnant once again. Most were pressured not to keep their babies, the usual reason for recidivism, Hildum said.

While Georginne and most girls claim the TMPs are needed, they say something should be done to make girls realize "pregnancy can happen to you."

Most girls are unbelievably naive, say Hildum and Dr. Brennan of Garden Grove Unified. Counseling and sex education classes could reduce the numbers of pregnant girls, they say.

And Dr. Deryck Kent, a UCI Medical Center obstetrician, even goes further, claiming he has a sort of profile he uses to predict which little girls are likely to get pregnant.

A "high risk girl" has a low opinion of herself, has few girl friends and usually parents who are hostile toward each other. She has a poor relationship with her mother but is on good terms with the father. She believes woman are inferior to men, Dr. Kent claims.

He said counseling to improve the child's self image should begin in the first grade. But he said even long-range intensive counseling is not enough without also offering practical sex education classes to teens before they reach child-bearing years.

Georginne and other students said sex education classes are so watered down they are useless, and one girl said she was sexually active in the seventh grade – one grade before the class was offered.

"They tell you this is the boy, this is the female, but don't say what happens when you put them together," the girl said of her school district's sex education program.

Dr. Kent is adamant that realistic courses and early counseling would reduce the numbers of pregnant girls and therefore costs of "pregnant minor" programs.

But critics charge that sex education must be taught under moral and religious guidelines, and not as a science.

Dr. Kent and Brennan, however, are convinced that taxpayers would benefit if school officials made some attempt at counseling the girls before they get pregnant.

The cost of the eight-district "pregnant-minor" programs last year and approximate enrollment totals are:

Capistrano Unified, $62,001; 33 girls.

Fullerton Union, $54,398; 90 girls.

Garden Grove Unified, $127,728; 150 girls.

Huntington Beach Union, $55,973; 50 girls.

Newport Mesa Unified, $37,157; 40 girls.

Orange Unified, $80,652; 50 girls.

Placentia Unified, $63,053; 50 girls.

Santa Ana Unified, $113,986; 100 girls.

TODDLERS STAY IN NURSERY WHILE TEEN MOTHERS ATTEND SPECIAL CLASSES

Report: Youth Offense Trend May Be Toward Serious Crime

By CHARLES ROBERTS
Register Staff Writer

SANTA ANA – Fewer Orange County youngsters will be locked up in juvenile detention facilities over the next five years, say county analysts, but those locked up will be "much more sophisticated" and will commit more serious offenses.

In the 1976-77 state of the county report released recently, the analysts forecast trends through 1981 based on three indicators.

First, analysts predicted a decreasing population between the ages of 10 and 17, the high-risk years of juvenile delinquency and crime.

Charts in the study indicate that juvenile detention facilities experienced a fairly steady population increase from 1968 through 1974 when near-capacity was reached. But, beginning in 1975, detention populations declined to two-thirds of capacity.

"With a decreasing juvenile risk population ... a further decrease in institution population may be expected," said the study.

Analysts predicted that the age 10-17 population will decline from 266,040 in 1977 to 249,180 in 1981.

This trend could reverse sometime after 1981 because the 0-10 age population is expected to increase during the 1977-81 period.

"These population shifts," the study said, "might signal a change in priorities for juvenile services with greater emphasis on services directed at the younger population group and a re-evaluation of service needs of the 10 to 17 population."

However, the study made no projections as to what might happen to the institution population when the 0-10 age group matures into the 10-17 age bracket.

Second, analysts took note of current juvenile diversion practices and an emphasis on community-based facilities and treatment, as directed under AB 3121, California's new juvenile justice reform law which prohibits the housing of so-called "status offenders" in lock-up facilities.

For the past few years, less serious youthful offenders have been assigned to classes and counseling sessions rather than being committed to juvenile hall-type facilities where they would be separated from their families.

Those that the court decided should be removed from the home but should not go to juvenile hall have been housed in group homes.

Finally, AB 3121, which became effective Jan. 1, prohibits "status" offenders – such as youngsters classified as incorrigibles or runaways – from being placed in lock-up facilities. The new law's intent is to keep status offenders away from youths who have committed crimes.

Third, while analysts found a sharp decline in the overall number of juvenile arrests, they reported arrests for most serious crimes rose between 1974 and 1975.

Among serious juvenile crimes on the rise were homicide, up from seven to nine (29 per cent); robbery, 296 to 325 (10 per cent); burglary, 2,988 to 3,769 (26) per cent); grand theft except auto, 401 to 890 (121 per cent); arson, 85 to 157 (85 per cent); and "white collar" crime, 47 to 80 (70 per cent). Although arrests for these crimes were up, the total number of felony arrests among juveniles actually dropped 5.5 per cent – 10,981 to 10,381 – between 1974 and 1975. But that drop lagged well behind the 13.6 per cent decline for all types of juvenile arrests – down from 40,035 to 34,610.

The decline in total felony arrests occurred because of major drops in the areas of marijuana, down from 4,554 to 2,999 (34 per cent) and other drug offenses, 601 down to 502 (17 per cent). Forcible rapes also declined, 75 to 38 (49 per cent).

"It is unknown at this time," said the analysts, "whether this decrease (in drug-related arrests) signals a trend. Further, whether the decrease is the result of changing patterns of drug usage, law enforcement practices, availability of drugs, etc., cannot be answered without further investigation."

Analysts also assessed the overall arrest rate – the number of arrests per 1,000 juveniles in the population.

Between 1960 and 1975 the number of arrests annually more than tripled – 10,319 to 34,610. But during that period the country's juvenile population more than doubled, rising from 100,300 to 279,216.

"Thus, while the number of juvenile arrests has increased over threefold, the juvenile arrest rate has risen less dramatically from 103 per 1,000 in 1960 to 124 per 1,000 in 1975," reported the study.

The 1975 arrest rate compares favorably, the analysts said, with the average arrest rate for the 16-year period of 122 arrests per 1,000 and 134 per 1,000 for the five-year period 1971 to 1975.

Again, the analysts suggested the decline may be caused by the increasing use of diversion programs and community based alternatives and the decrease in the 10-17 age portion of the under 18 population.

Reading elsewhere in the study, county supervisors, who have much of the policy-making authority over juvenile justice matters, will find certain geographical areas in the county identified as the likely major sources of juvenile crime and delinquency.

The study found that more than 50 per cent of Orange County's under 18 population reside within four cities – Anaheim, Garden Grove, Huntington Beach and Santa Ana – and in the county's unincorporated areas.

Based on "social indicators," the analysts reported two census tracts in downtown Santa Ana, the neighborhood just west of the Santa Ana River in that city and a portion of south-central Garden Grove presented the highest rate of youth-related problems.

These neighborhoods contain 1.5 per cent of the population, said the study, while accounting for eight per cent of the child health clinic clients, four per cent of the probation cases, 6-10 per cent of the welfare cases and five per cent of the teenage pregnancies.

Also targeted by the study as secondary problem areas were the other older, low-income neighborhoods in downtown Santa Ana, Fullerton, Placentia and Anaheim, and parts of Costa Mesa, La Habra and Westminster.

These areas contain 10 per cent of the county's youth population while producing approximately 42 per cent of the child health clinic clients, 17 per cent of the juvenile probation cases and 22-25 per cent of the welfare cases.

Together, the primary and secondary problem areas cover almost all of downtown Santa Ana.

Concluded the analysts, "numan services-oriented departments currently offering services on a regional basis should examine the locational pattern of those services in light of these analyses."

Supervisors Warm To Plan To Lower Heat

SANTA ANA – A proposal to lower thermostat settings in county buildings to 65 degrees will be considered by county supervisors Tuesday.

The measure is intended to help efforts to make more California natural gas available to areas of the eastern United States which have been experiencing extremely cold weather.

Supervisor Laurence Schmit began pushing for the 65-degree setting in the wake of a request by the Public Utilities Commission and San Diego Gas & Electric Co. Thermostats in county buildings are currently set at 68 degrees.

An aide to Schmit said that supervisors Ralph Clark and Philip Anthony have already agreed to support the lowered temperature setting and that county building officials have been alerted to be ready to make the change.

Thermostats in county buildings are in locked boxes and it will take an estimated two to three days to reset them, the Schmit aide said.

O.C. TO CONSIDER HALTING ESCAPE COUNTRY OPERATIONS

By GARY KRINO
Register Staff Writer

SANTA ANA – Escape Country, a privately owned action sport center in Trabuco Canyon, may be headed for more trouble.

Tuesday, the board of supervisors will consider taking steps to suspend operations at the 830-acre facility due to what the county describes as building code and permit violations.

Murray Storm, assistant director of the Orange County environmental management agency, said that for the past two years the county has been working with Jim Robinson, Escape Country president, in an effort to resolve the building code and permit problems.

"Sometimes when we make checks at Escape Country, we don't find any violations and things seem to be going along fine," Storm said. "Then we go back and there are a bunch of violations."

Storm said the violations include improper use of portable buildings, lack of permits for doing earth moving, grading and paving work, unsafe hookups for drinking water, electricity and plumbing plus holding concerts which are not covered by the Escape Country use permit.

Storm says he sees Robinson as "a rugged individual who would like to go his own way. I sympathize with him," Storm said, "but I have a job to do."

Robinson, who calls himself "a rebel," does not deny that he has done things at Escape Country that violate county codes and permit regulations.

"If I want to change a curve on our motorcylce track, I have to get a permit," said Robinson. "If I want to move some dirt, I have to get a permit. I've got a drawer full of citations for not getting permits. In the last four years, I've been threatened about four times with shutdown by the county."

Robinson argues that inconsistencies on the part of the county in enforcing regulations has caused the problems. "I'm not allowed to have any trailers on the site," he said. "The other day, a county inspector came out and saw the toilet trailer I have that is hooked up to an independent sewage system. The inspector said I could have the toilet trailer, but would have to get a permit for it and the sewage system."

Robinson also claims that the county does not uniformly enforce its regulations. For three years, Escape Country sponsored an outdoor steak barbecue on Thanksgiving and charged $2 per person for the meal, Robinson said. But after the 1973 event, he said the county informed him the outdoor dinner violated restrictions and requirements and it was discontinued.

Robinson said that last year he went to a political barbecue. "I know about violations," Robinson said, "and they had all kinds."

He alleged that there was no dust control on the roads at the site, two-foot high grass in the parking area which posed a fire threat, no potable water supply on the site and food was prepared and served without the required approved building. "The county is not enforcing its regulations in a uniform manner," Robinson said.

Robinson also claims that the county is partially to blame for the grim financial picture Escape Country is facing.

Robinson said since the park opened in September 1971 he has spent about $600,000 to develop attractions which include a motorcyle racing course, largest skateboard center in California, hang gliding facilities, fishing lake and picnic facilities plus other improvements on the land which has been in his family since 1883.

"Last year we lost $35,000," Robinson said. He blames a part of the loss on the fact that the county will not allow him to conduct "wilderness camping" on the site.

"Many people want to come here, park their campers or put up tents and stay two or three days," he said. "But the county says we can't let them unless we install an urban-style camp ground with all sorts of facilities.

"People could stay at O'Neill Park two miles down the road, but they tell me they want to stay here. I'd say that because we don't have camping, we've lost millions of dollars."

In an effort to raise additional revenues, Robinson says he initiated a series of Sunday afternoon concerts at Escape Country and held 10 of them during December and January.

However, they were canceled Tuesday after the Jan. 30 event resulted in 14 arrests, 70 citations and 7 traffic accidents on narrow, curvy, hilly Live Oak Canyon Road that is the only access to the area. At a previous concert there was a stabbing death.

The sheriff's department, county officials and Robinson all said they received complaints related to traffic congestion caused by concert goers on the road. Very few complaints were received about the concert itself.

For years, local residents plus Robinson have been telling the county that another road needs to be built to serve the area. Thus far, the complaints have resulted in a series of studies, but nothing more.

"The road is less safe now than it ever was," Robinson said. "The county has just repaved a lot of it, and now there is a four inch drop from the pavement to the dirt along side the road. If you go off the road and try to drive back on you can get thrown into the oncoming lane."

Robinson says there is a good possibility he eventually will close Escape Country. The reason? "Mainly because what the county lets us get involved in is not enough to let us get by," he said.

BP Library Board Orders Probation

By CHARLES GOULD
Register Staff Writer

BUENA PARK – Blaming a communications breakdown, the district library board has put library director Kent Holmes on six months probation.

But Holmes says he got a bum rap. "I just don't feel they came up with sufficient evidence to justify doing what they did," said the librarian.

The board voted 3-2 last month to put Holmes on a trial period until communications between Holmes, his staff and the board are improved.

Holmes did not know of the action until it was announced during the regular board meeting this past week attended by the public, Holmes and some staff members.

The board had been meeting for the past two months to investigate employe complaints about Holmes. It also considered problems such as equipment maintenance and changes in circulation procedures.

Said member Yvonne Collins: "The public was frustrated, and the employes didn't know where to go."

It was a letter to the board from Rose Marie Moran, president of the Library Employes Association that last November triggered the board investigation. The letter accused Holmes of interfering in association matters.

The board's final action was tempered by some doubts on the part of some of the members.

"The board is on probation as well (as Holmes)," said president Emily Levine, and must "accept responsibility for a good deal of the problem."

Member Edward Erdtsieck, who moved for the probation vote, cited "mistakes of past boards" as contributing to the problem. He also indicated he was not sure if Holmes' investigation had been thorough enough.

Holmes said, "I only regret that I didn't question the authority of the board to do what it did, and that it didn't inform me prior to taking action.

"Communications breakdowns occur everywhere all the time for a variety of reasons," said the librarian.

County Panel To Hear Pupil Transfer Plan

SANTA ANA – A county committee is scheduled April 13 to hear a proposal to transfer 500 La Palma area students from the Buena Park School District to Centralia Elementary and Anaheim Union High School district schools.

In mid-January a petition was filed with the County Committee on School District Organization by a La Palma parents group. La Palma, borders the northwest corner of Buena Park, and is in the Buena Park School District.

The Buena Park school board is opposed to the boundary change. Trustees claim about 20 district classrooms, costing $1.5 million, would be left vacant if the change is approved.

If the committee and county school board approve the plan an appeal to the state school board by any one of the districts involved could force an election on the measure in any or all of the districts, Hal Mason, committee coordinator said.

An election in the Anaheim Union High School District could cost up to $40,000, he said.

New 'Status Offenders' Law Might Be Amended

By CHARLES ROBERTS
Register Staff Writer

Claims of "chaos" in the "status offender" program because of California's month-old juvenile justice law are not going unnoticed, the bill's author said.

The claims of "chaos" stem from reports of wholesale escapes by status offenders from detention facilities because juvenile authorities no longer can compel them to remain.

Under the new law, status offenders – those classified as runaways or beyond parental control – can only be housed in no-lock facilities.

Douglas McKee, a Los Angeles County deputy district attorney, drafted AB 3121 for Assemblyman Julian C. Dixon, D-Los Angeles, who steered it through the legislature last year.

McKee said that sponsors of the bill are considering amending it to give juvenile authorities more control.

However, whether or not such amendments will be offered, he said, will depend upon the results of a statewide survey under way to determine if the escape claims are accurate.

McKee said the sponsors might be willing to modify the law sufficiently to allow limited lock-up of status offenders where other control methods are unsuccessful.

In its present form, McKee admitted, the law has no provisions to compel status offenders to remain in the no-lock facilities.

To fill what he sees as a loophole in the law, Orange County Juvenile Court Judge Raymond Vincent has begun a policy of placing status offenders in lock-up institutions if they run away from McMillan School in Santa Ana, the county's no-lock facility, after he sends them there.

Vincent contends his policy is legal because a status offender who runs away from McMillan School violated a court order, an offense making the individual eligible for a lock-up institution.

The Orange County Public Defender's Office is challenging Vincent and a test case is expected soon to decide the issue.

McKee said he agrees with the state Attorney general's opinion made public Tuesday which says procedures like Judge Vincent's are illegal under the existing law.

The intent of the new law, said McKee, was to stop treating status offenders like criminals and start rehabilitating them.

In addition, he said, the bill made room in lockup facilities for youthful criminals and made it easier for 16 and 17-year-olds who commit crimes to be tried in adult courts.

British Teachers Like Weather, Not Grades

By RICH SEELEY
Register Staff Writer

Four exchange teachers from England are spending this year at Orange County schools, and they all agree on two things: the weather is great and the grading system is not.

Richard Leathes, who is teaching Spanish at University High in Irvine, calls the traditional American letter grading system "the hardest thing I've had to learn in this country."

He explained that at the boarding school where he teaches in England students are not given letter grades for classes. Competency in academic subjects is determined by a series of national tests that students take at 16 and 18.

Martyn Osborne, who is teaching electrical engineering at Cypress College, is the most critical of the letter grade system.

"I deplore it," he said. "I think it detracts from education. A good student will always get a high grade but I'm concerned about the average student. Some of the students at Cypress have left my classes because they didn't think they could make a high grade."

John Hodgson, who is teaching English at Troy High in Fullerton, said grades can have both good and bad results.

"Grading can be useful in getting students motivated," he said. "But students can get discouraged if they get poor grades. And there is a tendency for even good students to see their work only in terms of a grade."

But Hodgson sees disadvantages in the British system, too.

"The problem in British schools is that without grading, students don't know how they are doing," he said. "They feel they are just floating."

Margaret Caswell, who teaches coed gym classes at Irvine High, is the only one of the four who hasn't had to wrestle with grades. Because the gym at Irvine wasn't completed when classes opened at the new school last fall, students had to be bused off campus for limited gym classes without grades.

She said she prefers the system at her school in England where teachers write parents a subjective report on how they think a student is doing.

Besides of the absence of letter grades, English high schools do not have graduations or give out diplomas.

"We do not give out certificates at our school saying, 'This guy did all right with us,'" Leathes said. "Everything depends on the 'General Certificate of Education' exams."

By passing these national exams, the student earns certificates of competency in subjects including math and English, Leathes said. The certificates are required before the student can get a job or go on to college level studies. The exams are standardized throughout the country by the British Ministry of Education.

Like Hodgson, Leathes acknowledges that the British school system is far from perfect.

"One criticism of the English system," he said, "is that your whole fate rests on how you do on one test."

Despite misgivings about the American grading system, the teachers say that they have found many things that are admirable in the schools here.

"English schools don't have anywhere near the audio-visual equipment you have here," says Hodgson sitting in a room surrounded by sophisticated movie projectors. "There is a TV in every room here at Troy. There are only two in my whole school in England."

Osborne and Leathes both say they like the American coeducational system.

"There are five females in my classes at Cypress," Osborne said. "I've had a little trouble adjusting to it. I made the mistake of calling one of them mister.

"I'd like to see females in classes in the UK (United Kingdom) but they aren't accepted in electrical engineering at home."

"The English system is too formal," Leathes said. "Things are more relaxed here. I'm happy to see students without uniforms."

Miss Caswell is on on a committee planning reforms in curriculum for Irvine schools. She said that as a teacher in England she wouldn't have an opportunity to plan curriculum.

The one major difference between American and British schools is teacher salaries. The British teachers say they make about half as much as their American counterparts.

"The top pay for an instructor where I teach at home is $10,000 per year while the bottom at Cypress is $11,957," Osborne said. "Of course, prices are lower. My mortgage in the UK is $80 per month. A house that costs $80,000 here would cost $40,000 in the UK.

"Comparatively, we are a little worse off than the teachers here. Taxes are higher but we do have free medical care."

Unfortunately for the English teachers here, they are living on their UK salaries and exchanging pounds for dollars at the low exchange rates.

Living in the U.S. and making British wages have left the teachers strapped for funds. To make up for this, various teacher organizations here have helped arrange trips to Disneyland, Catalina, Palm Springs and San Diego – trips that the British teachers, most of whom are here with families, could not afford.

The exchange program that brought the teachers to Orange County is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Under the program, the four teachers here have exchanged jobs, homes and sometimes cars with four Orange County teachers now in England.

Seal Beach Man Battles Fumes Left By Smokers

By PAUL CHAPPLE
Register Staff Writer

SEAL BEACH – Ed Hurst occasionally had to breathe the acrid fumes of gunfire when he was a marine. Now that he is no longer in the corps, he is not about to inhale any smoke he doesn't have to – including cigarette smoke.

The 36-year-old engineer-bachelor feels so strongly about the matter he has founded an organization called National Non-Smokers Inc.

His low-key publicity campaign has brought inquiries from interested folks all along the West Coast and as far east as Virginia and Tennessee.

The thrust of Hurst's campaign is to lobby for non-smoking regulations wherever people congregate.

Hurst feels that non-smokers should not be subjected to the foul air produced by lighted tobacco and even the exhaled breath of smokers who blow out "poison from their saturated lungs."

He plans to issue a monthly newsletter containing lists of restaurants, taverns and other places where smoking is banned, together with statistics showing health records of smokers and non-smokers.

Hurst also said he hopes insurance companies eventually will recognize that better rates should be made available for anyone who does not smoke.

Hurst said his mother and father both smoked and he was "forced, as a youth, to breathe in foul air that even the home air-conditioner couldn't overcome."

His father, he said, eventually died of cancer. "It helped me decide to someday form an organization against smoking. The non-smoker shouldn't be penalized by the person who smokes."

Displayed in his residence is a poster saying: "Smoking stinks, and if you smoke, you stink too."

Hurst said persons interested in his campaign can reach him by writing P.O. Box 88, Seal Beach 90740.

Marine Study Aided By Ships

WASHINGTON (AP) – When American bombers sank the Fujikawa Maru in the Truk lagoon 32 years ago, no one thought they were doing marine biologists a favor. But today the Fujikawa Maru and other sunken Japanese transports, warships and supply craft form the world's largest collection of artificial reefs, and one whose age is precisely known, says National Geographic.

In 1975 marine biologist Sylvia A. Earle began studying the marine growths on the drowned fleet. "It offers invaluable clues to the growth rates and patterns of the abundant marine life that congregates around submerged reefs," she points out.

The marine growths have transformed the warships, garlanding the guns and growing like chrysanthemums out of the decks, Dr. Earle said.

Women Artist Exhibition Set

LOS ANGELES (AP) – The first international exhibition of work by women artists is on display at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. The exhibit, "Women Artists: 1550-1950," is designed to illustrate the contribution that women artists have made to Western culture during the past four centuries.

"Paintings by women are generally seen as a minority phenomenon both numerically and in terms of historical significance," states Jeanne D'Andrea, the museum's coordinator of exhibitions and publications. "This exhibition should make clear that in terms of style, subject matter and technique there are no perceptible distinctions between the approaches of the male and female artist."

The exhibit will be on display in Los Angeles until March 13, after which it will travel to museums in Texas, Pennsylvania and New York.

JAY JONAS AND HIS COMPACT TANK—A TOY HE WOULD HAVE WANTED

Golf Cart Becomes A Toy Mini-Tank

By CHERYL PRUETT
Register Staff Writer

ORANGE – The government probably could learn something from Jay Jonas.

He built an Army tank for $225.

Of course, the tank is only 5 feet, 8 inches high and runs (at walking speed) on a lawn mower engine – definitely not a Gen. George Patton issue.

But the miniature tank was built for fun, not war.

Jonas operates a sign business here and lives in Norco. He converted an old golf cart into a tank for his three boys, Richie, 13, Travis, 6, and Todd, 4.

The small tank is a replica of the real thing including camouflage paint job, turret, main cannon, three machine guns, radio phones, and tail antenna with an American flag.

"I built it because it's something I would have wanted," said Jonas. "And I try to be a good dad."

One slight problem with the tank showed up in testing. It went backward when it should have gone forward.

But Jonas solved the problem and got the gears synchronized.

The sight of the tank putt-putting onto a battlefield still probably wouldn't strike fear in the heart of the enemy. But it could be a new dimension in warfare – immobilizing the enemy with giggles.

It's a cute tank.

Irvine Okays Pay Raises

IRVINE – Council members have granted raises to two city officials, boosting City Manager William Woollett's annual income by $2,000 to $42,320 and director of public safety and police chief Leo Peart's by $1,450 to $34,000.

The salary raises were announced following a executive council session Thursday during which council members also named Carpenteria deputy city clerk Raye Kingsbury to the city clerk post here at $18,000 a year.

Bonds For Harper School Eyed By Board Members

By RICH SEELEY
Register Staff Writer

FOUNTAIN VALLEY – A unique money management plan is being studied by school officials here to finance the purchase of relocatable classrooms for fire-ravaged Harper School without raising taxes.

Under the plan suggested by trustee Richard Plum, the school district would sell bonds at six per cent interest. Part of the bond money, approximately $130,000, would be used to buy the portable classrooms.

An as yet undetermined amount of bond money would be put into a savings account at a high interest rate.

What Plum proposes essentially would be borrowing money, through the bond process, at a low interest rate, putting it in a bank to earn a high interest rate so the district would earn enough money to offset the cost of the bonds.

"It's just smart money management," Plum said in making the proposal at a trustee meeting this week.

Dr. Charles Woodfin, assistant superintendent for business services, said he would study the proposal to determine how much bond money the district would have to raise to make the plan work.

Woodfin had presented a proposal to the trustees to sell bonds to raise $225,000 to finance the $130,000 purchase of the portable classrooms and set up a contingency fund for reconstruction of the building destroyed in the Jan. 23 fire.

Paying off the $250,000 bond over a 15-year period would have added one cent to the tax rate the first year going down to one third of a cent by the fifteenth year, he said.

The school district is eligible to sell $4.9 million worth of construction bonds that were authorized under an $8 million bond issue approved by district voters Dec. 16, 1969, a district spokesman said.

The district has fire insurance which will cover most of the cost of rebuilding the burned out classrooms, but the policy does not cover the cost of portable classrooms to be used in the interim.

In related actions, the trustees voted to bypass the formal bidding process to purchase the relocatable classrooms to save time.

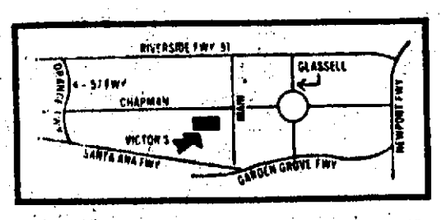
Trustees also voted to have Woodfin procede with plans to purchase six locatable classrooms from a contractor for an estimated price of $111,558.

That price does not include installation of electric outlets, finishing of the interior walls, carpeting and building ramps and steps. Those additional costs are expected to raise the total cost to approximately $130,000, Woodfin said.

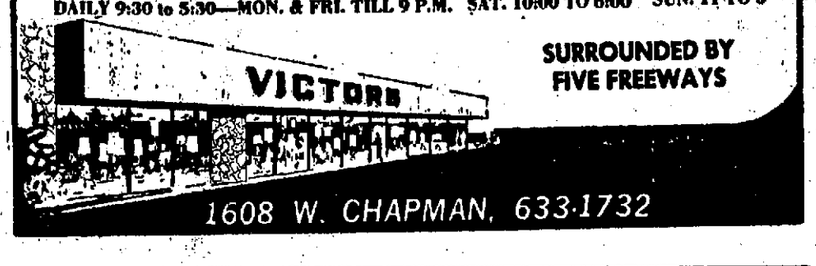
If the relocatable classroom plans are approved by the district architect next week, trustees have agreed to hold a special meeting to vote on final authorization for purchase.

If the purchase is approved next week, Woodfin said, the relocatable classrooms could be constructed at the school in approximately six weeks.

Students displaced by the fire which destroyed eight class-rooms are meeting in the teachers lounge, on outside patios and in the music room, said Wilma Bohannan, school principal.



Hibernation Study



WASHINGTON (AP) – Because animals which hibernate live longer than other mammals of the same weight and size which do not, scientists are speculating on the benefits of hibernation for humans, says National Geographic.

In hibernation, all body processes are slowed, body temperature drops and breathing is reduced and irregular. Food and oxygen requirements are greatly reduced. Dormant humans could live through the centuries needed to make long space voyages, scientists theorize, although they see only a dim possibility of inducing true hibernation in man.

Scientists are not certain what triggers hibernation but they believe it is closely linked to the endocrine and nervous systems.

Opening lead — K ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

"Nice defense partner," said both East and West simultaneously.

It was nice defense and each one made his contribution.

Things started out simply enough. West opened the king of clubs and continued with the trey after East signalled with the nine. Declarer dropped the jack on the second club but East was not fooled. He knew that his partner's three of clubs was the fourth best of his original holding and hence South had a least one more club. East also wanted to get rid of dummy's fourth spade so he continued clubs to force dummy to ruff.

Now South could do nothing better than to play out three rounds of trumps before leading a diamond.

At this point it was up to West to do something for his side and West came through nobly. He played his eight of diamonds!

This was the start of an echo designed to show that he held an even number of diamonds. If that even number happened to be two, East could do nothing. But if it were four then East was in action. He ducked one diamond, won the next and led a heart. South was out of diamonds with no way to get to his good diamond in dummy. He had to lose a heart in the cool of the evening.

Phony Fruit Will Fill Gap Amid Shortages

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) – Juicy chunks of fruit are being made from artificial ingredients by scientists who say they are finding substitutes for the shortages of the future.

Freshly made, the fake fruit is firm, translucent and cut into cubes about the size of diced pineapple. It can be flavored, textured and colored like nature's own, the developers say, and could be molded to look like farm-grown fruit.

When freeze dried, for storage, the fake fruit is light and foamy and tastes like sugary cereal.

The new fruit is being developed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Its first use will be to feed astronauts on long journeys into space. But within a generation, its developer says, the imitation pineapples, cherries and bananas will probably be common ingredients in products on supermarket shelves.

"We need to develop the technology to use the resources we'll have in the future," said Dr. James M. Flink, the MIT food engineer in charge of the project.

"No one is going to be eating this tomorrow," he said. "But 20 years from now, this could be a component of the normal diet of people."

The test-tube fruit is made from a seaweed derivative, sugar, gelatin, pectin, artificial flavor and coloring, plus vitamins and other nutrients.

The scientists have mixed their fruit with other foods and fed it to taste panels.

They found that peach yogurt made with the artificial fruit tasted almost as good as the commercial yogurts. And the tasters liked fake fruit in strawberry Jello even better than a sample that had real frozen fruit in it.

The hardest part, the developers said, is imitating the consistency of real fruit. The single product developed so far has the texture of canned pineapple. It will be used as a model for learning to re-create other fruits, such as apples or pears.

Freak Weather Hurts Wildlife In East, West

WASHINGTON (AP) – It is a wicked winter for wildlife, too.

White-tailed deer in the East and Middle West, for example, are belly deep in snow and finding it rough to find food or get away from packs of killer dogs, opposums are suffering frostbite, and fish in ice-locked lakes and streams are dying of oxygen starvation.

But, in the West and Great Plains, the problem is a lack of snow. Snow produces much of the water at the spring melt. In the Pacific Northwest, steelhead trout and salmon are gathering at river mouths, unable to swim upstream to spawn, due to the low water.

It is unseasonably warm in Alaska, with shore ice breaking up along the North Slope, prompting fear that polar bears may become stranded on ice floes. The weather ensures higher cow and calf survival of caribou, likely to prompt an increase in wolves that prey on these herds.

These are among reports of U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologists assessing the freak winter weather's impact.

Large numbers of songbirds reportedly have died due to heavy snow in southern Missouri, lead poisoning has claimed lives of Delaware ducks ingesting spent lead shot from hunters' guns and feeding in corn fields because marshes are frozen, and quail and grouse have suffocated in the upper Middle West and New England because blowing snow clogged nasal passages, the service reported.

U.S. Barriers Pose Big Traffic Hazard

CHICAGO (AP) – Collisions in which vehicles hit bridge abutments, median barrier ends or other fixed roadside hazards now account for 40 per cent of all highway fatalities, reports Energy Absorption Systems.

In 1976 more than 40 states had crash-cushion systems to reduce injury and damage, the company said.

Red Tape Mires Red Travelers Heading West

By ERIC WAHA
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA (AP) – There is a saying in this neutral country bordering several East European states that anyone who has been on a trip can tell a lot. But in Eastern Europe, tourists can tell a story even before going, if they want to visit the West.

Here is what Josef Novak, the Mr. Average of Communist ruled Czechoslovakia, a country of almost 15 million, has to do.

He first has to get a bank pledge for the foreign currency allowance, for which he had to apply at the beginning of the year. Eventually, he gets $11 per day, but not more than $220 total.

Then he has to get an endorsement for the trip from the place he works, which enables him to apply for a passport. To get it, he has to prove by a document not older than six months that he has no criminal conviction.

He cannot go to the West more often than once in three years. There are no such restrictions for family visits. But this applies only to immediate relatives; that is, children and parents, and husbands and wives. For such visits, the total foreign currency allocation is only $10 in Europe, $20 overseas.

Czechoslovak passports are valid for five years and extensions are not complicated, but an exit permit must be applied for each time Josef Novak wants to go abroad.

Tourism to other Communist countries, on the other hand, is fairly easy, except for the Soviet Union and in some cases Poland, where letters of invitation are required.

In the first half of 1975, a total of 142,624 Czechoslovaks braved the red tape and made it to the West. The comparable figure for 1976 was 155,474. No records are available as to how many Czechs wanted to go, but failed to get permission.

In Communist-ruled Romania, a country of about 20 million, Gheorghe Popescu, the Romanian Mr. Average, has an even tougher time visiting the West. The official figure for 1975 was about 100,000, but it included such groups as official delegations, athletes and dancing and singing groups.

The first step towards Popescu's trip to the West is to fill out a form, write an application and obtain a letter from the head of the place where he works.

The next step is to apply for a passport. The passport has a validity of five years, but exit visas are issued mostly for only one trip, or for a limited time. Popescu cannot go to the West oftener than once in two

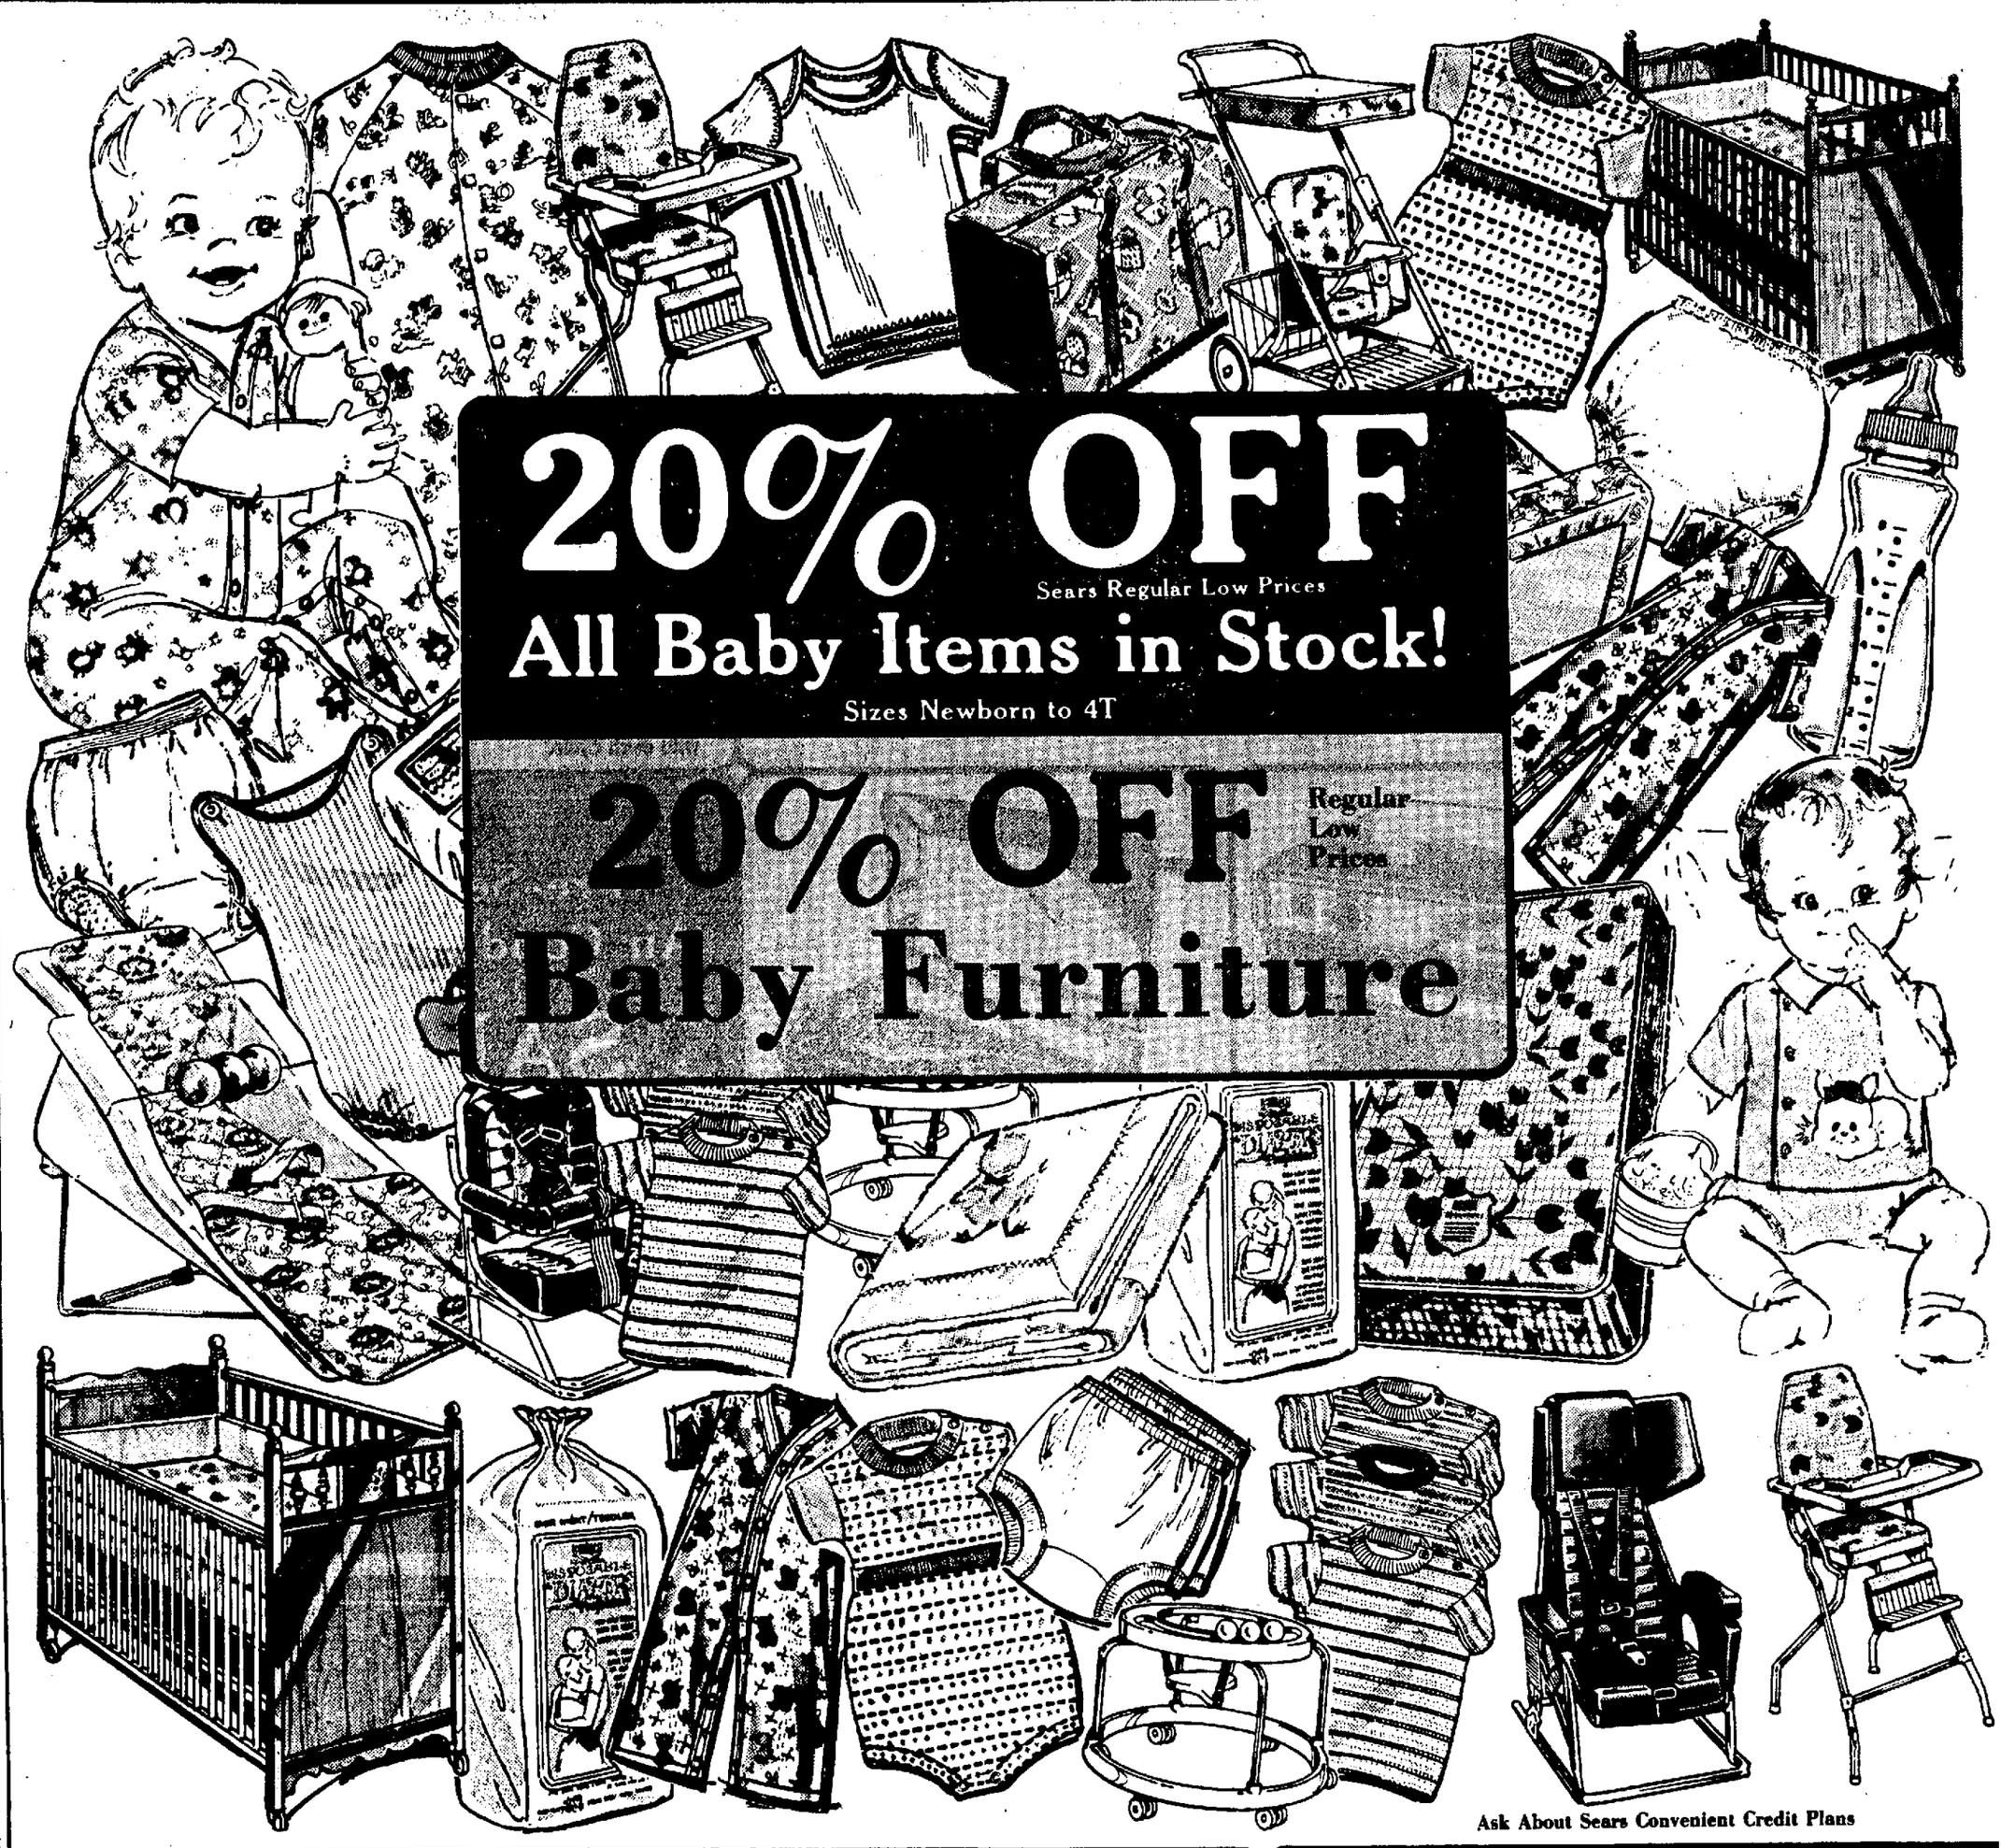
Candy Prices Major Concern To Young Fry

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) – Fourth-graders at Robertson Elementary School here have advice for President Carter on everything from war to pollution – but their main concern is the price of candy.

In letters to the President, they also advocated law and order, more macaroni and cheese for school lunches, banning pornography, the killing of whales and smoking, and making a law requiring mandatory raises in allowances.

"Dear Jimmy Carter, I voted for you in the elections and I'm glad you won the elections. I thought you were pretty good when you were governor. I hear you like Playboy magazine. It's pretty funny that you are a peanut farmer and President. I wish you would lower taxes. My parents would really appreciate it," wrote Tim Snow.

But it was the skyrocketing cost of candy bars that was most on their minds.



"I want you to raise taxes on gas and lower taxes on everything and that means candy bars," wrote Roger Edens.

Sally Forest wrote, "Dear Mr. Carter, I want you to lower taxes and make people lower prices on chocolate and coffee. And make people neuter and fix animals so people won't have to kill animals. Make TV have less commercials."

Most of the letters also urged ... to shorten school hours.

Refuse Glass Soon To Yield New 'Ecoglass'

SAN DIEGO (AP) – The glass bottle you throw out today may become the street you drive on or a brick for your new house next year if research into refuse-derived glass pays off.

Every six weeks, a 50-pound sack of ground-up rubbish from Washington, D.C., arrives at the University of San Diego, where a scientist puts it through "froth flotation" in search of glass particles.

What Dr. Donald B. Peterson is trying to do is match the way nature separates the original sand crystals that go into glass from other materials.

"Froth flotation has been an important process in the cleaning of naturally occurring glass sands for many years," said Peterson. "More recently, it has been applied to recovery of glass from municipal solid waste."

Peterson's work is a small segment of large-scale national research on how to handle the mountains of refuse generated by Americans and recover metal and other elements which at present get dumped.

His studies so far show it is possible to isolate glass from such items as bone and pebbles which show up in rubbish and to derive a product that can be used in the making of new glass, as a substitute for asphalt or in the manufacture of bricks.

The investigation by Peterson, a chemist and acting dean of the university's college of arts and sciences, is under auspices of the National Center for Resources Recovery, Inc., in Washington. That's why the ground-up trash comes from there.

Actually, Peterson only receives the glass-pebble-bone residue remaining after the lab in Washington has removed paper, metals and oils by means of other recovery systems.

Then he uses a super version of an electric kitchen mixer (it goes at speeds of over 3,000 revolutions per minute) to stir glass granules out of the other materials.

He's found the ground glass can be attracted into a stiff froth of air bubbles that forms at the surface, but the other materials are not.

Now he's attempting to determine what chemicals can be added to help the glass collect faster.

Peterson said the collected glass particles can be melted back to form new glass. The amber "ecoglass" produced is suitable for many containers.

The material gathered from the separation can also be used to create an asphalt substitute called "glassphalt" for road paving or can be added to brick clay.

. . . .

The ground glass in brick reduces baking time in the kiln and thus saves energy, he said. The material also allows brick manufacturers to get special texture effects in the finished bricks.

Peterson said the lab in Washington will soon start operation of a pilot froth flotation plant capable of producing 1.25 tons an hour of the glass cullet obtained from municipal waste.

years. If Popescu gets his passport and the exit visa, he will be allowed $6 to $25 per day for his trip.

Janos Kovacs, the Hungarian Mr. Average, can go to the West once every three years, but unlike Novak and Popescu, he usually has no problems. The Hungarian Communist regime is known to be more liberal in granting permission for its citizens to go to the West.

Of the 10.5 million Hungarians, 374,000 went to the West in 1975.

Hungarian passports are good for five years, but they have to be revalidated for each trip.

The total foreign currency allocated to Kovacs is $166, but he is sure to have relatives or friends abroad who help him.

Kovacs has to tackle paperwork similar to his Czech and Romanian counterparts before making the trip. And he has to wait for about a month after applying for his passport to get

Driver Cleared, But Bureaucrats Won't Let Go

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) – Because James Bailey got ensnared in the clutches of Michigan bureaucracy, his wife has to wake up at 6 a.m. each weekday, dress their two infant children and drive him to work at a crane manufacturing plant.

But Bailey says he won't give up fighting for the free return of his driver's license, which state officials admit was suspended by mistake but now want him to pay $4 to have restored.

His troubles started last September, when someone was arrested for speeding and driving without a license in the nearby Saginaw County town of Merrill. The motorist gave the name "James Bailey" and an address in Carson City, Mich.

Later, when no one appeared in court to answer the charges, the court notified the secretary of state's office, which controls driver licensing in Michigan.

No one seems to know how, but the court concluded that James Bailey of Bay City was James Bailey of Carson City. Notification of the pending license suspension, originally mailed to Carson City, was returned by the post office because no James Bailey lived there.

On Dec. 18, the Saginaw District Court ordered the Michigan secretary of state's office to suspend the Bay City Bailey's license.

Notified that he was being punished for something he hadn't done, Bailey managed to convince the court he hadn't been in Merrill the day of the violation and had never been to Carson City, about 70 miles southwest of his home.

Properly vindicated – he thought – Bailey was handed two "clearance cards" by the court which were supposed to get his license back.

But the Bay City secretary of state's office manager, Dennis Henley, wanted $2 to process each of the cards. He said the cards indicated the violations were resolved, but not cleared from his record.

"There's nothing I can do," Henley said. "The cards do not indicate the violations were issued in error, only that the cases were settled. The presumption could be that they were settled by guilty pleas."

Jerome Foley, Saginaw district court administrator, advised Bailey to get the situation resolved because the mark on his driving record could make it difficult to obtain insurance. And he said even if he could get coverage, it could be expensive.

A spokesman for the secretary of state said the Saginaw District Court had been in error.

"Since the Saginaw District Court sent us a court order for his suspension, the only way we can lift it is for the court to order us to lift it," said the spokesman. "The court really took the wrong action by giving him clearance cards. What we need from the court is an order."

Florida City Mystified By Its Adoption

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Officials here say they're mystified as to why the good burghers of Bad Homburg, West Germany, seem to have taken it into their heads to adopt Pompano Beach as a sister city.

"They just send these little notes and Christmas cards all the time," said city commissioner William Alsdorf. "All this stuff is sent in German. I don't know what they're talking about."

Alsdorf said the one-way correspondence began a year ago when Dieter Gasiorek, president of the Bad Homburg auto club, stopped by to present a plate depicting Bad Homburg City Hall.

Alsdorf, then mayor, responded by giving Gasiorek a key to the city just north of Fort Lauderdale on the Atlantic coast. His action started a wave of cards and letters from Bad Homburg, a town 10 miles north of Frankfurt.

One of the first letters came with a picture of Bad Homburg officials accepting the Pompano Beach key. The note said the presentation was made "in a dignified setting."

Pompano Beach officials pretty much ignored other cards and letters which they considered simple messages of goodwill. But when the com-

Pesticides Help Leafminer Fly, Research Finds

RIVERSIDE (AP) – Entomologist Dick Toscano has an unusual prescription for dealing with the crop-damaging leafminer fly: Don't use so much pesticide.

That's because pesticides have been killing the insects which eat the leafminer, says Dr. Toscano of the University of California at Riverside.

Without the control insects to plague them, the leafminer fly has broken out of control and has caused about $2 million damage yearly to California cotton, sugarbeets, squash, lettuce and cantaloupes the past two years.

"Normally the leafminer is under good biological control by beneficial wasp parasites," Toscano said. "These almost microscopic wasps lay eggs in the leafminer maggots. The eggs hatch and the wasp larvae devour the maggots."

The leafminer frequently gets out of control on sugarbeets and then migrates to nearby fields of young lettuce plants, Toscano said.

Toscano has worked on the problem with Imperial County Farm Adviser Rajinder K. Sharma, Monterey County Farm Advisor Norman McCalley and UCR entomology Prof.Dr. Harold T. Reynolds. They believe overuse of pesticides is to blame for the increase in the leafminer population.

They found that multiple sprayings to control plume moth in artichokes around Salinas killed the leafminer's enemies. Turned loose in the artichokes, the leafminer then headed for the celery and lettuce fields.

Toscano advises farmers, "Get off the pesticide treadmill. Stop applying pesticides on a weekly or preventive basis. Only treat when injury is visible and of economic importance."

He said growers will have fewer problems with secondary pests if they cut back on the number of pesticide treatments they apply. If there are plenty of parasitic wasps, the leafminer remains simply a secondary pest and is not particularly serious, Toscano said.

"A grower can tell by looking at new growth of cotton, for instance, whether he needs to apply pesticides," Toscano said. "In many cases seedling cotton in late spring will recover from leafminer injury and no treatment will be needed. Wait a week or so, see if new growth comes out, then decide whether to treat."

Toscano noted that similar leafminer fly problems have cropped up in Arizona and Florida and also in Venezuela. The fly lives throughout the world.

Florida City

mission asked a city employe to translate the letters and find out what the Germans wanted, he turned up several surprises.

There was a report to the auto club which read: "Our club president Dieter Gasiorek has taken the initative and has invited representatives of the city commission of Pompano Beach to visit him in Bad Homburg. The visit is planned for this summer."

"This is a partnership," the club's annual report stated. "Pompano Beach shall not be just another episode."

Other correspondence indicates Bad Homburg residents plan to visit their imagined friends in Pompano Beach this fall.

City officials said that was the first they had heard of the plans. Most said they already had other travel arrangements for the summer.

"I've never been there (Bad Homburg), and I doubt I'll ever go," Alsdorf said. "I presume he thinks because my name is Alsdorf that I can read German. But my ancestors go back to the American Revolution."

SALMON, Idaho (AP) – The Salmon Volunteer Fire Department recently flunked a state safety inspection. There was no fire extinguisher at the station.

BP Clinic Blends Loving, Learning

BUENA PARK – Brain-damaged children are learning to understand and use words in a private clinic that blends modern technology with large overlays of old-fashioned love.

Director Aleen Agranowitz's reputation as gifted speech therapist was already founded when she opened the non-profit Speech and Language Development Center in Oro Grande school here in 1975.

From about 140 students two years ago, the center now serves 180 children with aphasic or multiple handicaps. The students come not only from throughout Orange County but from three surrounding counties also.

None are mentally retarded, but most were unable to progress in tax-supported school programs.

Despite a teaching staff of 34 specialists in language motivation, behavior and learning handicaps, Mrs. Agranowitz still "sneaks in a little teaching" when duties allow. "I just can't leave it alone."

Teachers said her classroom visits with children are moving. "She reaches out, talks to them and puts her arms around them," said one. "They love her."

"Sometimes she'll come in without any material, but she still gets a child going," said another staffer. "She seems to be saying 'we're going to learn now, without harassment or fear!'"

Her technique inspires her teachers to imitate her.

Probably her biggest booster is her co-director Gladys Gleason, who's also a nurse. "Aleen knows the easiest way to change someone is to accept them with their limitations and go from there," she said.

The women met during World War II when Mrs. Agranowitz worked with neurologically handicapped veterans at Maryland's Bethesda Naval Hospital.

She decided to specialize in caring for children and asked Mrs. Gleason to join her. They opened their first school for three children in the Agranowitz home in 1955.

Coming to Orange County in 1961, they held classes in churches and private homes before the Centralia School District offered to rent them the Oro Grande facility, recently abandoned for lack of population.

The center's financial support comes from state and local sources, the United Way, foundations, clubs, service groups and private citizens.

Mrs. Agranowitz concedes the hardest thing to conquer is financing. "We can't compete with the school systems' salaries, so we have to get people who love this work."

Although the teachers may be underpaid, turnover is small. "We've put our priorities in a different order," said Mrs. Gleason. "Program first, salaries second."

The school has one teacher who's blind; another teaches from a wheelchair.

The highest commendations come from parents, who are deeply involved in the program.

"It was the beginning of a new life for me and my family," said Mrs. Roger Armstrong, remembering her daughter's experience at the center.

Mrs. Day Hill said of Mrs. Agranowitz, "There's no end to that woman. I don't know where she finds the hours; yet, she always acts as if she had plenty of time.

"She has such empathy," she said, "She knows you as a parent are having problems, too. She understands your disappointments and a lot of your guilt because you do think you have failed."

Mrs. Agranowitz said the center's goal is simple enough: "Our interest is in providing a happy family atmosphere. We do that by listening to the children, taking time to watch them and talk to them and encourage them.

English Blacksmith Shod OC's Finest Horses

By BETTE REINHARTSEN
Register Staff Writer

BREA – The moors of Newcastle Upon Tyne, the North Sea, were the training grounds for retired blacksmith George Charlton.

He began learning the intricacies of his trade working with sleek, Irish thoroughbreds with aristocratic equine blue blood coursing through their veins.

As a boy on a northern England farm where horses were bred and trained for the steeplechase, he learned early in life that there was infinitely more to horsemanship than just riding across the open spaces to the sea.

The ultra-sensitive responses to the reins, the varied temperaments and traits and the skittish qualities and bids for attention characteristic of highly bred horses had to be learned.

As the son and grandson of horsemen, horse breeders and trainers, he also learned that horses respond to authoritative gentleness, the light but skillful command of the rider.

"You had to know how they think and it was necessary that you knew veterinary medicine and horseshoeing," explained Charlton, "but you could say I received my polish as a farrier (horseshoer) later when I shod horses in the British Army during World War I."

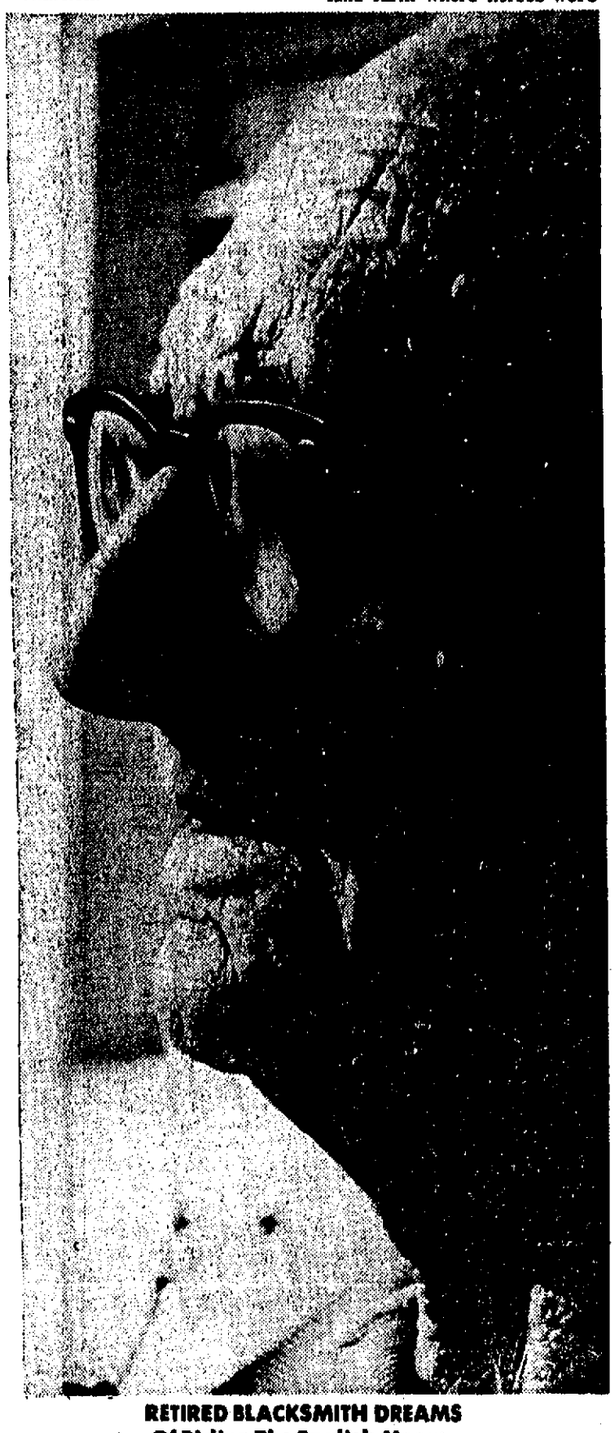
Now in his 80s, Charlton happily recounts his experiences as a British army farrier in England, Italy and France where he shod horses and mules and even the highly-trained mounts of the famed Bengal Lancers.

Charlton came to America in 1920 and to Brea three years later.

He still lives in the white cottage on the land where he operated his blacksmith shop until three years ago, although a bulldozer has uprooted the last vestiges of the site where he fired his forge. A satellite fire station will soon take its place.

Charlton used the tools of his blacksmith trade in Brea not only to shoe the steeds of pioneer families – names like Yorba, Tuffree and Bastanchury – but he also worked for the major oil companies of the area fashioning special pieces of equipment and tools.

But today's Orange County has precious little room for blacksmiths or for the horses and riders they once served. Only a dozen farriers ply their trade in the county.



And Charlton has hung up his hoof nippers and hammer.

He returned to his homeland twice. Once, in 1958, he traveled to Dublin for the world-famous, week-long Royal Horse Show and again, in 1968, he hired a car and "moseyed" around the English countryside.

"That horse show is remarkable. You see the finest horses in the world – the majority of them from Ireland, of course," he said with an impish twinkle of the eye.

And, though he said that he preferred shoeing mules – "mules are smarter than horses and they'll give in to you for shoeing" – riding is another matter.

"I'd like nothing better than to ride a fine Irish thoroughbred over the moors to the sea – the larks fleeing the grasses and flying skyward, singing all the way. I would like to do that, once again."

LA HABRA HEIGHTS

LA Groups Want Boundary Change

LA HABRA HEIGHTS – Residents in three sections of this Los Angeles County community have filed petitions seeking boundary changes to give them the choice to annex to the City of La Habra in Orange County.

Residents in a fourth area of the unincorporated suburb were expected to file a petition "within a few days," said one source.

The neighborhoods requesting the change are on, or close to, the two-county boundary line.

The number of homes in the largest area, located on both sides of Hacienda Boulevard north of La Habra's border, was estimated at 150.

Another section, east of Cypress Avenue, includes 30 to 40 homes.

The third section, immediately north of the La Habra-Los Angeles County border east of Harbor Boulevard and Fullerton Road, takes in 20 to 25 homes.

Still preparing petitions are homeowners in an area between Fullerton and Hacienda, south of Poponoe Road.

Better access to police, fire and paramedic services apparently triggered the petition bid which must be approved by supervisors in both counties.

The residents reportedly hold no grievance with Los Angeles County, but claim present emergency services must travel through incorporated La Habra to serve them.

La Habra City Manager Lee Risner said it was his "understanding that in the larger group about 80 per cent of the homeowners signed the petition, although I haven't yet seen it."

Risner said a similar move by several cities in northern California 15 years ago resulted in the law that provides for moves by property owners from one county to another if they are reasonably close.

"If this is acceptable, it would be the second in the state's history," Risner said.

Most of those joining in the Heights petition effort have homes "currently developed for a more urban setting," said Risner. Homes located north of the petitioning area are mostly one-acre rural spreads.

Risner, in saying the move could result in a tax reduction for affected residents, estimated that "probably could be as much as 20 per cent."

"I think we're approaching the concept of good government here by trying to provide services in the most efficient and economical way," he added.

He said the petitions required 25 signatures of registered voters within each county, plus a majority of the property owners in areas directly affected by the proposed change.

Premature Youngsters Home After 10 Weeks In Hospital

By CON BLISS
Register Staff Writer

NEWPORT BEACH – Swordfisherman Mike Hickey's prematurely born daughters are home now, after struggling for their lives for 10 weeks in the hospital.

And Hickey's fishing boat, "Honcho," is up for sale, he said, to help pay for the thousands of dollars in medical bills incurred during the premature, identical twins' hospital stint.

Both Hickey and his wife, Kathy, are more than just overjoyed that the babies, which now tip the scales at five pounds each, pulled through.

"It's incredible," said Mrs. Hickey. "They're so healthy now considering how critical they were for so long."

Born three months prematurely, Erika and Erin, weren't due until the middle of this month. "That's when I was supposed to have them," beamed the mother from her Huntington Beach home.

For several weeks, it was touch and go, she recalled. "We had our fingers crossed," she said, "and we had doubts for awhile there.

"But it's just great to have them home. It seems so natural now."

Her husband echoed her sentiments. "It's terrific," he said. "Lovely confusion, although I'm not getting much sleep, that's for sure."

"Right now I've got to do something to make some money and get some bills paid off. At the moment I'm trying to put together a loan to get into the manufacturing business," said Hickey. He has decided to sell his swordfishing boat and abandon the fishing business – at least for awhile.

African Clothes

When children visit the Museum of African Art in Washington, D.C., they often try on clothes made just like those worn by native Africans. (Many of today's Africans wear clothes styled just like ours, but others keep the traditional dress.)

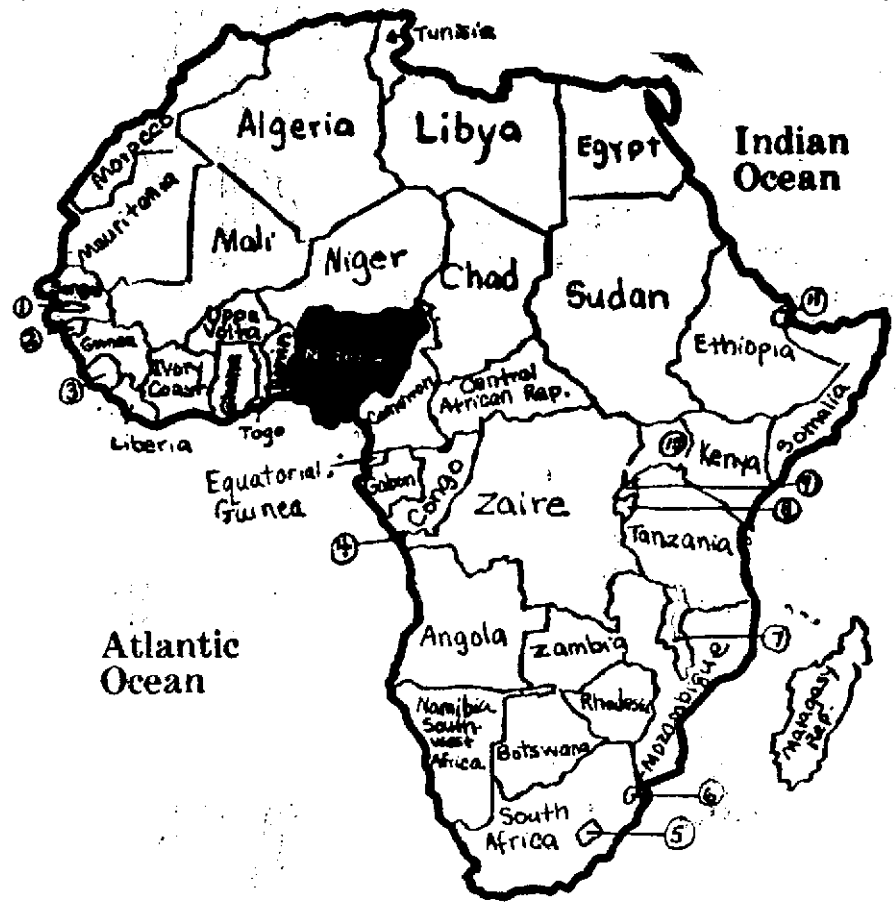
A Nigerian man's gown.

A Nigerian woman's dress.

A Nigerian drummer.

A Nigerian woman's three-piece wrapper dress.

A North African migrant's outfit. (Migrants move from place to place.)



A handwoven kente robe worn by a man from Ghana.

Why not color these African dress styles?

To Keep You Posted: Feature material on pages 1 and 4 make this issue of The Mini Page ideal for use as a poster to hang at home or at school. Background information: The countries of Africa can be divided into three categories: Arab nations, White controlled areas and Black Africa. The Arab nations are: Mauritania, Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Egypt, Sudan, Somalia. The White controlled areas are the Territory of Afars and Issas (a tiny overseas territory of France), South Africa and Rhodesia. South Africa and Rhodesia have been in the news a lot. The blacks, who make up the majority in these countries, want to run the government. The whites in the minority would like to keep control as long as possible. More whites live in South Africa than in Rhodesia. South Africa has about 4,000,000 whites in a total population of around 21,000,000. The leader of the whites in South Africa is John Vorster (FORCE-ter). The government believes in the practice of apartheid (a-PART-hit) or the separation of the races. Rhodesia has 247,000 whites in a total population of about 5,000,000. The leader of the whites in Rhodesia is Ian Smith. Black Africa includes the other countries not mentioned. Blacks make up about 70 percent of Africa's population. Independent African countries send representatives to the United Nations. This gives these new countries a strong voice in UN affairs.

Understanding a Faraway Continent!

A boy studies a wood carving of a figure kneeling and holding a kola nut bowl. Offering kola nuts to visitors is a sign of hospitality to many Africans.

Many school children are learning about the life and customs of Africa by visiting museums.

The Museum of African Art in Washington, D.C., was the first one in the country just for African art.

Sometimes visitors dress up in African costumes and play real African musical instruments.

They touch masks, statues and other works of art.

They listen to storytellers from African countries.

This museum, like many others, puts American children in touch with the continent that has played an important role in our country's history.

Black History Month

Black History Month is celebrated the month of February. Abraham Lincoln was born on February 12, 1809. Frederick Douglass was born on February 14, 1817.

Frederick Douglass was born a slave. Although it was against the law, a kind owner in Baltimore, Maryland, taught him how to read.

Later, he taught other slaves to read. He ran away to Massachusetts and began making talks against slavery. Then he fled to England. He came back to this country, bought his freedom, and started a newspaper.

When the Civil War ended, he worked for the government in Washington. He served as the Minister to Haiti.

African Recipe: Groundnut Stew

This is a good "Make with Mother" recipe. Since it can be made in an electric frying pan, it is also an excellent one to make in the classroom.

You'll need:
One 4-6 pound chicken, cut into small pieces
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons white pepper
1 tablespoon ground ginger
¼ cup peanut oil
1½ cup peanut (groundnut) butter mixed with juice from canned tomatoes and beaten into a smooth paste.
1 16-ounce can tomatoes
2 medium onions
¼ cup tomato paste
½ green pepper
2 teaspoons paprika or red pepper
1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic.

What to do:
1. Rub chicken pieces with salt, white pepper and ground ginger.
2. In a large heavy saucepan or electric frying pan, heat the oil and brown the chicken, removing chicken from burner when evenly browned.
3. Empty the oil, leaving enough to brown the onions and green pepper. Cook onions and pepper about 5 minutes. Add tomatoes, tomato paste, garlic and red pepper and let it simmer for 5 to 10 minutes. Add the chicken.
4. Stir in peanut butter paste and keep on cooking, uncovered, for about 1 hour. (Chicken may fall off bones, but that's good. Take the large bones out with a spoon.)
5. Serve stew on rice. If you wish, you can serve hard-boiled egg slices, finely chopped onions, pineapple or mandarin orange slices or unsalted peanuts along with it.)

This recipe is courtesy the Frederick Douglass Institute Museum of African Art, Washington, D.C.

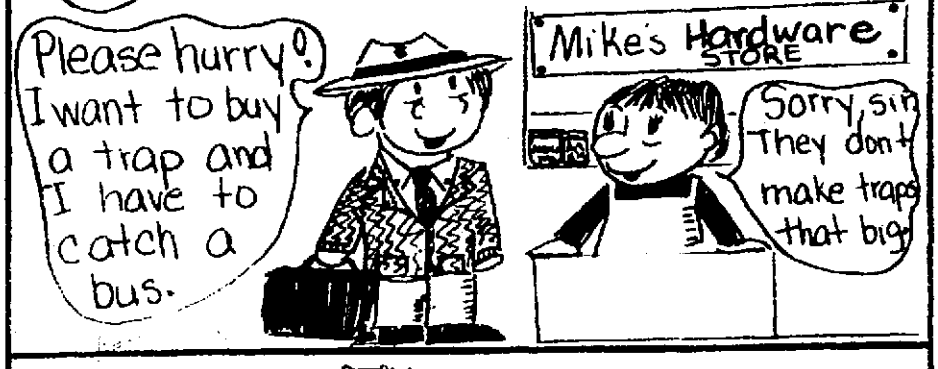
Super Sport: Johnny Bench

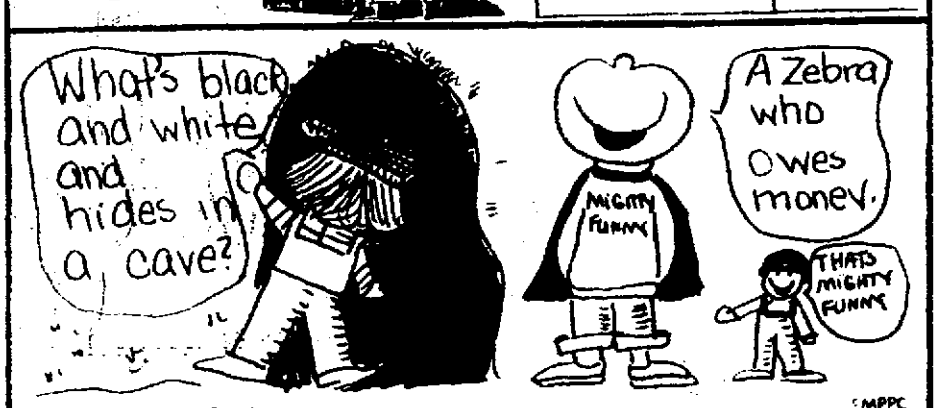
When Johnny Bench gets in the driver's seat, Cincinnati's "Big Red Machine" really rolls .

That was obvious last October as Johnny led the Reds to their second straight World Series title.

The gifted catcher had eight base hits in 15 times at bat. He also played well in the field. His super record won him the Series' Most Valuable Player award.



Johnny got a new car for his fine job, but he gave it to his brother.



He hits with power and is an excellent catcher with a golden arm. Few base runners can steal against him.

Johnny, who grew up in Oklahoma, has other interests outside of baseball. He does some TV commercials and owns a restaurant in Cincinnati.

GEN. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR IN 1946 WITH WIFE JEAN

Q. What does Mrs. Douglas MacArthur think of the film made of her husband, Gen. MacArthur, by a Hollywood studio?—Steve Conkovich, Granite City, Ill.

A. Mrs. Jean MacArthur says she has always been opposed to such a movie, has no connection with it at all, thinks no movie can do justice to the general's career.

Q. Can you tell me the true reason why the Shah of Iran has paid $18 million for the Italian luxury liners Michelangelo and Raffaello? Each of them can carry 1500 passengers. Surely, no man wants two yachts that big.—G.F., Chicago.

A. The Shah did not purchase the two luxury liners for his personal use. He bought them for the purpose of turning them into seagoing hotels for his officers and their families. Upon refitting, they will become part of the Iranian Navy.

JACKIE ONASSIS

Q. If Jackie Onassis is ever foolish enough to marry again, would she lose the $250,000 she gets tax-free each year from the Onassis estate? Also, how much is she worth?—Vinnie Byrd, Montauk, N.Y.

A. Marriage would cost Jackie the bulk of her inheritance from Onassis. She is said to be worth in the vicinity of $3 million.

Q. Sal Mineo, the young actor who was murdered in front of his Hollywood apartment last year—has any progress been made in finding his murderer?—Janice Gershenson, Newark, N.J.

A. To date, practically none.

Q. Is it a fact that H. John Heinz, heir to the pickle and ketchup fortune, spent $5 million to be elected U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania? Has any other Senatorial candidate come near spending that much?—G.T., Lancaster, Pa.

A. H. John Heinz (R., Pa.) spent $2.93 million in the 1976 campaign. Of that amount, only $540,000 came from outside contributions. Heinz set a new record for campaign spending since the federal campaign finance disclosure law came into being in April 1972. The previous campaign spending record was established in 1972 by John R. Tower (R., Tex.), who spent $2.3 million getting himself reelected.

Q. There has been so much gossip about the love affair between the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lucy Mercer Rutherfurd, his wife's secretary, that I really do not know how much is truth and how much is gossip. Is there any reliable book that tells the truth?—Mrs. G.H.K., Hickory, N.C.

A. One of the fairest and most authoritative is "My Parents: A Differing View," by James Roosevelt and Bill Libby. Apparently FDR fell in love with Lucy Mercer, the affair endured until his death, and it changed considerably the character of his marriage to Eleanor Roosevelt.

CYRUS VANCE

Q. Cyrus Vance, the Secretary of State—can you tell us what boards and clubs he sits on and whether he will resign from all? —K.L., Larchmont, N.Y.

A. Cyrus Vance sat on the boards of The New York Times, IBM, Pan Am, a Lehman Brothers mutual fund, Yale University trustees, the Rockefeller Foundation, Presbyterian Hospital of New York. He is a member of the Century Association and Links Club in New York, the Metropolitan Club in Washington. He has resigned from all the above boards and says he will resign from any "non-integrated" club.

Q. Can you verify whether Rudolf Nureyev, who defected from the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad 15 years ago, is moving to Hollywood?—Flora H., Miami, Fla.

A. Nureyev, who resides in London, recently finished starring in the film "Valentino." If the picture is any good, he may receive Hollywood offers. In that event, he would consider leaving England, where the tax bite is heavier than it is here.

FIRST WIFE, CYNTHIA, AND BEATLE JOHN LENNON IN 1966

Q. Some weeks ago Cynthia Lennon, first wife of Beatle John Lennon, criticized him as an irresponsible father in a magazine article. Lennon replied in a blistering letter that was made public. What did he have to say about her charges that they took drug trips and so forth?—D.Y., Swampscott, Mass.

A. Lennon wrote: "As you and I well know, our marriage was over long before the advent of LSD or Yoko Ono.

"Your memory is impaired, to say the least. Your version of our first LSD trips is rather vague. You seem to have forgotten subsequent trips altogether.

"You also seem to have forgotten that only two years ago, while I was separated from Yoko Ono, you suddenly brought Julian [Lennon's son by Cynthia] to see me in Los Angeles after three years of silence.

"During this visit you didn't allow me to be alone with him for one moment. You even asked me to remarry you or give you another child 'for Julian's sake.'

"Finally, I don't blame you for wanting to get away from your Beatle past, but if you are serious about it you should try to avoid talking to and posing for magazines and newspapers.

"We did have some good years, so dwell on them for a change."

Cynthia is married to engineer John Twist, lives in North Wales. Lennon, Yoko and their son Sean live in New York City.

Q. Why is Sen. Barry Goldwater getting divorced after all these years, or is it his brother Bob who is getting unhitched?—G.L., Tucson, Ariz.

A. It is Senator Goldwater's son, Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., and his wife Susan who have decided upon a trial separation after four years and one son. Susan, mother of 22-month-old Barry 3rd, is managing Previews, Inc., a real estate firm in Washington, D.C., while Goldwater continues to represent his California district.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

CARTER TO TED KENNEDY: "... THERE WILL BE TIME FOR YOU AFTER I'VE SERVED EIGHT YEARS IN THE WHITE HOUSE."

CARTER'S CAMP Political aficionados who like to collect golden nuggets of inside information will find "Convention," a new book by Richard Reeves, a treasury of revealing tidbits.

For example, during the Democratic National Convention, screen star Warren Beatty offered to organize a "Stars for Carter" committee after his first two choices--Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Gov. Jerry Brown of California--were shot down. "Thanks," said Jerry Rafshoon, one of Jimmy Carter's major media advisers, "but we don't take sloppy thirds."

Jimmy Carter's most influential friend at the convention was Charles Kirbo, the slow-talking Atlanta attorney from King & Spalding, who is still his most influential adviser. When Kirbo wanted five tickets to see "A Chorus Line," the Broadway musical hit of the season, "...within 10 minutes the public relations man for the show's producer, Joseph Papp, called back. Five of the best orchestra seats were no problem at all. Mr. Papp would come to the theater himself to make sure that Mr. Kirbo and his party were comfortable...."

When Carter started to search for a running mate, "those closest to him were convinced that he was going to choose Sen. Frank Church of Idaho. But when Carter went through the motions of telephoning '30 distinguished Americans' for their opinions of the men on his list, he kept hearing that Church was something of a windbag--the actual words were more polite. The men he kept getting good reports on were Walter Mondale, [Sen. John] Glenn and sometimes Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine."

Among those who received phone calls from Carter, Kirbo and Hamilton Jordan about possible Vice Presidential candidates were Ralph Nader, John Gardner, Derek Bok (President of Harvard), Kingman Brewster Jr. (President of Yale), James Reston of The New York Times and Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr.

One of Carter's most effective money-raisers was Phil Walden of Macon, Ga., president of Capricorn Records, who used the Allman Brothers and other performers to promote $850,000 for Jimmy.

"On the day Carter announced his candidacy for President, Dec. 12, 1974 --at the time, it hardly seemed a date worth remembering--he stopped by [Ted] Kennedy's office to ask the 42-year-old Senator's plans. Kennedy told Carter the same thing he had been telling the newspapers, that under no circumstances would he run. 'That's good,' Carter replied, 'because there will be time for you after I've served eight years in the White House.'"

Reeves employed a half dozen reporters to help him cover the 1976 Democratic National Convention, and their combined coverage makes for information and titillation.

OLYMPIC GAMES PRESS CENTER To attract newswriters from everywhere, Soviet authorities announced recently that they will build a gigantic press center to accommodate journalists covering the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

According to Tass, the official Soviet news agency, the main press center will be erected on Zubovsky Boulevard, 10 minutes away by bus from Lenin Central Stadium in Luzhniki Park, where about a third of the events will be staged.

The press center will offer a 500-seat auditorium, Tass says, plus TV and radio studios, accreditation offices, photo labs, a TV theater, and a rental and repair shop for equipment. Journalists will also be serviced by an automated computer system, "Olympiad," which will provide them with instant information on all Olympic events. In addition, a vast communications center -- 2000 square yards -- will feed stories to the world via telephone, teleprinter, telex and facsimile facilities.

Foreign journalists who have worked in the Soviet Union say they'll believe the press center when they see it.

WILD VALENTINE FOR YOUR WILD GUY

In his wildest dreams, your man probably wouldn't expect a Valentine's Day greeting like this. Isn't that the best reason in the world to surprise him with the great Wild Turkey?

HALFWAY ROUND THE WORLD, SOLO: MRS. KRYSTYNA CHOJNOWSKA-LISKIEWICZ OF POLAND IN SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, WITH HER SLOOP (IN BACKGROUND)

UNSUNG HEROINE In 1966, when Francis Chichester of England arrived in Sydney, Australia, on his successful round-the-world solo trip in his boat, Gypsy Moth, he was hailed as one of the great sailors of all time and subsequently knighted.

A few weeks ago, a 40-year-old Polish woman named Krystyna Chojnowska-Liskiewicz sailed halfway round the world in her single-masted boat, Mazurek, unnoticed and unpublicized.

The first woman to do it alone, she began her trip in the Canary Islands, sailed across the Atlantic, through the Panama Canal, then to Tahiti, Fiji and Sydney, Australia. Next week she sets out on the return trip from Australia to Europe.

"I had nothing for company," says Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz, who is married to a boat-builder in Gdynia, "except a yellow teddy bear called Albatross and a tiny doll called Seagull."

When she arrived in Sydney this past December, there were no officials to meet her, a marked contrast to the fanfare which greeted Francis Chichester 10 years ago.

Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz is a naval architect herself and was chosen for the trip by the Polish Yachting Federation.

NEW SOVIET WEAPONS Do the Soviets want military parity or military superiority? That is one of the key questions President Jimmy Carter and his intelligence advisers will have to decide upon in the months to come.

The word from U.S. intelligence sources in Europe is that the Soviets are arming their forces in East Germany for the first time with a new antiaircraft missile system designed to destroy low-flying enemy planes.

The Soviet SA-8 radar-guided system fires two missiles simultaneously at a single target.

It is the second advanced weapon the Russians have moved into East Germany in recent months. The first was the T-72 tank, which rolled into East Germany last November. The T-72 is heavily armored against antitank missiles and can fire accurately while on the move, which many U.S. tanks cannot do.

Until a few months ago, the Soviets refused to deploy the SA-8 antiaircraft missile and the T-72 outside the Soviet Union.

What does this mean -- that the Soviets are bolstering their air- and ground-defense systems in East Germany or building up their offensive capability? Probably both.

U.S. INDIANS STERILIZED Thousands of American Indian women have been sterilized by the Indian Health Service (IHS) without properly consenting to their sterilization.

A report by the General Accounting Office reveals that 3400 Indians were sterilized during a four-year period in the four areas surveyed alone and suggests that the total probably goes much higher.

The GAO report covers Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Aberdeen, S. Dak., and Oklahoma City, Okla. Sen. James Abourezk (D., S. Dak.) asked the GAO to look into the situation after receiving many complaints about the surgery. Apparently many Indian women consented to sterilization believing that the operation was mandatory instead of optional. More complete explanations should have been made.

LABOR BEFORE LEISURE In a national referendum, the hard-working Swiss people recently rejected a proposal to reduce their working week from 48 hours to 40. In the same referendum, they supported the government's right to continue supervising prices.

Of all the nations in the world, Switzerland has the soundest currency and one of the best records for continued labor peace.

OIL TANKER SAFETY The trans-Alaska $8 billion pipeline will be finished sometime this year. But questions of oil tanker safety will apparently persist.

As the supertankers ply their way southward from Port Valdez to Washington, Oregon or California, how many accidents are likely?

One study recently completed in Alaska, based on statistical analyses of tanker safety elsewhere, holds that at least 20 major accidents are likely, with spillage of more than 3 million gallons of oil.

Valdez Harbor has a navigation hazard known as "Middle Rock," which is located in the center of the 6000-foot-wide channel and, according to a second report, "poses a psychological barrier" for some pilots.

In December the tanker Argo Merchant, flying the Liberian flag, broke apart off Nantucket, Mass., dumping most of its 7.6 million gallons of heavy industrial oil into the North Atlantic.

Can you imagine what 20 such accidents would do to the Alaska-to-California shoreline?

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in the yard of his villa 15 miles from Cairo and seven minutes by a helicopter that was presented to him by Nixon as a gift.

An Interview With Egyptian President Sadat:

Peace Prospects Are Better Than Ever

by George Michaelson

Sadat with his second wife, Jihan. They have three married daughters and a son. Mrs. Sadat is progressive-minded and tends to be an advocate for women's rights. She is in her third year of studies at Cairo University.

CAIRO, EGYPT.

The dapper, 59-year-old Egyptian President, Anwar Sadat, was strolling through the plush garden of his Nile villa when he stopped suddenly. Leaning over a tall bush of pink roses, the national flower of Egypt, he plucked one and brought it to me. Then, in his deep-voiced, fluent English, he said: "I want the American people to know something. I want them to know that never before have the prospects for peace been better. Not in the last 28 years—since Israel was created—have we had a better chance for a permanent settlement in the Middle East. We must not lose this chance."

It was a dramatic statement, to be sure. And coming in the course of a far-ranging, 80-minute discussion with this writer and PARADE's editor, Jess Gorkin, it was also a statement with a purpose—namely, to convince the American public and the Carter Administration that Anwar Sadat, as key spokesman for the Arab "moderates," is ready to make peace.

Indeed, as the suave and personable Egyptian leader put it himself: "I want Jimmy Carter to hear me. I realize the man has just come into office, and I don't want to hurry him before he has a chance to acquaint himself with our situation. But let's face it, you Americans are crucial to the peace process here, and I think it of the utmost importance that I have an opportunity to talk face-to-face with your President."

Precisely when President Carter will meet with Anwar Sadat is not clear at this writing. But what has become obvious is that the Egyptian leader is staking the future of Middle East peace talks, and possibly his personal future as well, on America's intentions. As noted Egyptian journalist Mohamed Heikal told PARADE: "Sadat has put all his eggs in the American basket and has sold the Egyptian public on the fact that you are going to deliver."

This vital move to put his "eggs in the American basket," it may be remembered, was first made by Sadat in 1973, right at the end of the October War—the first war that Egypt did not lose to Israel. With the Egyptian troops having successfully crossed over the Suez Canal (Sadat is still publicly heralded in Egypt as "The Hero of the Crossing"), but with his army unable to recapture any more of the once-Egyptian Sinai, Sadat openly welcomed the United States' efforts to intervene and bring about a cease-fire.

'My good friend Henry'

And this we did. In the person of Secretary of State Kissinger, whom Sadat continues to refer to as "my good friend Henry," America helped end the fourth Arab-Israeli war. Subsequently, through Kissinger's "shuttle diplomacy," we helped negotiate the two Sinai disengagement pacts (January 1974, September 1975) that have returned to Egypt the oil fields and crucial Sinai passes—though not the bulk of Sinai, which remains in Israel's hands.

Recalls President Sadat of these historic meetings with the former U.S. Secretary of State: "Henry Kissinger came along at a very important juncture for us, and he brought with him the willingness of America to resume its crucial role here. Both my country and Israel desperately needed someone we could trust, because, understandably, neither of us has any trust in the other. Henry Kissinger turned out to be that man. Today, if you ask whether I would like to see Henry Kissinger continue as a special emissary in future negotiations, I can tell you, of course, I like Henry. But whomever you choose will be okay with me, and really what is essential is that the U.S. continue its willingness to help us negotiate a permanent settlement here."

Sadat's terms for Israel

At this point, the settlement that Sadat hopes the U.S. can help him achieve—by using its special influence with Israel—is one that calls for a return to the Arabs of the territories occupied by Israel in the June '67 War: that is, the rest of Sinai to Egypt, the Golan Heights to Syria, and the once-Jordanian West Bank along with the Gaza Strip to the Palestinians. In exchange, Sadat says, he is willing to go to the Geneva Conference and sign "a peace agreement" with Israel which would end the state of war between the two countries.

"I defy the Israelis to state what they are willing to do as I have stated my plan," Sadat told us, his voice rising to the challenge. "They will not do it. Rabin's government has been very weak, and they are afraid of peace. I tell you frankly, I would have preferred it if I were dealing now with Golda Meir [Rabin's predecessor]. Even though she is a 'hawk,' she at least has guts; she has all the guts in Israel. As it is, the Israelis have nobody in power telling them the facts, telling them what must be done. Meanwhile, we are ready here. I have the confidence of my people, and I am putting my plans quite clearly for everyone to see."

'Great political risks'

Whether or not one agrees with Sadat's pointed comments on Israel and its leadership, most observers here would acknowledge that the Egyptian President has put forth his plans "quite clearly"—moreover, that he has demonstrated some courage in doing so. As one U.S. diplomat in Cairo commented to us: "Sadat has taken great political risks in talking as plainly as he has. And, in fact, it is a point of pride with him that he is willing to speak so directly. You see, deep down, Sadat likes to think of himself as still being a simple Egyptian villager, a fellah—that is, a man who holds firm beliefs but is not afraid to tell you straight what he is thinking, with no frills attached."

Nowadays, in his elegant Savile Row suit, the urbane Egyptian leader looks anything but a fellah, though he was born and raised in a typical Egyptian village in the Nile delta, a place called Mit Abu al Kom. To this day he regularly visits there and prays at the village mosque dressed in his galabiya, the traditional peasant outfit. (Sadat is a devout Moslem, and on his forehead is a large callus which comes from bowing his head five times a day in prayer toward Mecca.)

Nasser's boyhood friend

While many of Sadat's relatives are still fellahin, his immediate family—he is one of 12 children—actually left the village for Cairo back when he was a teen-ager. Young Anwar at the time was sent off to the prestigious Abbassieh Military Academy, and it was there that he became friends with a boy a year older than he: Gamal Abdel Nasser. From then on, his personal star was tied to Nasser's.

With Nasser, he became one of the dozen Free Officers who overthrew the feudal monarchy of King Farouk in 1952. Nasser emerged as Egypt's No. 1 man, and his loyal friend Sadat became a publicist and spokesman for the new regime. He represented Nasser at foreign conferences and served for a number of years as editor of the semi-official newspaper Al Goumhouriya. (Sadat is the author of several books.) He was appointed head of Egypt's parliament (1961) and eventually became Vice President to Nasser (1964-67, 1969-70). When the charismatic strongman died in 1970, Sadat was selected to fill Nasser's spot—an assignment that nobody felt he, or anyone else, could ever do.

Mural in downtown Cairo shows Sadat as "Hero of the Crossing," which refers to the crossing of the Suez Canal into Sinai in the 1973 war. This was the first war in four not lost to the Israelis and it bolstered Egyptian morale.

But, as it turned out, Sadat soon emerged as rais (chief) in his own right. Today, with his picture displayed prominently on billboards throughout Egypt, he is the undisputed leader in this country of 38 million people. Moreover, in the 6½ years he has been in power (last September he was elected to a second six-year term as President), he has gradually weaned Egypt away from several of Nasser's most fervently held policies.

Arab 'moderates'

Thus, whereas Nasser was at bitter odds with the conservative oil monarchy of Saudi Arabia, Sadat has patched up this relationship to the point where the Egypt-Saudi Arabia axis along with Jordan and Syria now make up the Arab "moderates" who are pushing for a negotiated settlement with Israel. (A "rejectionist" front made up of Libya, Iraq and some radical Palestinian factions opposes any attempt at negotiations.) In addition, while Nasser sailed staunchly along with the Soviet Union, Sadat has begun to steer a more Western-oriented course—a decision that was presaged back in 1972, when he expelled almost all the 20,000 Soviet military and civilian technicians then in Egypt.

When we asked about his present relations with the Soviets—who, as Egypt's military backer, have provided billions of rubles of war equipment—Sadat answered: "Quite frankly, my relations with the Soviet Union are still very highly strained. They are not sending us military equipment, not even spare parts, and they refuse to reschedule our debts to them. I would prefer to normalize my situation with them, though I have told them I am willing to do so only if they accept me as I am and don't try to make me into what they want. But, for their part, they don't like how I have dealt with Kissinger and

Gum for oil wells. A thickener called xanthan gum is being used with detergents to help free oil that clings to underground rock formations and resists recovery by conventional methods. Once injected into a well, the thickener restricts the detergent to where it will do the most good, keeping it from running all over the place. This and other methods of enhanced recovery may eventually add billions of barrels to America's oil reserves (about two-thirds of the oil ever discovered in this country is still underground, because it's hard to get out). The ultimate problem is economic, not technological. Some experimental recovery methods double the price of a barrel of oil, and others are even more costly.

More regulatory silliness. When a welfare client in Illinois dies, the Illinois Welfare Department routinely addresses a note to the deceased, telling him: "Your assistance benefits will be discontinued. Reason: It has been reported to our office that you expired." Well, you can't take it with you.

Too few buses for too many riders in Cairo. The city, it is estimated, contains 10 million of Egypt's 38 million people, of whom some 75 percent live at a subsistence level. Sadat says he needs peace to develop his country and raise living standards.

Ismaillia, one of the canal cities that had been destroyed in previous Arab-Israeli wars, was recently rebuilt with money from oil sheikhs such as Sheikh Zayed, President of the United Arab Emirates, pictured here with Sadat. New building continues.

how I have made such an understanding with the United States."

As a matter of fact, throughout our discussion, it was this understanding with the U.S. that the Egyptian leader continued to stress. And what is more, he made it clear that he wants the rapprochement to go on. Having restored diplomatic relations with the U.S. in 1973 (which Nasser had severed during the June '67 War), Sadat says he now wants to enhance those ties. He stated that a hot line between Cairo and Washington would be "a welcome idea." In addition, Sadat is hopeful that the U.S. will continue, and perhaps increase, its aid to Egypt, which last year amounted to $900 million.

Yet, for all his desire to improve his own relationship with America; Sadat nonetheless is quick to emphasize that he is not trying to drive a wedge between the U.S. and Israel—not now and not in the future peace agreement, either. Says Sadat: "I never asked the United States—and I shall never ask it—to drop its special relations with Israel. On the contrary, I tell you even if every Israeli wants to have a gun and a Phantom [jet], give it to them; but tell them not to use it on us. I even go further: If Israel wants to have a military pact with you, I will not oppose it. I shall not be asking for a pact, but if Israel wants one, give her this guarantee. I don't mind."

U.S. troops in Sinai

In terms of "guarantees," we then asked how Sadat would view the stationing of American troops in a future buffer zone between Egypt and Israel. (Presently, as part of disengagement agreement No. 2, some 200 American civilian technicians are stationed in the buffer zone between the two countries in Sinai, where they are monitoring the truce.) Sadat mulled the question over, puffing deeply on his pipe, and then said: "Well, I shall not oppose the stationing of U.S. troops. I don't think it's the ideal solution. It would be better to have a force made up of all the major powers. But I supported the idea of the U.S. technicians—in fact, I suggested it. And if Israel wants the guarantee of U.S. troops as part of the peace agreement, I will not oppose this. As I say, give her whatever guarantees she wants. I will have no objection."

Closed during the 1967 war, the Suez Canal reopened in June 1975. U.S. minesweepers helped clear it and Japanese dredgers are at work deepening and widening it. The canal raises $500 million a year, but Egypt hopes improvements will increase revenues and cut its annual balance-of-payments deficit of $3 billion.

Army officers taking a group of Egyptian citizens on tour of captured Israeli fortifications in the Sinai. Egyptians have kept the fortifications intact and expect to keep them as a showpiece. They also plan to build two tunnels under the canal to pipe fresh water into the Sinai to irrigate the land for agriculture.

As forthcoming as all this may be, Sadat is aware that the concessions he is offering are less than what Israel wants. For one thing, the Israelis assert that under no conditions will they feel safe enough to return all the territories. And secondly, Israel says that a peace "agreement" is simply not enough. What they desire is a peace "treaty," which will completely normalize relations between Arabs and Israelis and, they argue, indicate that the Arabs "accept" Israel's existence. Specifically, Israel wants a free movement of people and goods across the borders and the exchange of diplomatic envoys.

To this plan for trade and person-to-person exchanges, Sadat told us: "These are conditions that Israel is trying to impose on us in order to block a settlement from being made. I wonder, after 28 years of bitterness and hostility between us, is it logical or practical to talk now about such exchanges? Look, I have already opened the Suez Canal and am letting Israeli cargo pass through. But, as for these other matters, no Arab country, no Arab leader, will agree to them; and you cannot take it as a sign of bad intentions from me that I don't. What I say is: let us first end the state of war, let Israel withdraw from our lands; then we can discuss such things, depending on Israel's conduct."

Rabin's doubts

At that point, we pressed the Egyptian leader on the fact that some people, especially the Israelis, are apt to regard his comments as an unwillingness to "accept" Israel. I recalled, for example, that Israeli Prime Minister Rabin, in an interview with PARADE this past summer, had said: "No Arab leader is willing to accept that we are here to stay."

Sadat listened carefully and then, in a voice tinged with anger, answered: "How could anyone believe this when I am saying that I am ready to go to the Geneva Conference with them? Who are they? A phantom? A ghost? I realize that Israel is a fact and I have said that I am willing to sign a peace agreement with them. This is something that no Arab leader has ever said. . . ."

Sadat paused, shook his head slowly and then, after some moments, added: "Believe me, I am sincere when I say I am ready to end the state of war with Israel; and, goodness knows, they must be ready, too. We in Egypt do not wish to go on like this, spending money and losing our people in war. My country needs peace. We have many domestic problems, and we need peace so that we can grow and develop normally."

Undoubtedly true. And this, perhaps more than any other reason, is why Sadat is calling for a "permanent settlement" now. Indeed, in the past three years, with the cease-fire between Egypt and Israel having remained unbroken, he has already been able to make some moves to bolster his sagging economy. With the help of the U.S. Navy, he has cleared the Suez Canal of debris and mines (the waterway had been out of use since the June '67 War) he is currently employing Japanese dredgers to deepen and widen it—with the aim of increasing its income well beyond the present $500 million a year.

Rebuilt Suez cities

Also, thanks to financial donations from the oil sheikhdoms, Sadat has been able to rebuild the destroyed cities along the canal, and most of the million refugees are back in spanking-new apartment houses. Egyptian designers now have plans to turn this sunbaked spot into a resort area and tourist attraction. (One of the "sights," we were told, is going to be the Israeli fortifications on the east bank of the canal, which the Egyptians captured in 1973 and have maintained intact.)

But apart from all this, the major financial gain has been the increase of Western investments here. In the last two years, Egypt has signed contracts with 22 oil companies to explore for additional oil throughout the country, and Sadat told us he expects oil production will be bringing in some $1.2 billion by 1980. Furthermore, assuming there is no resumption of war or a war-like atmosphere, Sadat says he is hopeful that Western firms of all types will invest in Egypt. As he put it: "We need your investment and know-how. In order to develop our country economically, we are going to need a lot from you . . . a whole lot."

America's importance

Then, relighting his pipe, he concluded: "But this is just part of it. As I've told you, you Americans are important not only economically, but politically as well. You have begun the peace process here and you must finish it. You hold 99 percent of the cards, and if you want to bring about a settlement, you can. I am sure of it. Quite frankly, I have laid my cards on the table and have told you, in all sincerity, that I want peace. Egypt needs peace—economically, politically, in every way. Please tell this to your readers, to the American public."

And with that, Sadat concluded the discussion and began heading back inside his villa—but not before adding, perhaps symbolically, that the pink rose which he had picked, and which I held in my hand, is a particularly hearty flower. Yes, he said, with just a little water, it is sure to keep its fragrance—and for a long time.

A Computer in Every Home

by Theodore Berland

Home-size computers do bookkeeping, monitor investments, run appliances and teach. Karl Weller, 14, learns at home via instructive computer games.

CHICAGO.

When Karl Weller, 14, comes home from school, he leaves his books at the front door, shucks his coat, grabs a snack in the kitchen, and runs up to an attic room. There he sits before a television screen and flips some switches. Letters flash across the screen: TRY YOUR HAND AT GOVERNING ANCIENT SUMERIA SUCCESSFULLY FOR A 10-YEAR TERM OF OFFICE, HAMURABI

Karl replies to the TV screen by means of a typewriter keyboard which is connected to a tabletop computer. For the next hour or so, he will decide how many bushels of grain to sell, how many acres of land to plant, and how much grain to feed his people. When he fails as governor, the screen tells him how many Sumerians have starved and that he has been kicked out of office and declared a national fink. When he succeeds, he is declared a hero like Charlemagne, Disraeli or Jefferson.

"Hamurabi" is just one of many games Karl programs into the computer. Another is a stock market game of buy-and-sell in which he is "given" $10,000 at the start.

But Karl uses the computer-TV setup for more than games. He does his homework on it, plotting complex mathematical graphs in five colors.

Karl Weller is bright but not unique. Across the country, thousands of junior and senior high school students like him are sitting at home before similar typewriter keyboards linked to computers the size of stereo receivers.

Most of these computers are constructed from kits purchased from a new kind of retail business, the computer store—an American phenomenon which sprouted only last summer.

Walking into a computer store for the first time is like walking into a strange, new world where metal boxes bear arrays of pinpoint red lights, television screens glow in fascinating diagrams, and people use odd expressions such as "floppy disc" and "toggling in the bootstrap."

Computer clubs

Already, computer hobby clubs dot the map. California has 23, New York and Michigan seven each, Virginia five, metropolitan Chicago three.

Computer hobbyists love putting the kits together and playing games with their finished products. But more and more people are tailoring their computers to help in their businesses or professions.

Dr. A. Richard Goldman, a young Chicago dentist, is computerizing his office by himself. A few months ago he walked into the "itty bitty machine company" ("Don't call us IBM," I was warned.) near downtown Evanston, Ill., ignorant about computers but knowing what he would like one to do. After a clerk demonstrated an IMSAI computer, Dr. Goldman was hooked.

"Putting the kit together was easy," he explains. Dr. Goldman plans to have his system do all of his accounting, inventory, office scheduling, billing, and tax withholding.

"With this computer capability, I'll also be able to analyze my practice. It should be able to determine, for instance, the correct fees to charge."

Dr. Goldman's experience is typical, since home computers are often sold to people with no previous computer background. Lou van Eperen, president of the Chicago Computer Store in suburban Park Ridge, claims 80 percent of his customers walk in and say they don't know anything about computers.

Van Eperen's typical sale is about $2500—a price tag, he points out, similar to that of a complete stereo system, a fishing boat and rig, or a camper.

The initial purchase

Most first customers buy a basic Altair 8800 computer, a memory bank to store data and instructions, a TV-like display, a typewriter keyboard, and a device for getting information into and out of the computer.

Given the proper equipment and hookups, a small computer can do serious chores, even run a home. A program already in existence would turn up your thermostat at 5:30 a.m., start the coffee at 6:50, begin your bath at 6:53, wake you at 7, start your car at 7:30. It would also turn your lights on while you were away, producing a sequence that would perfectly mimic your evening activities and thus thoroughly fool would-be burglars.

Automated households, however, are easier to plan than realize in existing homes, owing to the complex wiring. Homes are now being designed to incorporate such automation.

But there is still much a microcomputer can do around your home. It can store recipes, help plan meals, compute prices of servings, do bookkeeping, plan budgets, monitor investments.

Computers are already in many homes. The popular TV Ping-Pong games are actually low-grade microcomputers. New radar microwave ovens contain microcomputers that program cooking times and sequences. At least one 1977 model automobile (Oldsmobile) has under its hood a microprocessor for continually regulating fuel-air injection mixtures.

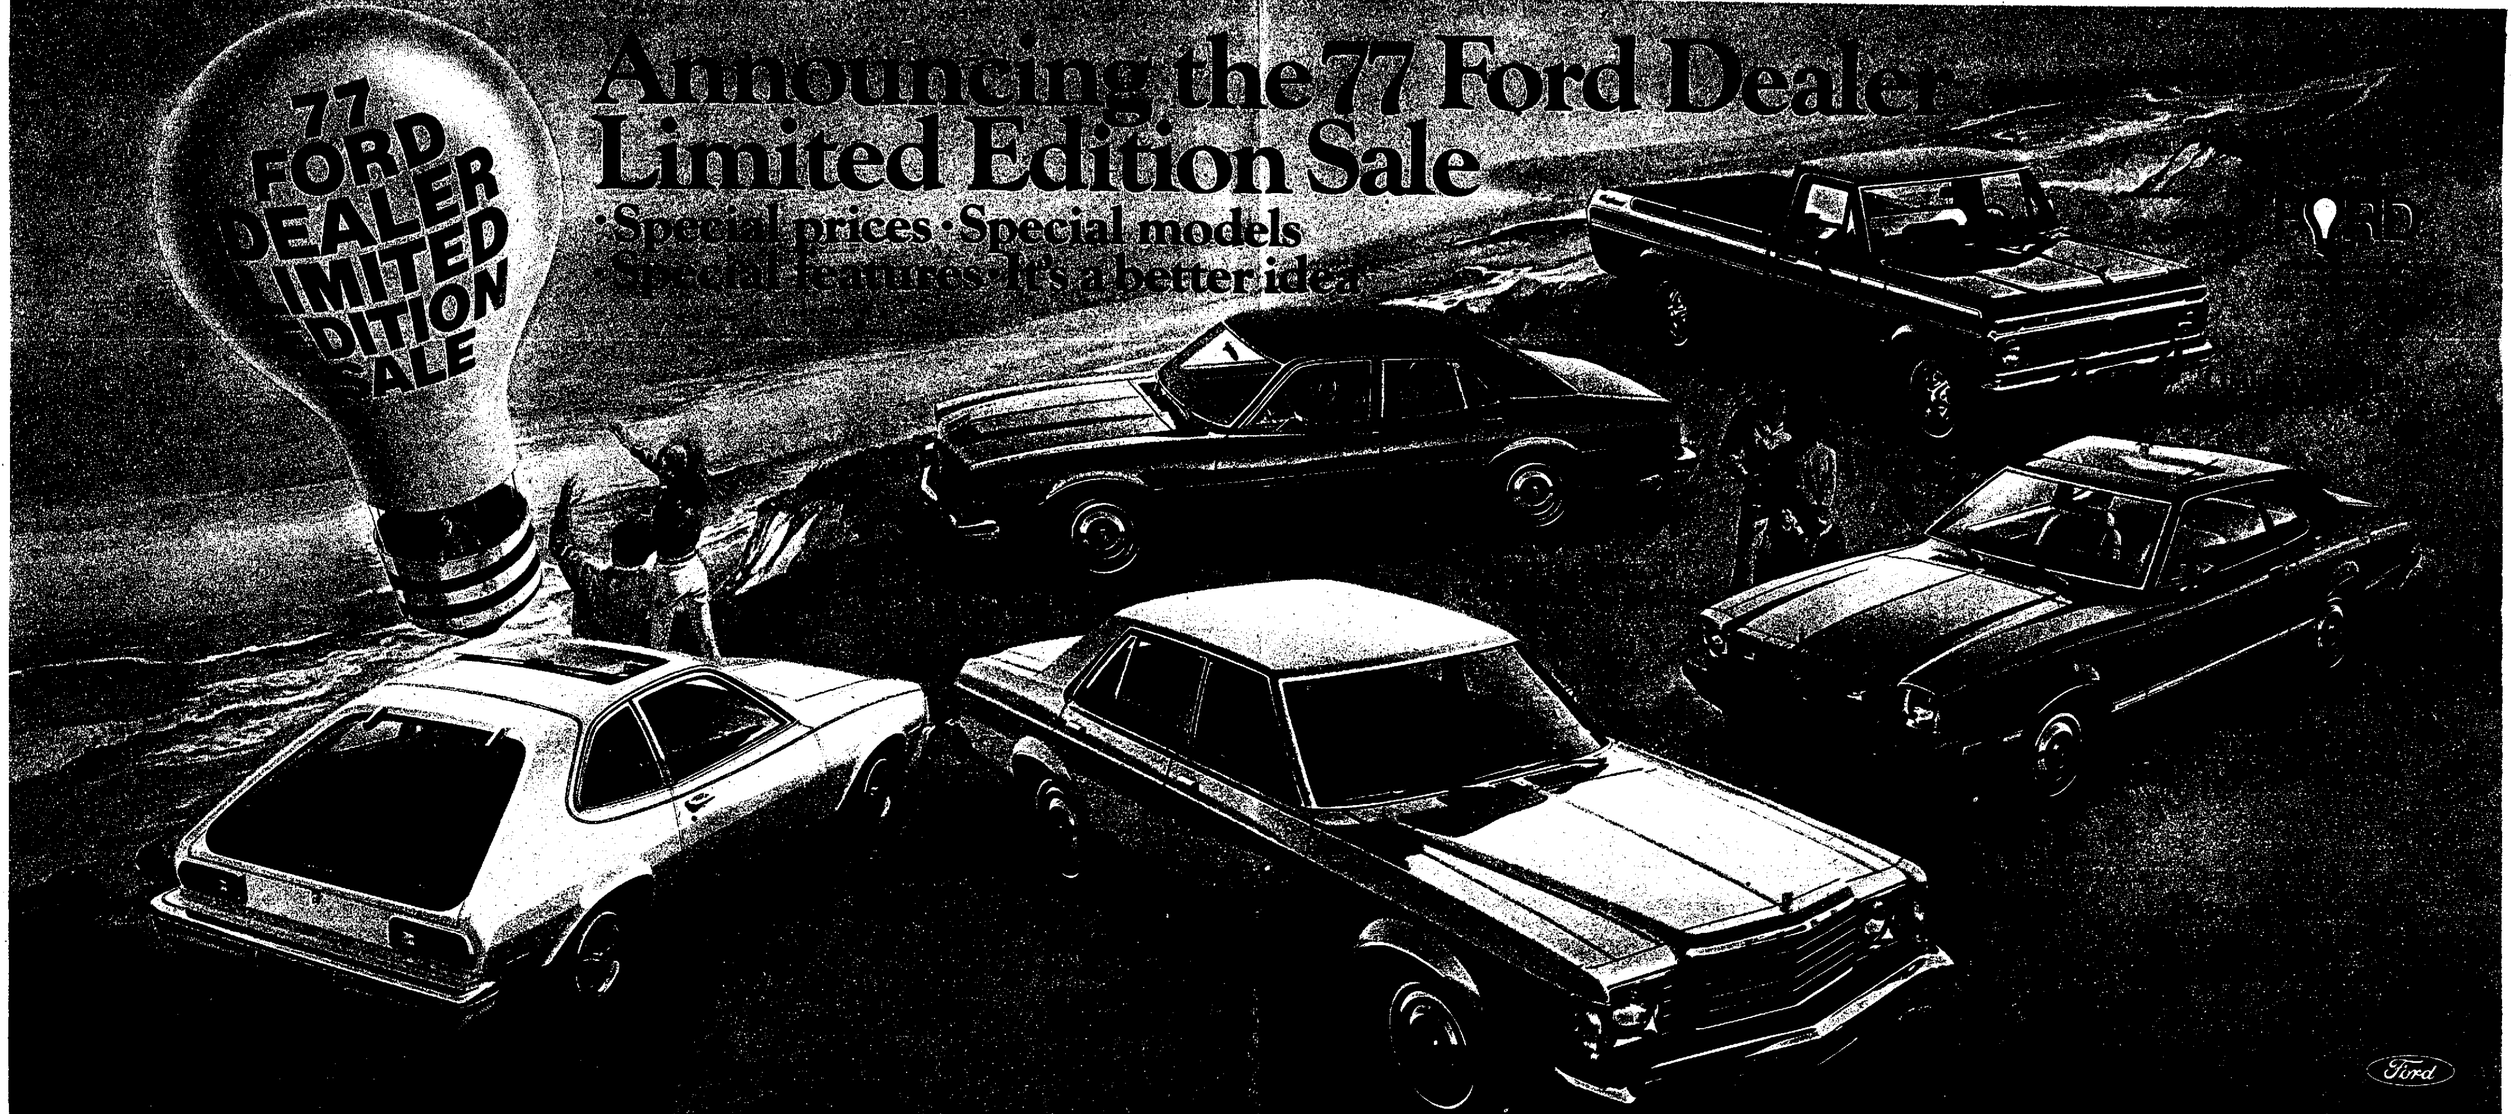
All of this stems from the development of a tiny electronic brain that performs computer functions which a generation ago would have required a roomful of vacuum tubes and an outlay of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Today's version, the size of your fingernail, is sold for $26.

While a handful of electronics manufacturers now make these miniature brains, the largest-selling is the Intel 8080, made by the Intel Corporation of Santa Clara, Cal. It uses the principle of the transistor but is thousands of times more compact. And it makes microcomputers possible by performing 200,000 calculations a second and coordinating the arithmetic and memory activities of units connected to it.

The Intel 8080 miniature brain is the basis of the Altair 8800, which started the computer hobby craze. MITS, Inc., of Albuquerque, N. Mex., introduced the Altair kit for $387 in January 1975. MITS has sold more than 8000 computers and is still No. 1 in sales, although other companies—such as IMS Associates with its IMSAI 8080—have grabbed part of the exploding market.

Many of these computer kits, now available only through manufacturer franchise stores, will soon be sold in stereo stores.

Essential 'software'



To use the hardware, or equipment, you need "software," computerese for the programs of direction. "A computer is capable of doing anything you are capable of directing it to do," says Karl's father, Walter J. Weller, a computer professional. "But," he adds, "it takes your directions literally. It is not like communicating with a human. You can leave words out of a conversation and the other person will know your meaning. A computer can only do what you tell it to—no more, no less. This means careful analysis of every step required in the processing of your data."

To help neophytes into the computer world, Weller and two colleagues have written and published Practical Microcomputer Programming, the first book to explain in simple language the art of writing programs for hobby computers. Their book is but one item in the publication explosion of books and magazines for computer hobbyists. Among its contents are instructions for putting games like "Hamurabi" into the system, for writing poetry, playing tic-tac-toe, creating weird graphic illustrations, composing music, and—a favorite of most—playing the Star Trek game.

Imagination is key

The possibilities of a microcomputer's use are limited only by its master's imagination. Tom Layman, an Intel instructor, likens it to the development of the electric motor. "The first commercial motors were big 50-horsepower jobs which ran elaborate belt-and-pulley systems so that tools could be powered at various locations. Once we knew how to make small motors, we placed them right in the tool or appliance. That permitted the invention of electric drills, vacuum cleaners—all sorts of devices. The same has happened to computers. We used to have big ones feeding many terminals. Now we can have small computers which can be put anywhere we like."

Michael Hunter, assistant to the president of MITS, foresees a microcomputer in every home within a decade. Whether or not he's right, the evidence points to a clear realization: the Computer Age is here.

One-Dish Cookbook

If the cost of meat—not to mention other foodstuffs—has you down, a pleasant surprise is in store for you. It's The One-Dish Cookbook, dedicated to showing how to prepare tasty, appetizing and nutritious meals at a far lower cost than you thought possible.

Written by gourmet Robert Ackart and available to PARADE readers at the bargain price of $1.50 plus 25¢ for handling, this new book shows the way to wonderful low-cost dining step by step—from shopping for the most succulent yet less-expensive cuts at the butcher to preparing them with maximum economy and flavor.

The major thesis of The One-Dish Cookbook is that you don't have to go broke giving your family and guests meals they enjoy and admire. The author tells you, for instance, why beef may be more thrifty a buy than veal and why you'll be just as happy with second- and third-category beef as with first-category. And Ackart has many cooking tips to offer on pork, which he regards as the supreme meat for good eating, notwithstanding its comparatively low cost.

Despite its emphasis on cooking economically, this is a book that has plenty of recipes for stews, roasts, casseroles and other basics, plus unusual gourmet dishes. Many are taken from the cuisines of France, Italy, Greece, the Middle East and other gastronomic centers. The lively text is also sprinkled with historical tidbits—such as the fact that Homer mentions sausage in The Odyssey.

But it's the recipes themselves that are the big thing in the book. Clear, complete and kitchen-tested, they'll enable you to prepare delicious meals for a lot less than you're probably spending now. The One-Dish Cookbook is the one you'll use and cherish most of all.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ for postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "The One-Dish Cookbook" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. T, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery. [GENERAL OFFICES: 1346 39TH ST., BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11218.]

Merit Technology Applied To 100mm Cigarette.

'Enriched Flavor'™ process adapted to new low tar 100mm cigarette with remarkable success.

MERIT established a whole new taste standard for low tar smoking.

If you smoke but haven't chosen to take advantage of the MERIT breakthrough because you prefer a longer length cigarette, you'll be interested.

Because now there's a MERIT for you, too. New MERIT 100's. Only 12 mg. of tar. Yet packed with extra flavor. The kind of flavor that makes "low tar, good taste" a reality for 100's smokers.

'Enriched Flavor' Tobacco

Like MERIT, MERIT 100's are packed with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. Tobacco boosted with certain key flavor-rich ingredients isolated in cigarette smoke, and proven to deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

MERIT & MERIT MENTHOL. KINGS & 100's.

We taste-tested MERIT 100's against some of the toughest competition we could find: higher tar 100mm cigarettes.

Here are the results.

Test Data Conclusive

New 12 mg. tar MERIT 100's were taste-tested against a number of major 100mm brands ranging from 17 mg. to 19 mg. tar.

Thousands of smokers were tested.* The results: overall, they liked the taste of MERIT 100's as much as the higher tar 100mm brands tested.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL. King Size and new 100's.

The taste barrier for low tar smoking has been broken again.

Dogs Help The Deaf To Hear

by Michael W. Fedo

Donne L. Colton of Minneapolis, who is deaf, has a hearing dog trained to act as his "ears."

At the sound of a knock, the dog gives Colton a nudge and starts with him toward the door.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

A 15-month-old boy here woke from his afternoon nap and somehow lodged his head between the spokes of the crib rail. Since he had wakened nearly 30 minutes earlier than expected, his agonized cries would have gone unheeded for at least that long, because his mother is deaf. But thanks to Puff, her mix-breed dog, the mother was alerted to the baby's plight and rescued him.

It was no accident that Puff led her to the child. The dog was specifically trained to act as its owner's "ears" in a project begun by the Minnesota Humane Society several years ago and now under the auspices of the American Humane Association (AHA). Puff is one of America's first hearing dogs, and right now there are fewer than three dozen of them. But the AHA, which picked up the pilot project from Minnesota, anticipates that someday hearing dogs will be available to all who need and request one.

Though much effort and money is directed toward handicapped Americans, our 2 million deaf tend to receive minimal attention. Fortunately, the hearing dog program has the potential to be as meaningful to the deaf as the Seeing Eye dogs are to the blind—at a fraction of the cost.

Training is not as extensive for hearing dogs as it is for Seeing Eye dogs, and virtually any dog, regardless of size or breed, can qualify. "We've found that mix breeds will work out well," said Ruth Deschene, executive director of the Minnesota Humane Society and initiator of the project.

Trained to respond

The hearing dogs are trained to respond to all sounds the hearing person would react to—such as a car horn, a doorbell, smoke detector, siren, alarm clock, a crying child, boiling water.

The program began in 1973, when Mrs. Elva Janke, an elderly deaf woman in Minneapolis, wrote to a local action news program that she had lost a dog she had trained to respond to sounds. She was now too old to train another animal but wondered if the news staff knew of a center where dogs were trained to serve the deaf.

The staff turned the letter over to Mrs. Deschene. Then, after a broadcast and a plea for community help, a modest effort was launched and the hearing dog concept was underway. For two years, trainers with no previous experience with hearing dogs worked with the Minnesota Humane Society to define a program. Six dogs were trained, of which five were placed with deaf persons in St. Paul, and one in Lexington, Ky.

The first animal trained was Jody, a small black dog from the St. Paul animal shelter. And Jody's first meeting with Mrs. Janke was a poignant one. Mrs. Janke, her son and husband were seated in the training facility as Jody was brought in with its trainer. Immediately, the dog walked over to Mrs. Janke and put its head in her lap.

A sensitivity

Mrs. Deschene reports that this seems to be a common occurrence when dogs are first introduced to deaf masters. "Maybe it's in the training," she says, "but the dogs develop a sensitivity toward the person around them who cannot hear."

Hearing dogs are now being trained in 20 weeks at AHA headquarters in Denver, Colo. They are first trained in general obedience, then in learning to obey hand signals from the deaf. The next phase is called auditory or sound-awareness training, which teaches the dogs to react to specified sounds.

According to Robert White, director of the AHA program and a specialist in deaf education, "The first priority is to train dogs to respond to alarm clocks and smoke alarms."

The usual response of the animal is to nudge its master, run to the source of the sound, then back to its master.

The training program also involves the National Association for the Deaf, and it is expected that, in two or three years, 10 regional shelters around the country will be training hearing dogs to be provided free to deaf persons.

One special advantage of the hearing dog is that it opens up new vistas of play for deaf children who have been handicapped in developing the social skills and awareness that accompany playing and interacting with other children.

Colton's hearing dog remains with him until the caller at the door is identified. If there were any danger, the dog would try to protect him.

Hearing dogs can notify youngsters if someone or something is behind them, or warn the daydreaming child that a speeding auto is approaching, thus allaying the fears of parents while enabling their children to enjoy the full range of play activities.

Parents relax

The hearing dogs will also free parents of other worries. Prior to acquiring Sparky, the parents of Todd and Philip had to take the 13-year-old deaf twins everywhere or provide a sitter, even when performing routine grocery shopping. They feared that if a fire broke out, or some other emergency arose, the boys would not find out in time. But with Sparky, the parents can relax, secure in the knowledge that the dog will alert their sons to any sound demanding attention.

One of the first deaf persons in Minnesota to receive a dog was Donne L. Colton, a marketing supervisor with a large Minneapolis corporation. He reported that the dog helped in many ways while he was at work. It notified him when someone was at his door and when the phone rang. Colton, who can speak, could answer the phone and tell the caller to phone back when his secretary was in to take the message. He also reported that the animal acted as a guard dog in the home.

Warren Northwood of the AHA says that the program is now training 40 dogs to be placed with deaf mutes and is also developing a training manual.

"The people in Minnesota did an excellent job in bringing this concept to national attention," Northwood said. "It's our job now to make this a national outreach and, in a way, to provide dogs who will be ears to millions of hearing-impaired people."

Is constipation part of growing older?

It's true that as you get older, your body does slow down and regularity can become a problem. But it doesn't have to be.

You don't have to suffer from constipation...not when there's Serutan to help you.

Serutan is the laxative especially formulated to help a sluggish system back to regularity. That's because Serutan with its natural ingredients, adds the necessary moisture and bulk your system tends to lose as you get older.

Serutan gently nudges your slowed down system along, so you eliminate smoothly and comfortably. You no longer have to experience the discomfort of painful elimination.

Try Serutan. Because constipation doesn't have to be a part of growing older.

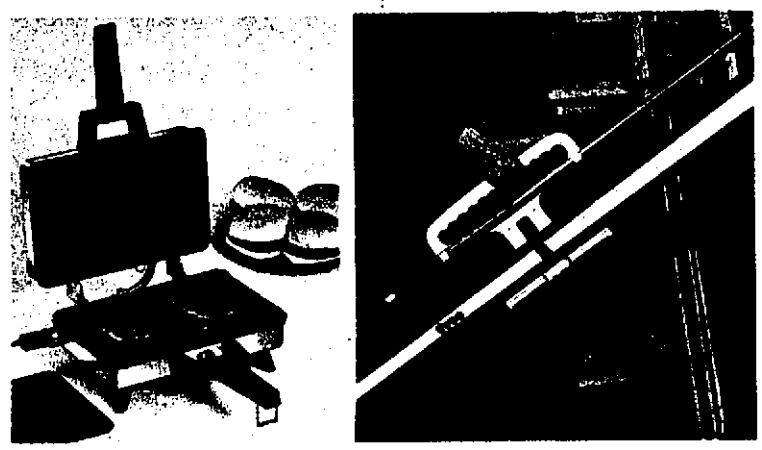
A jewel of a dessert

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

This beautiful gelatin mold has the color and sparkle of garnets, the indescribably delightful flavor combination of Bing cherries and pineapple and cola, the crunchiness of slivered almonds. Add a garnish of dairy sour cream sweetened to taste, and you have a handsome, unusual and delicious dessert that will be long remembered. A demitasse or a tiny cup of espresso adds the final touch of elegance.

Cherry Cola Dessert



1 can (1 lb.) Bing cherries
1 can (1 lb.) crushed pineapple
1 large package (6 oz.) cherry or black cherry flavored gelatin
1 can or bottle (12 oz.) cola beverage
1 cup canned or packaged blanched, slivered almonds

Drain cherries and pineapple; measure syrups; add water, if necessary, to make two cups. Heat syrups to boiling; pour over gelatin; stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add cola beverage; chill until consistency of unbeaten egg white. Combine cherries, pineapple and almonds; fold in. Spoon into eight-cup mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. If desired, garnish with dairy sour cream sweetened to taste. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

QUICK-CONNECT CAR SECURITY: Intermittently sounding your horn after illegal entry, a new alarm system is designed to protect your car from theft, as well as the CB radio, tape deck and other equipment inside. The relatively simple system needs no horn relay—only a three-wire hookup. It is triggered by current flow when any light in the car is turned on by opening of a door. The 10-second alarm delay gives you time to switch the system off when you enter. Connection of a fourth wire disables the ignition when the alarm is activated. Suggested retail price: $17.95. Harcor International, Dept. PP, 744 Algonquin Rd., Arlington Heights, Ill. 60005.

my FAVORITE jokes

by RODNEY DANGERFIELD

EDITOR'S NOTE: After seven years of performing in his club, Dangerfield's, in New York, Rodney wanted to break it up a bit—"I found out I couldn't get no respect there, either. I was calling the doorman Mr. Johnson and he was calling me Rodney." So he went to Las Vegas last July to see what would happen. In Las Vegas he got plenty of respect. He opened at the Tropicana Hotel and the engagement was so successful he stayed on for 10 weeks. He returns to the Tropicana for four weeks starting this Thursday.

But life is never easy for Rodney. "Every time I do something I get stuck," he says. "That's how I got my name, Rodney Dangerfield. I went into show business, I wanted to improve myself. I saw an ad in the paper: 'Improve your personality.' I went to see the man, and he told me my personality was OK, but my name was my problem. I said to him, 'How can a name be a problem? Even Shakespeare said, "What's in a name?" '

"He said, 'Who?' I said, 'William Shakespeare.' He said, 'Look, you want to listen to me or you want to listen to your friends?' I said, 'I don't understand. Is it good to change your name?' He said, 'Of course. I always keep changing my own name. Right now I'll give you a deal. I'll let you have a new name for $500.' I said to him, 'That's a lot of money.' And he said, 'It's a great name, and once people hear it they'll start saying it.' I said, 'What's the name?' He said, 'Rodney Dangerfield.' I said, 'Rodney Dangerfield?' He said, 'See, you just heard it, and you're starting to say it.'

"As soon as I got home I thought to myself I made a mistake. I called the guy up. I said, 'Look, I want my money back. This is Rodney Dangerfield.' He said, 'Who?' I said, 'Dangerfield, don't you remember?' He said, 'Oh, yeah, Shakespeare's friend.' I told him, 'I don't want the name.' He said, 'Don't be foolish. Try it for two weeks. I guarantee you'll keep it.' So I tried it. I still didn't like it. I called back. I couldn't find the guy. He changed his name."

Rodney's problems continue:

I get no respect at all. I took my wife to a tunnel of love, and she told me to wait outside.

With animals I never had any luck. When I play the horses, I always go broke. Every time I bet, I hear the same thing: "They're off—except one."

With me nothing works out. I took one of those cheap flights on an airline. I finished eating, I had to do the dishes.

And these guys who fix cars, you gotta watch them, too. Last week I got my car fixed. The guy gave me the bill. The bill said: "Parts $8, labor $55." I figured the bill must be legitimate, there was grease on it.

I went over to the mechanic: "Hey, what's with this labor $55? Must be a mistake. Can you check it out?" So he checked it out. He went over to a car that was being worked on, and he started to talk to two feet. Later I found out there was no one under the car. They're fake feet. You buy 'em, they cost $7 a pair, you slip 'em under a car and you talk to them.

And these guys who work in gas stations, they tell you how hard they work. They put in 14 hours. But they don't work 14 hours, cause they only work when there's people around. When they're alone they don't do a thing . . . "What's that, mister, you got a dead battery? I'm sorry, I can't help you cause I'm all alone here."

I'll tell you, my whole life is psychiatrists. When I was 10 years old, my parents sent me to a child psychiatrist. I went for a year and a half. The kid didn't help me at all.

●

Nothin' works out. The time I had my fortune told, the gypsy said a big blonde was going to come into my life. The next day my girl left me for a Swede.

With my wife I've got one break. She hates to cook. She's the worst cook in the world. When I go on a picnic I bring Tums for the ants.

I can never enjoy a meal at my house. My wife eats too slow. She had dinner last night—it took her 2½ hours. Who eats alphabet soup alphabetically?

With my wife I don't get no respect, either. The other night she told me to take out the garbage. I told her I already took out the garbage—and she told me to go out and keep an eye on it.

When I was a kid, I was so poor—in my neighborhood the rainbow was in black and white.

It's wonderful to have gray hair. Just ask a man who's bald.

My wife drives me nuts. This week she's mad at her plants. She's talkin' to canned vegetables.

The advice my father gave me when I was a kid—he told me: "Never take candy from a stranger unless he offers you a ride."

I got nothin' from my old man. Once on my birthday he gave me a bat. The first day I played with it, it flew away.

In the park I had no friends. I remember the seesaw. I had to keep running from one end to the other.

I had it rough as a kid. One time on Halloween my old man dressed me as the Pied Piper. In two hours every rat in the neighborhood was following me.

When I started out in show business, it was rough. And they know when you're doing bad. I tried out for a shaving commercial. I didn't get the job, but they told me to keep the razor.

I get no respect from the phone company. Last month they sent me a refund of $3. They told me 30 of my calls didn't make sense at all.

When I was a kid in the nightclub business it was always bad. There was one place—the first night I was arrested for loitering with a microphone.

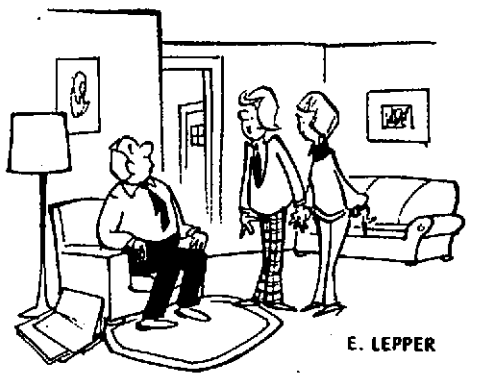
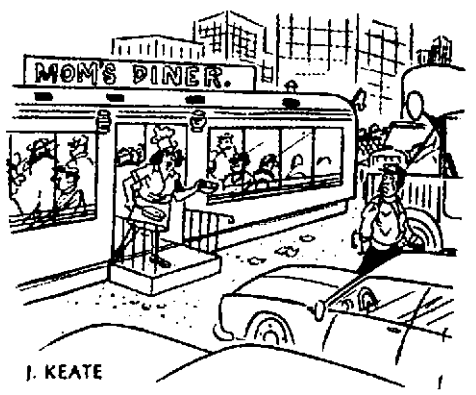
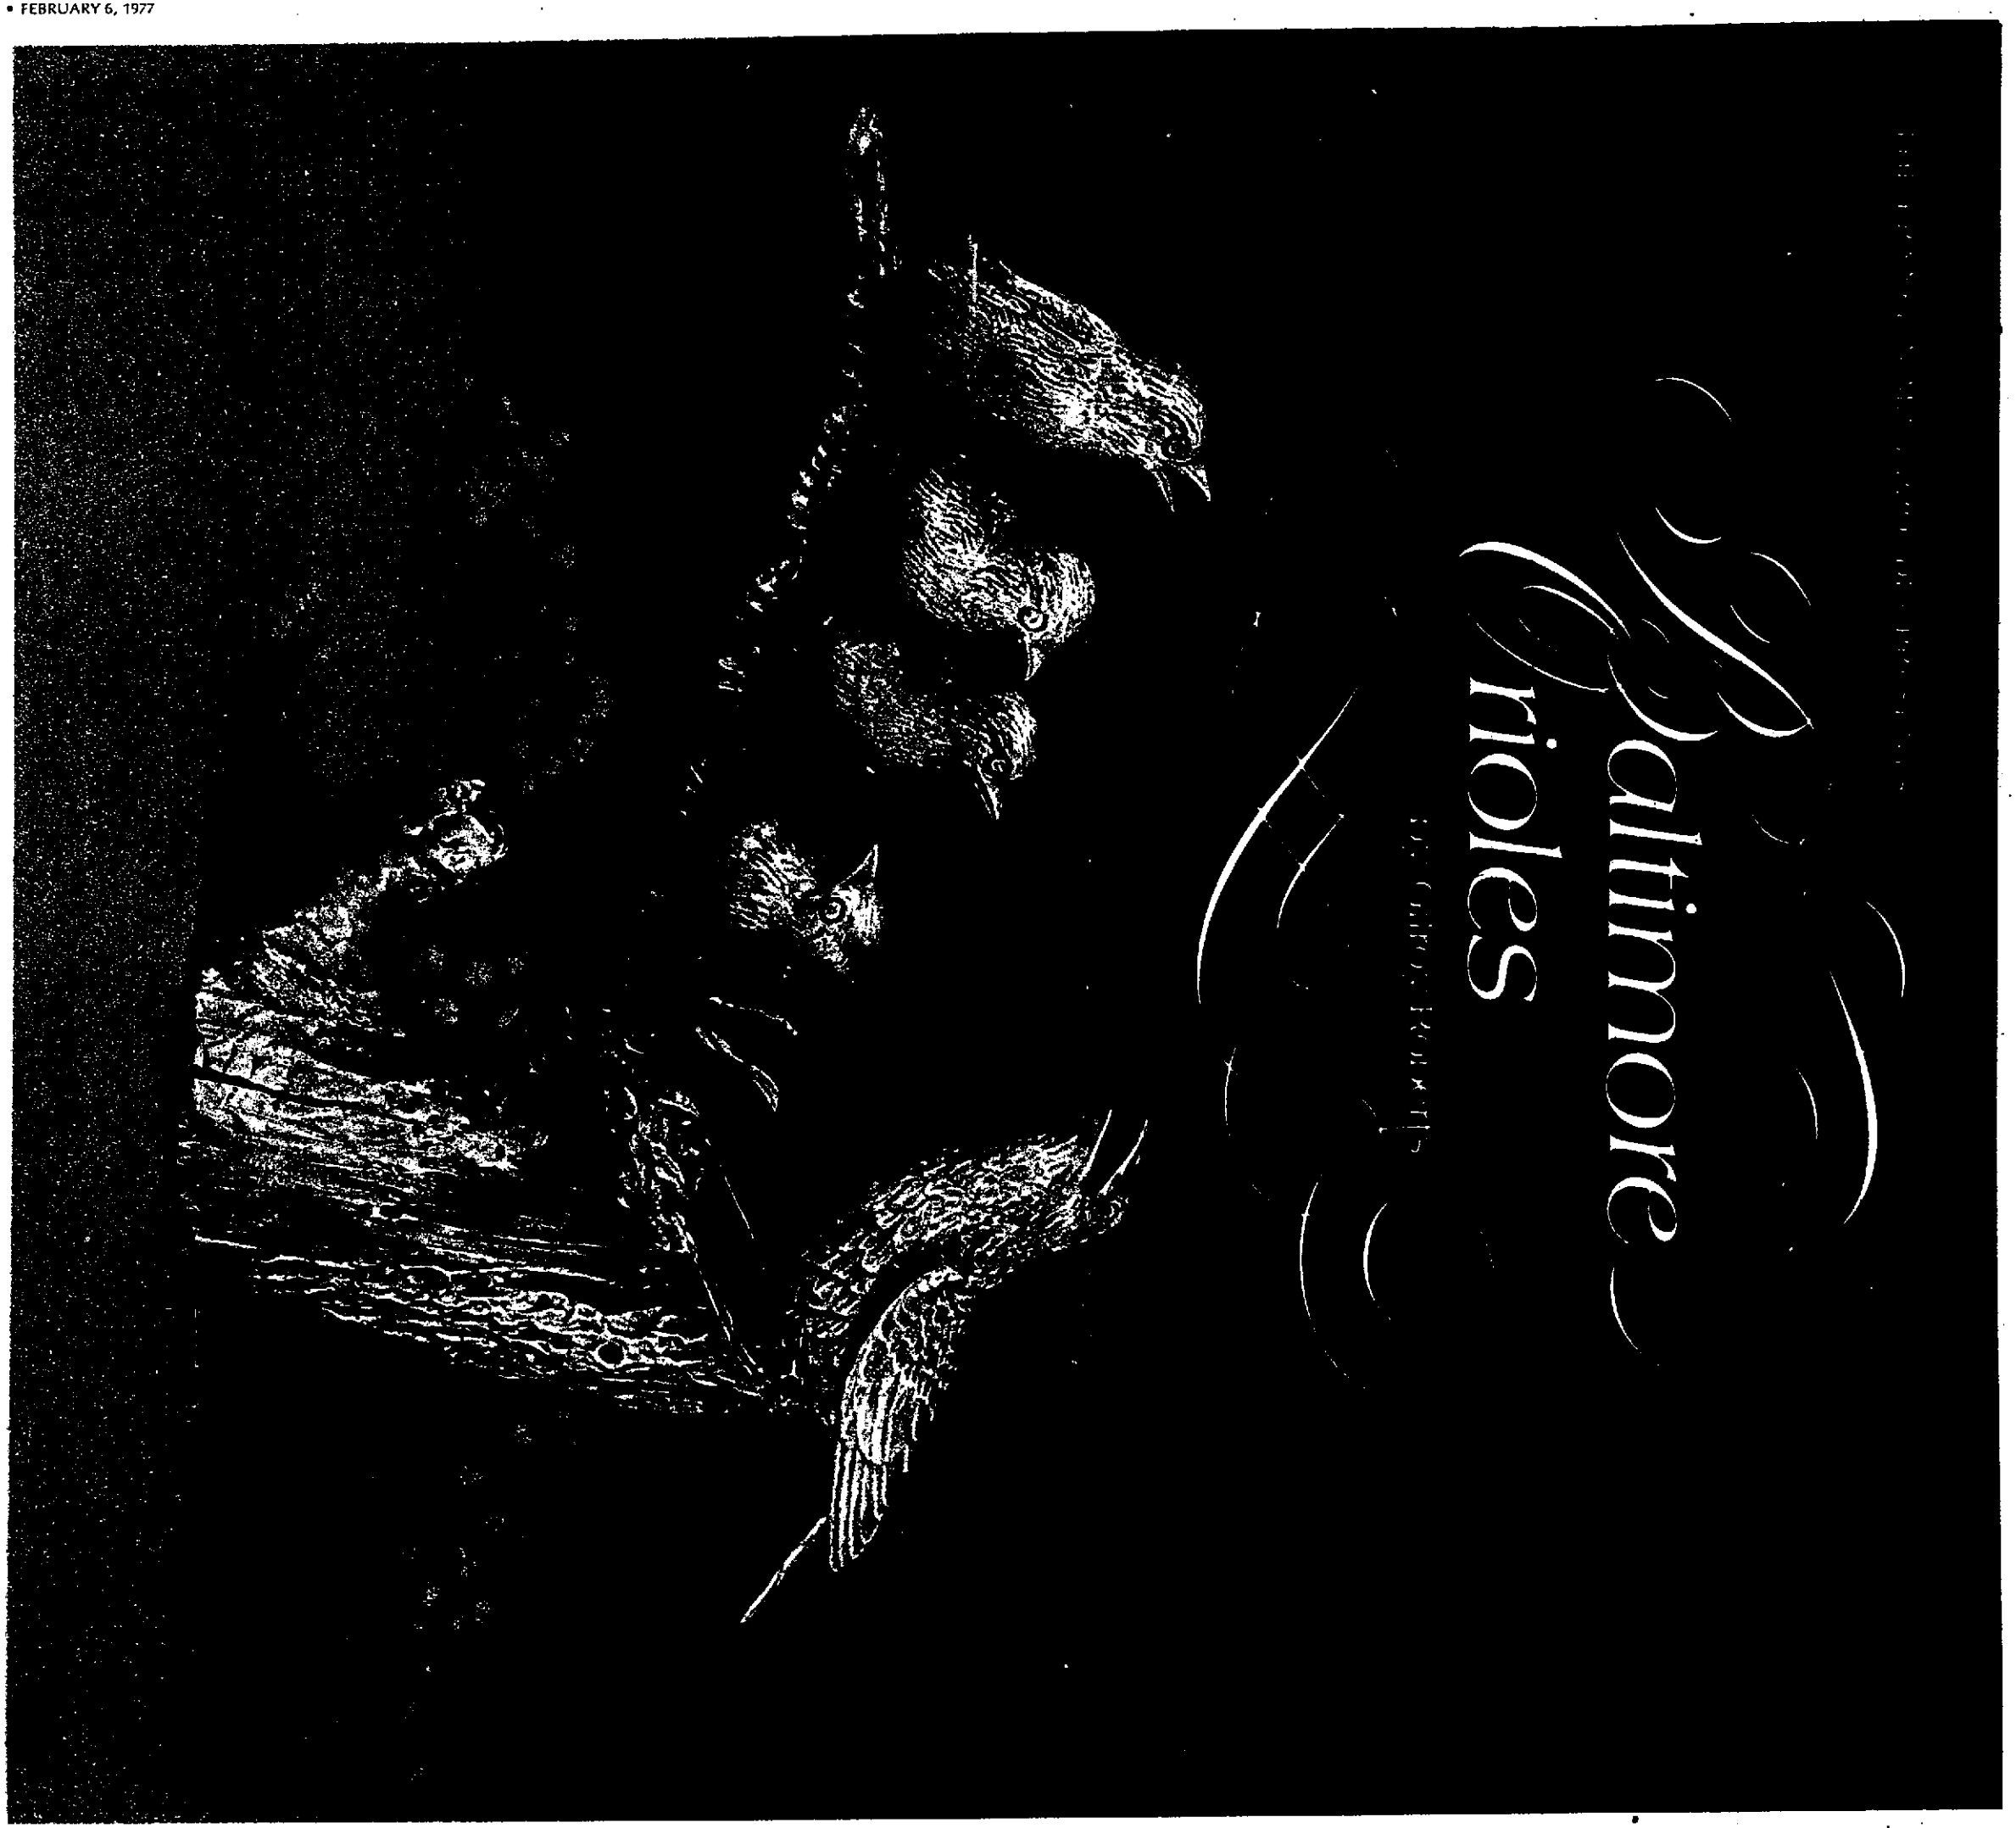
Sometimes I can't take it no more. Last week I was so depressed I wanted to pack my suitcase and run away. Then I thought of my wife and kids—why should I make them happy?



"I need a parrot to talk to my plants while I'm on vacation."



IT'S TO LAUGH



"You're heading for the last roundup!"

"Don't think of it as losing a daughter, sir. Feel free to keep right on giving her an allowance."

"You didn't finish your oatmeal!"

Baltimore
riolesis

An original sculpture in fine pewter, by one of the finest artists of our time.

To be issued only once, in strictly limited edition.

Ordering deadline: February 25, 1977

THE SCULPTOR. Gilroy Roberts is recognized throughout the world as one of America's greatest living sculptors.

For the past twelve years, Mr. Roberts has been Chief Sculptor of The Franklin Mint. Before that, Mr. Roberts was Chief Sculptor-Engraver of the United States Mint—the ninth man in history to have held that post.

His work has been exhibited at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the National Sculpture Society in New York City and in many cities abroad.

To Gilroy Roberts, birds are the most delightful of God's creatures . . . the very essence of all that is beautiful in nature. And for many years, birds have been the subject of many of his most important works. His sculpture of the American Eagle, for example, was personally presented by President Ford to the King of Belgium, Pope Paul VI and other Heads of State.

Now, at the height of his career, Mr. Roberts has created an extraordinary new bird sculpture . . . one of his most beautiful, charming and graceful works . . . Baltimore Orioles.

This lovely work of art is Gilroy Roberts' first sculpture in pewter — a medium chosen for its gleaming luster and enduring beauty.

Each sculpture will be meticulously crafted in fine pewter, then individually finished by hand with a special toning, to bring out every subtle nuance of the artist's work.

Each sculpture will be produced to order, and will bear Gilroy Roberts' famed signature mark (GR).

THE LIMITS OF EDITION. Baltimore Orioles will be produced only once, in a single, strictly limited edition. There is a firm limit of one per person, and an absolute ordering deadline of February 25, 1977.

The sculpture will not be available through even the finest art dealers or galleries. It is available only from The Franklin Mint. The total edition will be equal to the exact number of valid orders postmarked by the February 25 deadline. And, when these orders have been filled, the master sculpture will be destroyed so that this limited edition pewter sculpture can never be produced again. Thus, the rarity of this beautiful work of art will be assured forever.

The price of this important new work of art by Gilroy Roberts is $150. There is no need to send any payment now. You will be notified when your sculpture is ready, and you will be billed at that time for the required deposit of $37.50, with the balance to be billed in three equal monthly installments after shipment.

AN ADDED OPPORTUNITY. Baltimore Orioles is the first in a series of four pewter bird sculptures being created by Gilroy Roberts.

As the owner of Baltimore Orioles you will also have the guaranteed option to acquire the three remaining sculptures in this series at the same original issue price. The three other sculptures will portray Peregrine Falcons, Pelicans and Blackbirds.

There will, however, be no obligation to purchase any of the other three-works. You will receive advance notice of each new sculpture as soon as it is ready, and you will then have thirty days in which to order it if you wish.

AN IMPORTANT REMINDER. The ordering deadline for Baltimore Orioles is February 25, 1977. All orders must be postmarked on or before that date to be eligible for acceptance. The edition will then be permanently closed.

Baltimore Orioles—Shown actual size. The sculpture portrays a female Oriole and her young in a family grouping characteristic of this very domestic bird.

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.
But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.
Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.
So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.
Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.
New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.
That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.
Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

A 1962 TAPE OF THE BEATLES MAY GROSS MILLIONS

Lucky Find—Maybe

In 1962 a quartet of young, rough musicians from Liverpool cut a tape while playing in Hamburg, West Germany, for $25 a night.

The group was the Beatles, and the tape included dialogue between John Lennon and his German audience, between John and his barmaid girlfriend Bettina, and such songs as "I Saw Her Standing There," "Kansas City" and "Roll Over Beethoven."

The tape fell into the hands of "King Size" Taylor — now a butcher in Southport, Lancashire, but a friend of the Beatles in their early days—and Alan Williams, the Beatles' first manager.

Along with Paul Murphy, manager of Buk Records, they now plan to turn the old tape into a double LP record, which they reckon should gross about $15 million.

Should the LP go into release, it will undoubtedly lead to a court-room battle over the question: to whom does the original tape belong?

Taylor says the tape belongs to him. Paul Murphy adds: "The breakthrough on who owns the copyright came when Taylor stumbled on an old letter from Brian Epstein, the Beatles' manager, saying that he would offer Mr. Taylor 20 pounds for the tape even though 'there does not appear to be any commercial value to the recording.'"

Taylor declined the 20 pounds, kept the tape in an old cupboard drawer in his home "until I realized that I had this tape from the old days and that surely it must be worth something in this period of rock 'n' roll revival."

Although the Beatles broke up over six years ago, their records still sell briskly, and they've been offered millions to make at least one comeback tour.

Violence Cure

The way to stop violence in America is to stop spanking children, argues psychologist John Valusek. In a speech to the Utah Association for Mental Health some weeks ago, Valusek declared that parental spanking promotes the thesis that violence against others is acceptable.

"Spanking is the first half-inch on the yardstick of violence," said Valusek. "It is followed by hitting and ultimately by rape, murder and assassination. The modeling behavior that occurs at home sets the stage: 'I will resort to violence when I don't know what else to do.'"

Guidebook Reveals New Plan Called...

THE BRAN DIET

You can shed weight in just 72 hours. Prove it to yourself by ordering our new, comprehensive diet manual now.

I'm Ann Adkins. Here I am before I went on The Bran Diet and lost 110 pounds. Then, people would say, "She has such a pretty face — if only she weren't so fat." Read my full story.

You can lose weight with our new $2.99 Guidebook like some people who report losses of over 100 pounds without hunger. The secret is eating foods that contain a little bit of fiber like bran, the outer fiber coat of grains, and certain other foods with proper caloric reduction. Order today with our no risk guarantee.

Here I am now. Order THE BRAN DIET, and see how easy it will be for you to lose weight too.

"I LOST 110 POUNDS"

— Mrs. Ann Adkins, Westfield, N.C.

"I'd been fat all my life. I had tried all kinds of diet aids, pills and fad diets. I'd lose 20 or 30 pounds and gain it back - plus more. Then, at 31 when I weighed 224 pounds, I put myself on the bran diet. I know it sounds unbelievable, but I stuck with it until I lost 110 pounds. I didn't go hungry at all. It's the kind of food, not the amount, that matters. It's wonderful to be slim. People that I work with are fascinated with what I've done. They used to say, "She has such a pretty face - if only she weren't so fat!" Now, I get lots of compliments. P.S. - My husband has lost 40 pounds too, and we are able to get out and do things we've never done before.

It's been over 1½ years since I reached 114 pounds, and I have no trouble keeping weight off. I would like to share my newly-found joy in life with others and encourage those who have problems losing weight."

"I WENT FROM 250 TO 178 IN 15 WEEKS."

— Mr. J.C.

The secret: heavy emphasis on one of the choices of The Bran Diet. "My blood pressure is back to normal and I've lost 12 inches around my waist. Now I have will power because this is the diet I enjoy."

"SIMPLE TO FOLLOW"

— Mrs. I.C.

"You made your program quite simple to follow and I do like your recipes. I have already baked the muffins and distributed them among some friends, and they were delectable."

"VERY TASTY DIET"

— Mr. M.S.

"RECOMMENDED BY MY DR."

"I LOST 10 POUNDS IN 2 WEEKS."

— Mrs. F.C.

NO "EMPTY FEELING"

— Mrs. J.S.

"My daughter and I have been on Plan No. 1 for awhile. It's easy to stay on, because you don't have that 'empty feeling.'"

"BEST I EVER ATE"

— Mrs. F.B.

"The macaroni and the meatloaf are the best I ever ate."

THE BIG DIFFERENCE IN SECOND TRUST DEED LOANS ON ANY REAL ESTATE:

Not all second trust deed loans cost the same. That's why the Federal Government has given you a simple way of comparing the annual cost of any loan . . . the Annual Percentage Rate. The lower this rate, the lower your annual cost.

Most other companies ask you to pay Annual Percentage Rates from 17% to 21%. That's because they charge you 10% interest, a maximum commission and give you a short time to repay. Not us. Through Reliable your interest rate is lower (9%), the commission is lower, and you get more time — 8 years — to fully repay your loan, including principal and interest. There are no balloon payments. We offer you an Annual Percentage Rate of 12.88%. Check around. We believe it's the best rate available . . . and it's available to everyone.

The figures look like this. For every $1,000 you borrow you pay only $14.66 a month for 96 months. The total of payments is $1,407.36. We also offer shorter term loans at the same interest rate and commission, but with proportionately higher Annual Percentage Rates. Naturally, you can pay off your loan at any time by prepaying interest on the balance in accordance with state law.

You may borrow from $2,000 to $50,000 on a first or second trust deed loan — on any real estate anywhere in California. On the average, you'll have your loan in 10 working days.

No gimmicks. No double-talk. We just think it's good business to give you the facts . . . and more money for your money.

Metabolism
may be the key to losing your
FAT

More and more weight loss experts and members of the medical profession are linking METABOLISM with premanent weight reduction.

Dieters will always lose weight. In fact, every diet program (pills, clubs, injections) will help you lose weight, but it is always temporary. The weight loss is soon gained back, and on again to a new diet program. As all dieters know, it is a miserable, never-ending experience.

The problem is not calories, carbohydrates, exercise, etc., but it is how your system METABOLIZES the food you consume. In general, obese people do not eat more than thin people. In most cases, they eat less, therefore, the difference is in the METABOLIC RATE, which converts the food into fat and energy. Thin people eat whenever, whatever they want, without counting anything, yet they stay thin. The reason being, they have a thin-balanced METABOLISM.

At the MARENGO INSTITUTE, after a careful medical examination, you will be instructed on how to re-establish your eating habits without dieting, re-adapting your body's Metabolical rate of food conversion to that of a thin person's, and finally re-adjusting to being thin permanently.

During the weight loss period, having eaten normally without dieting, the weight loss is permanent. Sound too good to be true??? We agree!!! Call now for a complimentary consultation appointment.

Cover: Winning West

It isn't the same as a "Roots" that took 12 hours on eight nights to complete, but it's going to take half that time for James Arness to portray "How the West Was Won" on ABC, starting tonight.

The movie is to be shown in three parts, two hours each tonight, two hours Monday night and the final two hours on Monday, Feb. 14.

Through that six-hour story Arness will be starring as mountain man Zeb Macahan who leads his family westward back in the 1860's. The drama is based on the theatrical motion picture of the same name from a few years ago.

Besides Arness as Zeb, the story revolves around two other main characters. Eva Marie Saint plays his sister-in-law, Kate Macahan, whose husband died leaving her to maintain a home for her daughter and a young son.

Third major character is Luke, her older son, who is pursued by the law as a deserter from the Union Army. Bruce Boxleitner is cast in this role.

The supporting cast assembled for the six-hour movie includes Jack Elam as Cully, David Huddleston as Judson, John Dehner as Benjamin, Brit Lind as Erika, Todd Lookinland as Josh, Royal Dano as Elam, Anthony Zerbe as Capt. Martin Grey, Don Murray as Mr. Anderson, Richard Angarola as Chief Claw and Robert Padilla Mountain-is-Long.

Completing Kate's family as the other Macahan youngsters are Kathryn Holcomb as Laura, William Kirby Cullen as Josh and Vicki Schreck as Jessie.

Tonight's first episode Zeb starts off as a calvary scout but has a difference of opinion with an Indian-hating colonel orders the destruction of an entire Arapaho village.

Zeb decides that's enough of that, and returns to the farm where Kate is barely squeaking through to provide for her family as she waits for Zeb to come back to resume the trek westward to Oregon.

Complicating the move West has been the appearance on son Luke on his flight from the Army. Recovering from a gunshot wound he is being hidden and nursed back to health by a beautiful young member of a religious sect.

Incidentally, tucked away well down in the cast list is a John Denver, playing Bishop Benjamin. At this time you'll have to watch to see whether this might be where the lad first got his love for the mountains.

Spanish West Exhibit Features Local History

"The Spanish West" is a newly opened exhibition which will remain on view through Sunday, Feb. 27th at the Bowers Museum, 2002 North Main Street, Santa Ana. The exhibition of Hispanic California and the West, which projects the Spanish period and includes the early history of Orange County, was organized by Reilly P. Rhodes, museum director.

Included in the exhibition are paintings, articles of clothing, land documents, maps, selected mission artifacts, Spanish armor, weapons and textiles. The objects shown are from the museum's collections together with material on loan from Carl Schaefer Dentzel of Los Angeles, the Southwest Museum in Highland Park, Los Angeles, Arnold Dominguez and the Saddleback Western Art Gallery in Santa Ana. Two anonymous lenders have also contributed significant material.

Two paintings on loan for the show are of particular interest. "Patron Y Major Domo" illustrates two men on horseback, the hacienda owner, or patron, and his foreman. This work was done about 1835 by the famous Mexican artist, Carl Nebel in Mexico. This particular pose shows the contrast in formal European portraiture and the more casual portraiture of the West. Another painting which combines European and Western painting characteristics is "Our Lady of Sorrows" done in New Mexico in the 18th century. The portrait is painted using the face of an Indian woman, but the pose is very European.

Want Some Adventure? Apply To Bill Barriere

By GARY KRINO
Register Staff Writer

LAGUNA BEACH – Bill Barriere looks like he'd be more at home cruising Beverly Hills' Rodeo Drive in a Rolls Royce rather than chopping his way through the crippling heat of Panama's killer jungle, the Darien Gap.

He's got a way with clothes and personal grooming that spells Palm Spring chic, French champagne served in crystal goblets and his own table (on call) at Chasen's.

On the outside, not a whisper of the soldier of fortune that dwells within. And then the 40-year-old former stockbroker's assistant, head waiter, construction worker and administrative assistant for a civilian construction consortium in Vietnam starts to talk.

He says he wants to be the leader of the first ever ground expedition to cross the Western Hemisphere, north to south from Pt. Barrow, Alaska, to Punta Arenas, Chile, near the islands that border the famous Strait of Magellan. That's a distance of almost 12,000 miles.

Why would anyone want to leave what appears to be the good life to dog sled across the frozen tunda of the north country, slash his way through Central American jungles and wind across 24,000-foot Andes peaks? "Just because it's all there," said Barriere who is based in Laguna Beach, Palm Springs and Anchorage, Alaska.

"It's a dream of the ultimate thing," he said. "There's a little of Walter Mitty in everyone. I've been a professional adventurer all my life."

Barrier has been putting the trip together for the last two and a half years and, thus far, has recruited a doctor from Seattle, explorer from Marina del Rey, cook from Palm Springs and a former Angola mercenary from Anchorage to accompany him.

Much of the recruiting for the party that Barriere hopes will number about 20 is being done through newspaper ads that read like this: "Expedition seeks soldiers of fortune, doctor, cartographer – must have experience in jungle and tundra terrain and be self supporting for one year."

Barriere said responses (about 2,500 in the last six months go to Capt. John Hurd, a former Green Beret, who reviews them. Hurd is strategic advisor for the trip.

"Hurd knows what it takes to survive in both extremes – steamy jungles full of insects, poisonous snakes, cannibalistic Indians and smugglers plus the 30 degrees below zero weather in Alaska," Barriere said.

If the prospective participant passes Hurd's review, he is sent a 15-page application and if the answers fit the trip's bill, a battery of four psychological tests is sent. Psychological strain is expected to be as much a part of the trip as the hostile environment.

In addition, each participant must have at least $15,000 in liquid assets "so that if anything happens to him, he can handle the finances. We estimate that only about 70 per cent of the people who start the trip will finish it," Barriere said.

To date, no women have qualified for the trip that Barriere estimates will take up to nine months to complete if it is successful.

Planning for the journey has required Barriere to travel "at least 38,000 miles" charting the route, negotiating for national border crossings, researching and recruiting.

"It's been a complicated process working out details and arrangements with the various countries we'll be going through," he said. "The ted tape has really been thick." In February, Barriere said he will be in Washington, D.C., to work out the diplomatic aspects of the trip with representatives of the Organization of American States and U.S. State Dept.

In addition, Barriere said he is in touch with movie companies in Hollywood, Alaska and Mexico he says are interested in filming portions of the trip.

Currently, Barriere is negotiating with a major auto manufacturer and two oil companies he said are interested in covering the $1 million price tag the adventurer has set on the trip. If the money is forthcoming, the journey is set to begin by September.

Barriere expects the most trying time of the trip to come when the expedition attempts to get through the jungles of the Darien Gap.

"There's no road," he said. "We're

Rockies Ski Scene Improves

"Say it isn't so!"

This is the cry emanating from ski resorts in the prestigious "Ski The Rockies" affiliation.

Ugly rumors have been circulated creating concern within the membership. Enough concern to send an ambassador into the field for the purpose of spiking spreading of the dilemma.

It was circulated around a New Mexico Resort that one of the major playgrounds in Colorado was filing bankruptcy proceedings. As the hours went by, it wasn't long until nearly all the resorts were being closed due to financial setbacks created by a lack of snow.

"This is as far from the truth as one can get," David B. Arriola told The Register this week. Arriola is the Director of Marketing for Crested Butte Resort in Southern Colorado.

"It hasn't been one of our best years," he continued. "But, it hasn't been as bad as reports have indicated. From standards of local snow buffs, our snow fall has been bad. People from the east don't agree. We have had good skiing in general and expect to have good conditions through Easter. All we ask is..."Give us a chance."

Winter snow conditions have been a major problem for all western resorts but there has been enough to keep lifts operating at capacity.

According to Connie Baxter, reached at "Ski The Rockies" headquarters, Old man Winter has taken his time coming to the Rockies and as a consequence caused many skiers to postpone vacations until February, March and April. Two major storms in January provided enough snow for conditions to be rated from "very good to fair."

Several reports are able to supplement nature's dearth with extensive snowmaking equipment.

The Register made a quick survey of "Ski The Rockies" resorts and the following is what was learned:

ASPEN-SNOWMASS (Colorado): All of Aspen Skiing Corporation's 14 lifts on Aspen Mountain and Buttermilk Mountain are in operation. Nine of the group's 11 lifts at the Snowmass resort, including the Big Burn, are also open, according to George Madsen, vice-president and director of marketing.

"Snow conditions on upper slopes and trails of all three mountains are rated generally good, with some fair areas. At Midway, the ratings are fair with some poor sections. All on-mountain restaurants on all three mountains are serving lunch."

Also in full swing are the ski schools on each mountain, ski rental facilities and all 85 restaurants and night clubs.

CRESTED BUTTE (Colorado): Says Arriola, "Three quarters of our lifts are operating daily. The uppermost runs of Paradise, East River and International will open with the next storm. Trail crews are working long hours to maintain skiing at its best level. We have many special events scheduled for February, March and April."

Ski Rating at Crested Butte is fair on packed powder with a 17-inch base.

VAIL VALLEY (Colorado): "Could 2,000 Flatlanders be wrong? Members of the Flatland Ski Assn. (Midwestern ski clubs) came to Vail in mid-January for their most successful weekend ever. The group left with pleasant memories," says Pam Conklin. "We've had it better but it is still better than most."

Fifteen chairlifts are currently operating and re-opening of the Lions Head Gondola is imminent. All of Vail's 74 restaurants as well as 128 shops and boutiques are open and busy. Vail's brand new ice rink is a swirl of activity.

The Great Vail Sale starts April 2, offering discounts on lift tickets and lodging plus a Snowbank Coupon Book worth $200 in discounts at all Vail shops and restaurants. Vail is scheduled to remain open until April 24th.

BRECKENRIDGE (Colorado): Says Dave Williams, "Maintenance crews have been working harder than ever to

PONY TALES

What To Do About Lost Animal

By SANDI MOSLEY
Register Staff Writer

There's nothing dumb about Sparky.

He learned if he slipped out of the pasture that was his home on the 400-acre Oak Creek Ranch in Santa Ana Canyon, he would be caught and locked in a barn. In the barn, he discovered, he would be fed delicious alfalfa hay.

No one had thought the little spotted pony was quite that smart. At least not until the day ranch manager Bob Cluff saw the lengths he'd go to get out of the pasture.

Undaunted by barbed wire, the stout, four-foot-high pony would sidle up to the fence, slip his right fore and hind legs through the wire, then his head and, finally, his left legs. He usually went visiting horses in another pasture, but when he wanted that hay, he would walk to the road leading to the ranch house, Cluff said.

He did that on Nov. 27, but that time, no one from the ranch saw him. A county animal control officer did.

Little Sparky, described by his owner Mil Hale of Garden Grove as a "miniature Budweiser horse" with flaxen mane and tail and silky hair over his hooves, was taken to the county animal shelter in Orange. On Dec. 7, he was sold for $10 at auction with another pony.

Hale and his 12-year-old daughter began looking for the pony soon after it disappeared. He called the shelter twice a week he said, asking if the pony had been picked up.

He was told the pony was not there, he recalled, and a couple of times, he left his name and phone number where he could be reached if the pony came in.

"A horse can't be running loose in Orange County for a whole month and someone not see it," he said. He finally began checking with horse dealers and the three major auctions, in Riverside, Chino and El Monte. He learned the $65 pony had been sold by the county to a dealer who had consigned it at one of the auctions.

Sparky is undoubtedly amazing his new owners with his feats of escape. Hale has given up trying to get him back, but he still hasn't gotten over how he lost the little pony.

Two things bother him.

– The pony was picked up at Gypsum Canyon and Santa Ana Canyon roads, 100 yards from the ranch house."Why didn't they just take him up to the house and ask there?" Hale wants to know.

– Shelter officials now tell him they had no obligation to tell him over the phone if the pony was there. "It would have been much better if they had said they couldn't tell me if my pony was there and I'd have to come down and look," he said.

So, would should you do if you lose a horse?

Emmett D. Gibson, county animal control kennel services chief, says owners should call their local police department to find out where a loose horse in that town would be taken. The sheriff's department in unincorporated territory would call in animal control, as would most cities, he said. But Laguna Beach, Newport Beach and Irvine use private facilities.

"If you lose your poodle, cat, horse or elephant, whatever kind of animal, you should come down and check on it personally," he added. "We'll tell over the phone if we have horses, if whoever answers the phone knows, but better yet, come down and walk around the pens every three days."

He added that animal control officers are told to use "extra effort" to locate an owner before bringing livestock to the shelter but how much an officer tries is up to his own discretion.

Five days after a horse is brought to the shelter, a report is filed with the state agriculture department in Sacramento listing the animal's description, any brands and probable value. The county then takes out a "notice of intent to sell" in the small-print legal ads in The Register and an auction date is set. Sparky remained at the pound about 10 days.

Brands are registered with the state but regional state brand inspectors keep track of only those on cattle. Under state law, stray cattle cannot be sold at county auctions but must be turned over to the state brand inspectors who track down the owners.

Horse owners have not been willing to pay state inspection costs as cattlemen have, so branded horses do not get the same protection as cattle, state officials say.

A "horse identification bill" requiring inspections at sales and the state line and offering voluntary registrations of horses (as with cattle) may pass the state legislature this year. Until then, though, it's up to the horse owner to keep track of where his animal is.

Geneva Offers Beauty, Color, History In Making

By JOHN PHILIP SOUSA

GENEVA – An easy one-block walk from the train station on the Rue de Lausanne and I was installed in one of the neat and sunny rooms of the Royal Hotel. The English spoken by the very cordial staff had a definite French accent.

A little later, after a sight-filled, 10-minute stroll, I stood on the spot where awhile back a Roman fellow had done a rather impressive bit of construction. His name was Julius Caesar; the time, some 19 centuries ago; the structure, the first bridge across the Rhone River that slices through modern Geneva.

Less than a half hour had elapsed from the moment my very Swiss (read very clean and amazingly punctual) train had deposited me at the station and my arrival at the site where Caesar had laid the foundation of his bridge and where now stands the local tourist office.

A very short time indeed, but enough to capture some of Geneva's unique characteristics.

A Gallic touch. Compactness. Long roots into history.

There's more, of course, to this paradox of a place, this relatively small town of less than 200,000 mostly French-speaking Swiss that no doubt is Europe's most international community.

As the European seat of the United Nations, Geneva is where the more-than-fourscore organizations affiliated with the U.N. regularly hold their meetings and conferences.

The presence of delegates from countries all over the world along with a permanent diplomatic community unusually large for a town that is not a capital does not mean stiff morning coats and somber formality. Far from it, Geneva's French streak, its superb location on the banks of its namesake lake and the large population of students, writers and artists go a long way to make it one of the friendliest and happiest cities anywhere.

In a country long on beauty, this is Switzerland's most attractive and sophisticated city. Wedged between the Alps and the Jura Mountains, it sits on the neat lakeshore within sight of 15,770-foot Mt. Blanc. It is so close to France's key southern ski resorts, Parisians and other Frenchmen fly or drive here en route to those slopes. The great lake and mountain region of Northern Italy is a short distance away.

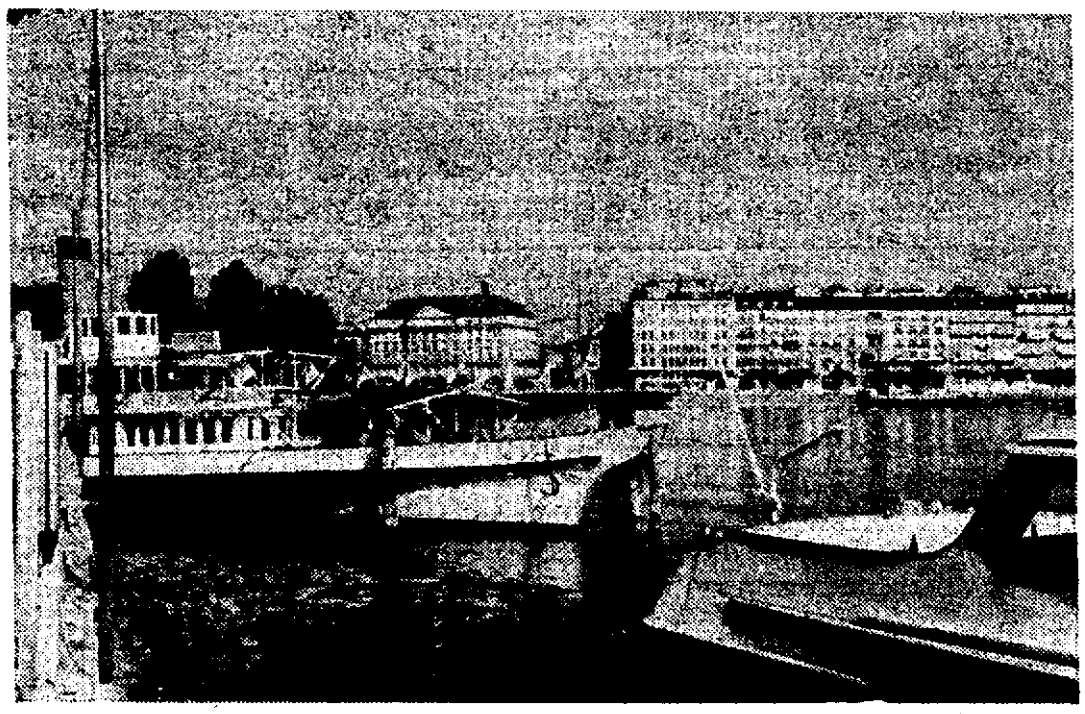
And, of course, Geneva is a convenient gateway to a host of outstanding ski and other Swiss resorts.

Befitting its status as a forum for the world, Geneva boasts a wide choice of cuisines. Fine restaurants serving everything from pheasant to pizza abound. And are quite expensive. But with a little research – and the assistance of the very helpful city tourist office – you can find numerous restaurants and cafes in the moderate to inexpensive range.

On first encounter – particularly as you drive in from the airport or as your tour bus takes the mandatory journey to the western edge of town for a visit to the huge U.N. facility – Geneva will impress you with its broad boulevards and spacious squares.

But there's another face to the place, the Old Town.

It's here in a delightful maze of narrow cobbled ways and medieval buildings that you find the bulk of the most intersting structures, monuments and shops.



Old Town landmarks include City Hall; St. Peter's Cathedral, where John Calvin preached about 400 years ago; the university, founded by the 16th Century Protestant reformer; the Grand Theatre, home to some of Europe's finest opera and ballet performances; and the picturesque Place du Bourg-de-Four.

Within easy walking distance are several important museums, including the Petit Palais (modern art), Ariana Museum (porcelains and ceramics), and the Art and History Museum (excellent poster collection).

As with restaurants, Geneva is crowded with excellent shops, especially goldsmith studios, antique stores and art galleries.

Most will make a large dent in your pocketbook. But, again, with a bit of looking around and some tourist office counsel you can find a number of stores in which to get such popular Swiss souvenirs as clocks, watches, posters, rare books or old prints without having to get a bank loan.

Worth a visit, even if you don't buy a thing, is the Flea Market held twice weekly at the Plaine de Plainpalais, a large square across from the Sports Pavilion. This colorful assortment of people and antiques and junk materializes Saturdays and Wednesdays while on Fridays and Tuesdays, from dawn till noon, the square becomes a bustling produce market. CNS

LAKESIDE CITY – Geneva, Switzerland's most attractive and sophisticated city, owes much of its appeal to natural features such as Lake Geneva, shown here, on whose gentle shores it rises, and the Alps and Jura Mountains which surround it.

Kremlin: Towers Of Power

By GARY LYCAN
Register Staff Writer

Moscow, like most major American and European cities, is experiencing growth problems. Urban renewal, however, requires no labyrinth of bureaucratic paperwork, because the society is controlled by the state. So it is no surprise to find the facelifting has included moving back entire buildings to permit a broad expansion of thoroughfares like Marx Avenue and Gorky Street. One building, in fact, was moved back 14 meters and two stories were added to it

What happens to displaced businesses or residents is not known. Nor are we to find out from Lena, the Russian coed assigned to guide our American tour on a 2,500-mile journey across the Soviet Union. She has been briefed on what information she needs; no more. Still, she doesn't fit my image of a guide – serious, stern, of stocky build, intolerant of Americans. Lena was attractive, polite, curious, a perfect candidate for a Disneyland ambassador.

Intourist, the Russia tourist agency, assigned a second guide to take us through Moscow. Her name was Eva, a slim, well-proportioned blonde who could be perfectly cast as the underground heroine in a spy movie. If one wants to tour Russia, this is the way to do it.

Lenin is probably the name we heard most frequently in the Soviet Union. Certainly this was true in Moscow. He is credited as the "creator" of the Communist Party, the man who led it through three revolutions. He is worshipped by thousands who line up for hours to view his body in the mausoleum on Red Square. The photos you may have seen of endless streams of people pouring into the memorial are not an exaggeration, are not propaganda. Lenin is a red star attraction. But he is not the only one they come to see. For unlike MacArthur's old soldier, World War II has not faded away. Cannons, statues and eternal flames rekindle a reverence for the fighters of fascism.

Red Square is an awesome sight. It is fronted by the legendary and colorful St. Basil's Cathedral, an oversized 16th century master-work built during Ivan The Terrible's reign. The legend says the eyes of the designers were blinded so they could not duplicate the imposing structure, a kaleidoscopic maze of onion-dome design which would be dismissed as too "gingerbread" if it were constructed here. But in Moscow it is a monument to early Russian Architecture.

Beyond Basil's on the left of the cobble-lined square is the mausoleum, a red granite and black labradorite structure built in 1930, framed by blue spruces and terraced viewing tiers. Behind it on both sides is the blocks-long, prison-high Kremlin Wall. Plaques a few feet apart mark the tombs of other Soviet leaders. Stalin's body once shared space in Lenin's tomb, but was removed in the Khrushchev era of de-Stalinization. It is believed he is buried nearby, but our guides profess no knowledge of this. They say they are not even sure where Nikita is buried, but do know it is not in Red Square.Incorporated in the fortress walls are the 20 Kremlin towers. Five are crowned with lustrous ruby stars to symbolize what they call the new Moscow. Lenin is considered Moscow's grand architect; he laid out the scheme for reconstructing the city. It is a never-ending project, wrapped in a phrase we identify with the Soviet Union – a five-year plan. The city's shape changes around the Kremlin. But some things continue with precision-like sameness. If you're there on the hour, you will see the changing of the guard. At exactly two minutes, 45 seconds before the hour strikes, a corporal and two guards emerge from the gate of the Spasskayas Tower. They walk 340 goose-step paces; at the instant they reach the mausoleum doors, the chimes of the Kremlin clock announce a new hour's arrival. Then the corporal quietly gives the command and the newly arrived soldiers take up their posts.

At the end of Red Square, opposite St. Basil's, is the history museum and Lenin Musuem, barn-like structures with roofs as white as snow. In the distance is the luxurious 6,000-room Rossiya Hotel. It is a huge, modern rectangle. Our guides tick off the statistics supporting its presence: a plan to have a city center form a kind of galaxy around the Kremlin to handle the 250,000 cars and 1.5 million visitors daily. Planners say the factories will be moved to industrial zones to permit "the harmonious integration" of monuments, skyscrapers and forest parks.

"Inside the Kremlin" is one way of saying you tour more outside grounds, only this time behind the Kremlin wall. We saw the 200 ton Tsar bell, the parking area for party members, the 15th and 16th-century palace facades which remind one of the splendor of the Arabian Knights, and the inside of one of the churches undergoing restoration. One all-too-visible sign of the scaffold construction was an apparently mummified corpse which had been removed from its cathedral crypt to the floor, covered by a thin white sheet. I didn't wait long enough to catch his name.

We returned to Red Square in little more than an hour. The guards stand duty day and night. Someone is always leaving flowers on the steps leading to the mausoleum. The people appear animated and talkative in line, but become still as if lost in their thoughts when entering the tomb. The cobblestones have sunk in some places, bulged in others. so we walk carefully.

To best appreciate Red Square, return near midnight. We were the only group of tourists there because the mausoleum is closed to visitors at that hour. There were fewer than two dozen people on Red Square. The moon's glow shone down on the shadow-lit fortress walls and cathedral. The fir trees stood like sentinels of silence. You walk across the square without the restrictions imposed by daytime lineups, and you recall its role in history – it was here the revolutionaries stormed the Kremlin in 1917. And it was here, too, on a snowy November day in 1941 that men who had been taking part in an anniversary parade left to fight the Nazis on a front dangerously close to the capital.

You pause to gaze at the illumination and wonder: does the Red Star symbolize a crimson hope that there will be no more wars? You board your bus, take on last look back, and pray.

Obligatory on any Soviet Union tour is a cultural experience. The brochures and your guides tell you it will be one of three events: the ballet, circus of folk dancing. The Bolshoi is the best known; therefore you regard it as the least likely one you will see. The circus and folk dancing, you figure, are undoubtedly nice but, after all, wouldn't it be nice to tell your friends you saw the prestigious Bolshoi Ballet in Moscow?

Well, friends, don't be disheartened. We were taken to the large Tchaikovsky Music Hall where, from the best seats in the house – the gallery – we viewed a dazzling performance of the most fabulous folk dancing I have ever seen anywhere.

A woman commentator introduced in Russian AND English the "stories" staged skillfully by the Krasnoyarsk Siberian Dance Ensemble. The troupe weaves ballet forms into acrobatic prodution numbers, translating the Eastern Siberia spirit into an affectionate movement performed without sets, using only curtains and lighting as backgrounds. A repertoire of more than 50 dances ranged from Little Ducks, a lyrical round dance, to Winter Games, a number full of fun and gaiety, often touched with melancholy. The 40 women and 35 men were accompanied by an unusual orchestra of Russian folk instruments, brass, percussion and flute. They were so graceful that at times it seemed you were watching a reflecting pool of swirling colors-costumes of bright blues, greens, reds, and yellows. One number featured two fishermen wooing a pretty girl as the orchestra played music that sounded like "Sailor's Hornpipe." Another selection, "Dance of the Reindeer." included a drum solo that would have rivaled any big band performance by Gene Krupa.

Applause was generous; the encores too few, the two-hour performance gone too quickly. It reminds one of dance's undeniable appeal as a basic human communicator. It is also a natural resource the Soviets have wisely tapped for tourism. Folk dancing may be the third choice, but it's first class all the way.

NEXT: A space exhibit, and on to Smolensk.

According to the adventurer, the trip has never been attempted totally by land before, "not because there is no one crazy enough, but because costs and logistics have stood in the way."

Other selected historical objects include a Spanish Colonial breastplate and officer's helmet of the 16th century. Adobe forms, red roof tile, a carved wooden pillar cap from one of the altar pillars of the San Juan Capistrano Mission, founded in 1776, are also shown. A 17"x11" adobe block clearly shows the hand prints of the worker who formed the block, as well as the native plant material used.

Some of the sherds recovered from the Jose Andres Sepulveda site by members of the Pacific Coast Archaeological Society are exhibited along with a sketch of the Rancho San Joaquin map drawn in 1841 establishing his claim granted during the Mexican regime. Copies of the Society Quarterly for July 1969 relating the site's history and importance in Orange County, and reporting the artifactual materials recovered are available in the museum shop.

Two important paintings in the museum's collection have been reframed for this exhibition. One work, a watercolor, shows Don Juan Forster at his Las Flores adobe on the Rancho Santa Margarita. This was painted about 1870-75 by the artist Alexander Harmer who spent most of his creative life in California specializing in painting the landscape and scenes of the early Spanish-California period. The second work, an equestrian portrait of Jose A. Sepulveda, was painted in 1856 by Henri Penelon, born in Lyon France in 1827 and active in El Pueblo de Los Angeles by 1853. This portrait shows Sepulveda astride "Black Swan", a mare imported from Australia, which he matched against Plo Pico's unbeaten horse "Sarco". The race, with all Southern California on the side lines and making fantastic bets was run in Los Angeles in 1852 and won by Sepulveda's mount. Recent conservation work and reframing for this portrait have been done with funds supplied by Bowers Museum Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts, Washington, D.C., a matching grant to Bowers Museum during 1976 as a Bicentennial project. The noted Anaheim author and publisher, Leo J. Friis, has called this portrait one of the major treasures of the Bowers Museum.

The eleven square leagues of land on which Sepulveda's cattle had roamed is today's important and well known Irvine Ranch.

insure the quality of skiing remains as high as possible. Although Peaks 8 and 9 are open on a somewhat limited basis, special efforts and increased manpower have been used to maintain and improve all available trails and terrain."

Free Ski The Summit shuttle buses are in full operation as is the Breckenridge town shuttle at no charge.

A wide variety of recreational activities are also available including the increasingly popular Ski Touring School and Mountain Guide Service, offering lessons and guided tours to skiers of all abilities. Ice skating, snowmobiling and varied activities are just a sampling of the facilities at Breckenridge, located among the breathtaking beauty of Colorado's renowned Ten Mile Range.

WINTER PARK (Colorado): This resort ahd been open since mid-November due to a new snowmaking system, according to contact Kristin Rud.

"The system covers 72 acres of terrain and we are adding an additional 84 for next year," she said. "All 11 of the double chairlifts on the mountain are open and operating, plus two high speed T-bars on weekends. Seventy-four per cent of Winter Park's 51 trails are open with only a few expert runs remaining closed until more snow is received."

The resort plans to remain open for skiing until May 1 with a special "Spring Fling" package being offered from April 1 to closing. These incentives start at $67 for three days lodging, lifts and transportation to and from Stapleton International Airport (Denver). There will also be a five-day package for $100 and $129 for seven days.

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS (Colorado): After a massive community effort, moving snow onto the slopes from the surrounding forest and meadows, Steamboat opened for skiing just before Christmas. At the present time there is 26 inches of snow, with 21 runs open and seven lifts, including the 90-car gondola running daily.

A spokesman said, "It's a great time to ski steamboat, especially for the beginner and intermediate. With our 90 ski school instructors on hand, classes are small, just like our lift lines. There is no waiting."

The beauty and extensive entertainment are still hallmarks at Steamboat. With apres-ski activities at an all-time high, Steamboat is a delight to visit.

SNOWBIRD (Utah): The famous snows of the Wasatch continue late in the year and give Snowbird consistently dependable spring skiing conditions with excellent snow depth. United States Forest Service figures show an annual snowfall for March at 121 inches and 117 inches in mid-April. Average daytime temperatures in April and May are from 25 to 32 degrees, according to Jill Whitesides.

Snowbird will be open until May 15. The annual "Spring Fling" begins April 11 and will remain until closing. All rates are discounted on lift tickets, lodging etc.

SUN VALLEY (Idaho): Shannon Besoyan, former Register writer reports, "Sun Valley is currently serving its guests some of the finest skiing in the west. Each of the mountains, Dollar for beginners and world-famous Baldy for low intermediates to expert skiers, are both open on a daily basis. Half Dollar and Quarter Dollar lifts are operating-...Flying Squirrel lifts are open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Ski conditions are rated as good to very good on 2200 vertical... that's Lower Warm Springs, Mid Warm Springs, Flying Squirrel and Lower Plaza runs."

The last week of Sun Valley's 41st winter season, April 10-17, undoubtedly is the time to enjoy the best for less. This week of sunshine and skiing, tennis and swimming carries an irresistable price tag. This is a two-day lodging bundle with lift tickets for $32 per person.

JACKSON HOLE (Wyoming): This popular vacation retreat resorted to the supernatural. Harry Baxter, marketing director, explained they had Paul Lawson, a Cloud Physicist for Colorado International Corp., augment natural snowfall through silver iodide seeding of clouds.

Lawson contends that the minute seeding particles are targeted from aircraft and ground locations, the resultant silver iodide content in the snowfall is negligible.

Jackson Hole has received five feet of new snow since New Year's Day and is rapidly catching up to normal which annually totals 38 feet. Skiing is reported as good with packed and fresh powder.

HANDWRITING

Why Am I Always Like This?

By DOROTHY ST. JOHN JACKSON
Certified Graphoanalyst

Dear Dorothy:

I'm not married, but I am living with three different men. One at a time, of course. I want a man in my life so much that when I get any attention I fall for it immediately. Why am I always like this?
C.M.

Dear C.M.:

No matter how the world turns, moral standards have a way of kicking back.

Already, you've felt the blow.

Today is your world. It tranquilizes you. You forget the restitution which comes with tomorrow; all because your philosophical values have been cut short, seen in the lack of upper and lower extensions in your writing. No amount of attention is enough to satisfy your yearnings, seen in the long, upswing endings. So you're a real pushover, seen in the extremely rounded s's.

Guilt feelings are beginning to pile up, seen in your strokes which consistently swing back to the left, such as in the letter t and other strokes not shown above.

You're beginning to feel, too, that chances are pretty much against you, seen in the dropping y ending, and you're easily discouraged.

Promiscuity has a bitter bite and you're beginning to feel its sting.

If you are counting on an illicit affair to get your man, you can also count on it leaving you high and dry!

To obtain your personal handwriting chart, send $3, a full page of your writing, a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dorothy St. John Jackson, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Allow 60 days.

Why am I always like this?

Motorcycle Braking

When you brake your motorcycle, both the front and rear brakes should be applied. Apply the rear brakes slightly before the front brake.

Applying both brakes, points out the National Automobile Club, makes for smoother stops and extends the life of the brakes.

Perhaps one of the more dramatic effects you can add to photographs is stars.

Yes, stars. In the photo a point of light is formed into a perfect four or eight-point star. A bit of luck on the part of the photographer? Hardly.

You may have made a picture with a star in it when getting a bright reflection or sharp point of light in your photograph. But that was a lucky accident.

However, professional photographers can't wait for lucky accidents. When they want a star effect in their pictures they merely add a cross-star or, as it is better known, a "star" filter.

The star filter takes the light entering the lens from a point source and scatters it in an orderly fashion.

Actually, the star filter is nothing more than a clear piece of optical glass which has had tiny lines etched into its surface in perpendicular lines. So the surface is a network of right-angle lines.

When the light from a point source strikes the filter it is scattered along these lines following the pattern etched into the glass.

This effect can give a jewel-like appearance to a scene. Take a close look at the picture of the boat.

You can see larger stars which are formed from lights on shore. In this case, we see larger light sources will produce larger stars.

We also find that the brighter and smaller the point source of lights, the greater the light scattering effect will be.

The choice of lens also will have an effect on the final star effect in a picture. Try a 50mm to 135mm lens on a 35mm camera for the best results. A wide-angle lens tends to make the stars appear much smaller. The longer the focal length, the longer the points of the star.

The single lens reflex and the star filter make a good working combination because you can see the exact effect as it will appear in the final picture. You can rotate the star filter to change the direction of the star, making the points go in whatever direction you like.

Since the filter cuts your exposure by about one-half an f-stop, you can stack two filters to create an eight-point star effect. This is done by putting the filters together so their points go in different directions. Again you can check the final effect in your viewfinder before you expose your film.

If you don't think your budget can afford a star filter right now, don't despair. There is a way. Any screened material placed before the lens will produce a "star" effect. Ordinary window screening works very well.

There also is another version of the star filter called a "spectral star filter." This is especially effective in shooting color pictures. For not only does the filter give the star effect, but it also breaks down the color into its primary colors, giving a rainbow effect to the points of the star.

Travel Notes

Twenty-five campsites, half the headquarters area campsites at Salton Sea State Recreation Area, have been closed because of rising water.

The campsites have been damaged by water and by erosion caused by wind-whipped wave action.

Remaining developed family campsites include 25 in the headquarters area and 140 at Mecca Beach to the south. Unlimited informal camping is available farther south at Corvina Beach, Salt Creek, and Bombay Beach.

The boat ramps in the headquarters area are also closed, but boats may be launched at the North Shore Marina, a private marina, 1 mile to the north. The owner has offered to honor the Department's annual boat-launching passes. The visitor center and the picnic area near park headquarters remain in service.

The recreation area is on the northeast shoreline of the Salton Sea, 90 miles east of San Diego.

Construction has begun on visitor facilities at Border Field State Park, just north of the Mexican border at the southwest corner of California.

The contract was awarded to the Daly Corporation of San Diego for $730,000. Construction is to be completed by the end of the year.

The development will include a beach entrance building, two comfort stations, five lifeguard stands, picnic and overlook areas, parking areas, access roads, and service facilities.

Thirty concrete picnic tables, each with a nearby metal barbecue, will be built atop the mesa, 50 feet above the beach. The mesa area, with parking facilities for 100 cars and 7 buses, will offer scenic views of the tidal estuary of the Tijuana River, the city of Tijuana, Mexico and the bull ring to the south, San Diego to the north, and the Pacific Ocean to the west.

A 140-car parking area will be constructed below the mesa near the beach, with an informal 75-car overflow parking area.

The California Recreational Trails Committee will hold public hearings Feb. 9 and 10 in southern California to hear testimony regarding three potential sites for off-road vehicle recreation areas.

The hearings will begin Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. in the Palmdale City Council Chambers at 708 East Avenue Q9, Palmdale; and Feb. 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Riverside City Council Chambers, 3900 Main Street, Riverside.

The three sites to be considered are known as Hungry Valley and Ritter Ranch, both about 60 miles north of Los Angeles, and Potrero, about 70 miles east of Los Angeles.

All interested persons are invited to testify at the hearings. Statements should be written, if possible, and submitted to the Committee before or at the hearings.

Further information may be obtained by mail from Alan Kolster, Department of Parks and Recreation, P.O. Box 2390, Sacramento, CA 95811.

ASK KLEINER

'Bionic' Bride Not Pregnant

By DICK KLEINER

DEAR DICK: I heard that Lindsay Wagner finally said yes to Michael Brandon for marriage. And that she is going to have a baby! Is this true? KRISTI HARROD, Tucson, Ariz.

Some of it is true. Lindsay has become a bionic bride and is Mrs. Michael Brandon. But about that baby rumor. Her friends say that's just an unfounded rumor, but they do add that Lidsay loves children and has often said she wants to become a mother.

DEAR DICK: When is the movie, "King Kong," going to be shown? And how and where was he made? MORRIS HOLBAUGH, Ava, Mo.

"King Kong" is in general across-the-nation release now, and should be showing up in Ava any minute. The movie (and the great beast) was made in Hollywood. He's 40 feet high, fabricated of a variety of materials. Basically, you'd have to call him a mechanical contrivance.

DEAR DICK: Will you be kind enough to advise us what ever happend to Jack Leonard, who sang in the early '40s with Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra? MRS. MILDRED E. BACHMAN, Freeland, Pa.

And a great singer he was, too. I tracked him down to Woodland Hills, Ca., not far from Los Angeles. He is now an executive in the music publishing industry. He's just recovering from eye surgery.

DEAR DICK: Could you settle an argument for us? My daughter insists that the house in "Gone With the Wind" is actually located in Chico, Ca. I say it is not. Who is correct? MRS. DAVID DILTZ, San Carlos, Ca.

You are. By house I assume you mean Tara, the big plantation home of Scarlett O'Hara. That was built on the back lot of the old Selznick Studio in Culver City. It is no longer in existence – neither the studio nor the house.

DEAR DICK: Is the singer, Alice Cooper, really the grown up Jerry Mathers of Leave It To Beaver? Or is he the grown up Tony Dow of that show? I've heard both. T.K.C., Comanche, Okla.

Neither. That story keeps popping up, but it isn't true and never was true. Cooper was born in Detroit and grew up in Phoenix, Ariz., and never was one of the Beaver Cleaver clan.

DEAR DICK: While on vacation this summer, I saw T-shirts with Starsky and Hutch on them. I didn't buy one at the time for I didn't know what size my son was. Now I can't find any around here. Can you tell me where I can get one? MRS. ARTHUR DOCTER, Firth, Neb.

According to Brett Garwood, in charge of merchandising for Spelling-Goldberg, the company that makes Starsky and Hutch, many companies have been licensed to make S&H T-shirts. He suggests you try your nearby Sears or J.S. Penney stores, who have such licenses. You can also try a T-shirt shop, because most of them have the iron-on S&H decals and can make one for you.

DEAR DICK: I watched the soap opera, Somerset, ever since it started and all of sudden they took it off the air. Is there a chance it will be back on? MRS. W.K., Troy, Ohio.

ART FOR ALASKA

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

Something very special for culture fans called ART takes place March 9 in Anchorage, a spot best known to most people as a refueling stop for intercontinental planes.

ART is the acronym for the Alaska Repertory Theater which, on that evening at the Sydney Laurence Auditorium, opens its first season with the rascally farce "Scapino." Two other plays will follow into May, in Anchorage and in Fairbanks.

And with ART, the nation's most northern-eastern-western state starts seeking an identity of its own in the performing arts at a professional level.

There has been plenty of previous interest in drama, opera, dance, symphonic music and jazz. As a matter of fact, the Associated Council of the Arts recently announced that Alaska in 1977 has become the No. 1 state in per capita governmental financial support of the arts ($1.60 per person versus No. 2 New York at $1.57 and No. 50 Wisconsin at 2 cents).

ROBERT FARLEY OF ART

The problem, however, has been that aside from a few amateur groups, inhabitants of the vast, resources-rich frontier until now have depended upon visits by professional organizations from distant places for top-caliber aesthetic stimulation.

The state arts council, with a little cash help from the National Endowment for the Arts, began investigating the prospects for Alaska-based establishments several years ago.

"Otherwise," says Paul Brown, who got involved during the survey and is now ART's producing director, "it was realized the state would keep putting most of its money in imported attractions."

Theater was chosen as having the widest immediate draw, according to Brown. A native of New York, he migrated to Alaska seven years ago at age 24 and took part in development of a civic center for Anchorage. He got the theater assignment in 1975.

ART has been developed via frequent consultations with the Theater Communications Group and the Foundation for Expansion and Development of American Professional Theater, two private agencies that service expanding resident company activities all over the country. Before ART, only one other company, Stage South in Columbia, S.C., had started under sponsorship of a state arts council.

Banner Year For Museums

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

In a storefront museum on New York City's Staten Island, Elaine Schweninger guides 100 schoolchildren a day through an exhibit of Egyptian hieroglyphics, then shows them how to draw their own symbols and paint their faces.

On a Navajo reservation in Tsaile, Ariz., Harry Walters is assembling a display of Indian weavings and a collection of recorded ritual chants for a new $4 million cultural center.

At these and more conventional museums across the nation, interest in art and cultural exhibits is booming. Attendance rose during the Bicentennial year and new museums are springing up while old ones are being enlarged, an informal survey shows.

"Everywhere you look, museums have arrived into the mainstream of American life," says Joe Noble, president of the American Association of Museums.

In Texas, 140 museums are under construction or planned.

At the Charles M. Russell Museum and Gallery in Helena, Mont., "attendance is up so far our girls have lost count," says spokeswoman Dolores Brown.

At the Philadelphia Museum of Art, a Bicentennial exhibition and newly installed airconditioning helped push attendance over the 500,000 mark in eight months. That was higher than the previous 12-month total.

"Where once art museums interested mainly the rich, now if a museum opens in a community it's a cause for great rejoicing – just as public libraries were in the late 19th century," Noble said.

"More people are spending time in museums every year because we're growing more sophisticated as a nation and people have more leisure time," Noble said. He also said he felt educational television has played a significant role in awakening the public to the varieties of art that are available.

"The Bicentennial, of course, generated tremendous awareness of American art," he said, "but the interest extends back to the European masters – and to contemporary art as well."

Spokesman Jim Hunter offers a more prosaic explanation of why this year's attendance at the Toledo, Ohio, Museum of Art has passed 400,000 in a city of 340,000 people.

"More people are taking advantage of things to do close to home, because they can't afford to travel as much as they used to," he said.

Carol Bannerman, editor of the museum association's newsletter, says a "noticeable increase in the number of visits" has occurred during the past year, "despite almost universal increased admission charges."

Ironically, the higher attendance "creates its own problems in a time of severe economic conditions – a demand for additional shows, service and educational programs," she said.

But she said individual and corporate donations to museums, particularly art museums, are also increasing. In a recent survey, she said, 90 per cent of the museums responding reported gains in private memberships.

The Association, headquartered in Washington, says that of the roughly 1,000 art museums in the United States, 44 per cent have annual budgets under $50,000 and 5 per cent have budgets of $1 million or more.

Noble said the museum boom has been aided by a trend among wealthy collectors to give their art works to museums often at considerable tax savings.

The Pasadena, Calif., Museum of Modern Art doubled its attendance to 2,000 a week after industrialist Norton Simon donated his classical art collection – and the name was changed to The Norton Simon Museum of Art.

New Museums are as diverse as the communities they serve.

Actor Harris A Free Spirit

By JAMES MEADE

HOLLYWOOD – Once upon a time, the sun never set upon the British empire. Nor upon English gentlemen either. They were quite likely to pack a dinner jacket in their duffle bags while on their way to civilize the world for king and country.

They have had their counterparts to portray them in the British theater and cinema – soft-spoken actors who remained gentlemen no matter how vindictive their charactrs might become.

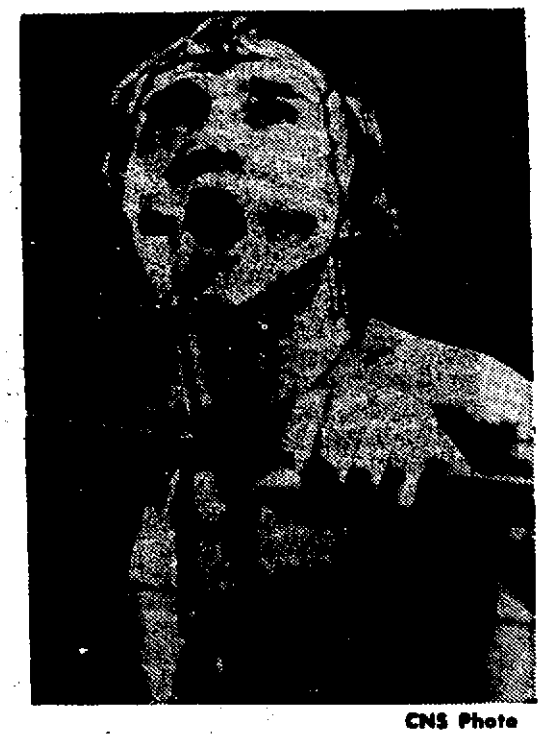
Names spring to mind, such as Noel Coward, Laurence Olivier, Leslie Howard and, recently, Dirk Bogarde and Laurence Harvey. Then, as the sun began to set upon the British empire, new voices were heard.

They were the post-World War II "Any Young Men," led by playwright John Osborne and critic Kenneth Tynan, who spoke for the working class and "kitchen-sink drama."

New names came to the fore, such as Alan Bates, Richard Burton, Albert Finney, Terence Stamp and Richard Harris. They were less gentlemanly, less old school and less inclined to bring drawing-room manners to the theater and screen.

Harris, today's subject, was born in Limerick, Ireland, Oct. 1, 1930. This Irish actor from the British theater first became widely known in the United States in a filmed kitchen-sink drama, "This Sporting Life," even though his previous films had included "The Long, the Short and the Tall," "The Guns of Navarone" and the 1962 remake of "Mutiny on the Bounty."

In 1963's "This Sporting Life," Harris played a tortured rugby player having domestic problems with Rachel Roberts. Uneasy associations with directors Michelangelo Antonioni and Sam Peckinpah followed in "The Red Desert" and "Major Dundee."



Since then Harris has played gentler characters in "Camelot," "The Snow Goose" and "Echoes of a Summer." But it is his image as the rugged John Morgan in "A Man Called Horse" that is most prevalent.

As a sort of latter-day Tarzan, Morgan lived and suffered with American Indians. Now he is back in "The Return of a Man Called Horse," co-starring Gale Sondergaard. And Harris still is plainspoken to the point of being unacceptable in a drawing room where no evil is seen, heard or spoken.

"Come on, interview me," Harris challenges press visitors. "I'll tell you what actors I hate." One is expecting names but gets types.

"What I hate is egotistical power

Lunch is served daily from 11:30 until 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The menu offers many delights that include full luncheons, salads, sandwiches, even diet specialties.

I enjoyed lunch, beginning with a favorite wilted spinach salad (soup or mixed greens are available if you'd rather) — great with the fresh, hot mini loaf of bread. My entree was Dover sole, dipped in egg and toasted bread crumbs, then grilled to a golden color and served with rice pilaf. Others in my party enjoyed the prime rib — served open-faced on sour dough — and the Marco Polo with its delicious combination of ham, turkey, tomatoes and broccoli, topped with a tasty Hollandaise, sitting atop a toasted English muffin.

Many more favorites are available, such as short ribs of beef simmered in a flavorsome sauce served with fries or pilaf. Swiss steak is oven-baked, cooked in its natural juices. Collecting Old Slot Machines A Ticklish Business-Hobby

By ELAINE SMYTH

Bob Strauss is the first to admit that his latest hobby "is a ticklish business all away around."

To begin with, because collecting slot machines was illegal until a few months ago, Strauss and his friend Sue Raffee have been hesitant about showing it off.

And although Nevada is the most logical place one would seek out additions for a slot machine collection, state law forbids it, Strauss says.

"It's illegal for Nevada residents to sell a coin machine to anyone out of state," he says.

Still, somehow, the Stauss collection of slot machines manufactured before 1941 continues to grow.

Stauss is a real estate broker in La Jolla, Calif., and Raffee is an interior designer who specializes in commercial structures.

The slot machine bug bit Stauss about 18 months ago and then it bit Raffee, he said. He completely restores the machines to working order and she has the delicate – and time-consuming – job of painting each one. They now have 14 different machines that range in value from $400 to $1,500.

"Once a year Harrah's in Reno has an auction and prices range from $500 to $11,500," Raffee said.

"I started off collecting antiques," Stauss said. "You know, necessity is the mother of invention.

"Actually, I moved into a house without any furniture.

"At first I bought junk from junk stores and fixed it up, and then I moved on to antiques. I found I had a house full of antiques, so I started to collect some of the things you don't need, like slot machines.

"As soon as people learn they're legal, they'll start coming out of the closets with them," Stauss added.

Until legislation was signed by California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Sept. 15, possession of slot machines was termed a misdemeanor under the state's Penal Code. Owners were subject to questioning by police department vice unit officers, a fine and possible jail sentence.

The new legislation (AB-4173), which became effective the day Brown signed it, was specifically designed to protect the collection and restoration of antique slot machines (those manufactured prior to 1941) "because of their aesthetic interest and importance in California history."

Stauss and Raffee have delved into the history of slot machines, which were invented in San Francisco in 1895 by Charles Fey. They think.

"There's some question on this because you can't patent gambling devices and because of that, people started stealing each other's ideas," Stauss said.

Stauss said his research indicates Fey didn't sell his slot machines. Instead, he placed them in bars, nightclubs, restaurants, grocery stores – wherever he could. Fey and the shop owners shared in the profits.

The arrangement apparently worked fine until a man from Chicago came to San Francisco, hired Fey's plant foreman and brought him back to Chicago where the Chicagoan began manufacturing slot machines under his own name.

Then, in the 1930s when slot machines began to be classified as illegal in some states, owners resorted to tampering with them to change their legal status as gambling devices, Stauss said.

Some slot machines became music boxes "and it was just an extra bonus if you got some money from them when you put money in them to hear the music," he added.

Each time law enforcement officials closed a loophole in the law against the machines, owners devised still new ways to change their character.

Some put skill buttons on the windows and called them skill machines, and other owners installed fortune-telling devices on the machines to get around the law.

"People tried every loophole in the world to make them legal and the law repeatedly came back and closed those loopholes," said Stauss.

Slot machines became illegal in every state except Nevada following World War II, he added.

CRACKER CRUMBS

Producer Howard Hughes Wanted Real War For His 'Hell's Angels'

By HARRY GRAHAM
Register Staff Writer

The model airplane crashed into the side of the dirigible, and both exploded. Or so it seemed.

We saw a red flash and heard the blast as debris showered onto the floor in front of the stage.

Barney Korn was showing Cross and Cockade members and their guests how some of the crash scenes had been rigged for the filming of Howard Hughes' "Hell's Angels" 50 years ago.

The Hollywood special effects technician said the multi-millionaire director-producer of the World War I air battle epic had bought up more than 50 warplanes to use in its filming.

Hughes wanted his air war to be real, but the crashing of the plane into the side of the dirigible was among several scenes in which it was necessary to use models.

Only in his early 20s when he began the picture, which was three years in the making, Hughes wanted it to be the greatest movie ever made.

It wasn't even close.

But it was the greatest movie ever made about World War I air warfare, says Cal State Fullerton aerial history instructor George Holmes, who was my host at the Redondo Beach meeting of World War I air historians.

Korn, a tiny man in his 70s, agreed with Holmes' observation about the film. He used slides of still shots made during "Hell's Angels" filming to complement his working model in illustrating how the battle scenes were staged.

After he had finished, the uncut picture was shown. The film itself had deteriorated badly and the sound was poor most of the way through, but I found it worth sitting through.

Jean Harlow, Ben Lyon and James Hall were billed as the stars, but Holmes said he thought the World War I planes and their pilots were the real stars.

I'd seen the flick in 1931, when I was 13 years old, and had forgotten most of it.

But when the ghostly German dirigible slithered through the clouds to bomb London I shivered, just as I probably had done 46 years ago.

I'd never forgotten how the observer who had been lowered by cable from the dirigible was cut loose when the commander needed to lighten the load to elude the British planes.

Following the young officer to his death were half a dozen other Germans who were ordered to jump "for the Fatherland."

Then the British pilot dived his plane into the dirigible, and the airship burned dramatically as it slowly floated earthward.

Korn said the studio cameras had been raised slowly as the 28-foot-long model dirigible burned, creating an illusion that the airship was falling.

The screen flared into a brilliant red as the dirigible was consumed by flames. Hughes had achieved this effect by using a red film strip back in the days before color film had been perfected.

The aerial dogfights were magnificent. The World War I planes roared across the skies whittling each other to ribbons with blazing machine guns.

Three men lost their lives in plane crashes during the making of the picture.

Max Holtzem, a German pilot during World War I and a member of the Cross and Cockade, pointed out a tactical error in the movie. Von Richtofen's squadron had made a V formation to attack the Allies.

"We didn't fly in a V at that time," said Holtzem. "That came later."

I found I had made an error in stories I had written about Costa Mesan Stan Dunn's invention of a film bullet for "Hell's Angels" that gave the illusion of having made a hole in a man.

Dunn, who was property master during the filming of the movie, had used a sponge rubber bullet saturated in red glycerin for the death scene when Hughes demanded realism.

I wrote that the bullet plowed into Lyon's chest. I was wrong. It hit him in the back, making what appeared to be a bloody hole.

It seemed as real as Korn's dirigible crash.

Far Out Is In Style Today

By SALLY C. ESTES

Now that NASA's Viking probes have landed on Mars, scooped up surface particles for analysis, and determined that they grabbed no living matter – what next?

Science fiction writers have explored several schools of thought on exactly what to do with a planet uninhabitable by human beings. Frederik Pohl deals with one possibility in his intense, provocative novel, "Man Plus." A secret U. S. project is preparing astronauts to live on Mars without external artificial aids by reshaping the human body through surgery and technology.

Astronaut Roger Torraway finds himself on the firming line when the first "Bionic Man" dies in training shortly before the target date, a date set by the President in order to win the race to colonize Mars and preserve peace on earth. Roger must quickly accept the inevitable – that some of his flesh is going to be replaced by steel, cooper, silver, plastic, aluminum, and glass.

The team takes Roger apart and puts him back together with motor-driven muscles, a revised nervous sytem, new mecanical eyes, artifial skin, solar panel wings to protect him from radiation, and more – until in human eyes, including those of his wife, he appears a monster.

Mars through Roger's eyes is a very real place and also the scene of an ironic twist, only hinted at earlier in the story.

Larry Niven takes us even further afield, in both space and time, in his rambling, almost two-part novel, "A World Out of Time."

Jaybee Corbell, a "corpsicle" frozen since 1970, is revived in the 21st century to discover he has absolutely no choice – either he'll be a starship pilot for the state or his personality will be erased and his body recycled.

Two weeks of intensive training and injections of memory RNA prepare him for his task. On the far side of Jupiter, he decides to alter the starship's course so he can explore the galactic hub on his own. In the far reaches of space, he skirts a black hole that thrusts him three million years into the future and within reach of earth.

Most of the story involves Corbell's adventures on a vastly changed earth where the sparse population consists of mutants – products of genetic experimentation eons earlier.

This humankind in the future borders on extinction, until Corbell becoms a catalyst for change – in a sometimes confusing but still intriguing story.

Earth in the 21st century is the setting for Robert Silverberg's intricate, involving and enjoyable tale, "Shadrach in the Furnace."

Genghis II Mao IV Khan, wily tyrant of the reconstituted world, is about 87 years old. Because he wants to postpone death indefinitely, his body is a mass of artificial and transplanted organs. Charged with safeguarding the Khan's precious life is Dr. Shadrach Mordecai, whose own body contains surgically implanted "perceptor nodes" to constantly monitor the Khan's vital signs.

But the Khan knows that this patchwork surgery can't go on forever, so he has scientists working on surer methods of prolonging his life. The most promising involves inserting his own mind and soul into the body of a younger, handsome and healthy man.

When the trim, muscular body of his physician catches the Khan's eye, Shadrach's friends urge him to flee. But Shadrach decides to stay, to try to outfox the Khan and to initiate social reform across the land.

Ray Bradbury's many fans will welcome "Long After Midnight," his first collection of short stories in seven years – although only a few of the 22 selections can be classified as science fiction. The poignant title story focuses on the conversation of the police ambulance crew who pick up a suicide victim in the hours before sunrise. Some of these stories are very real; some very fanciful – all bear the unique Bradbury mark.

Traffic Violators

A county judge in Wisconsin says that when traffic violators appear before him the first thing they want to know is whether their names will appear in a newspaper.

The second thing they want to know, reports the National Automobile Club, is the number of points of the violation. Wisconsin has a point system toward removal of drivers' licenses.

The third thing they want to know is the amount of the fine.

'Bubbles' Charming Story By Bev

BUBBLES: A SELF-PORTRAIT. By Beverly Sills. Bobbs-Merrill. 240 Pages. $12.50.

"I have always been a kind of fatalist," Beverly Sills observes deep in this charming memoir. "I firmly believe that what's going to happen to any of us is already written down in a great big book. Someone up there looked down one day, pointed a long finger at me and said: 'That one is going to be a singer with very high notes.' I like that notion."

So must anyone who has ever had the privilege to listen to and to watch Miss Sills as she dominates the stage. Yes, she is a singer, and, yes, she has very high notes. And what she does with this fantastic gift of hers sticks in the mind – and ears – long after the curtain has come down for the last time and the final round of thunderous applause has trickled into silence.

It was not always so. Which is the purpose of Miss Sills' funny, sad, but always engrossing book. Starting off with "When I was only three, and still named Belle Miriam Silverman," Miss Sills takes the reader on a captivating tour of her life – a highly personal story but as warm and human as the opera superstar herself.

Miss Sills, encouraged by her family, developed a love for opera early. But it was to be years before she was to rise to the top in her chosen profession. First there was the rather roundabout entry into show business via such vehicles as appearances on Major Bowes Amateur Hour on radio, some singing on a local radio show called "Uncle Bob's Rainbow Hour," being the voice of a soap on radio commercials, before the breaks started coming her way.

Step by step, Miss Sills details her climb to the very top in the world of opera and a fine story it is, full of anecdotes and very human remembrances. As an added bonus, the book contains many photos both in color and black-and-white.

Erskine Caldwell Slowing Down - 1 Book In 2 Years

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) – Erskine Caldwell thinks it's time to slow down. He used to write a book in a year. Now, he figures he'll take two to do the job.

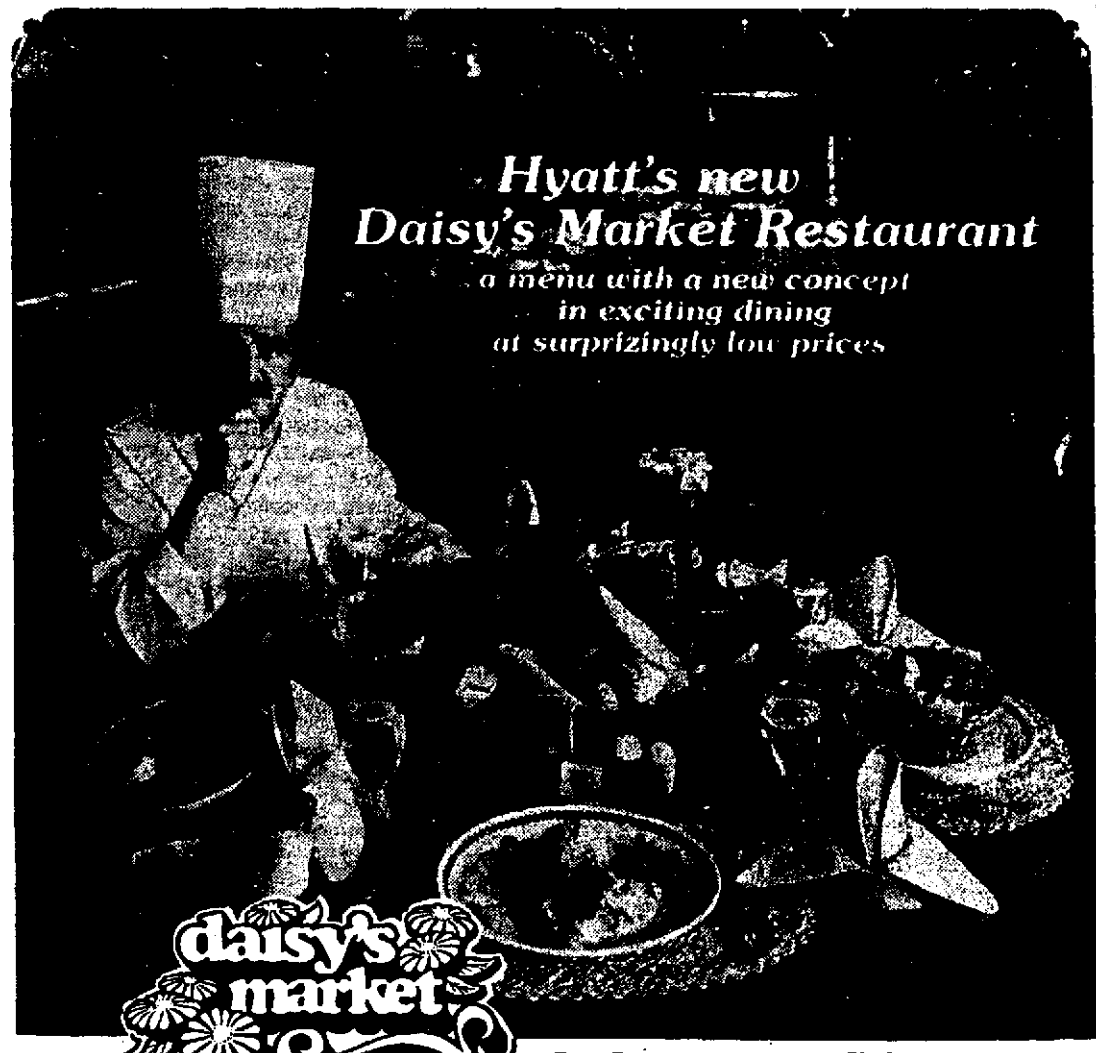
At 73, the tall, lean Caldwell – best known for his two early novels, "Tobacco Road" and "God's Little Acre," and a book of interrelated stories, "Georgia Boy" – says:

"When you're young you are in a great hurry. You want to do everything right now. But as you get older you tend to become more contemplative, more mature. So you slow down."

Caldwell recently published his 51st book, "Afternoons In Mid-America," and he has no immediate plans to do another.

"I'm not writing anything right now," he says, with a smile. "In fact, I don't want to think about writing. You have to put a book out of your head first before you can start another and this last one is still very close to me. It takes time before you can think of anything else."

Caldwell spent "two long summers" driving from Arkansas to Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma to obtain the material he needed to write "Afternoons In Mid-America."



"It was an ambition I'd had for a long time," he says. "As a boy I lived on the Mississippi River, and I always wanted to find out what was on the other side. I never had a chance as a boy to explore that other side. In later years I passed a lot through that territory – the area covered is essentially the original territory of the Louisiana Purchase – but I never had a chance to really look at it, to study it.

"So about two years ago I figured the time had come, now was the time. And I set out. I was looking to see what kind of people lived there, who they were, what they did, and what they liked, and what they disliked. It was a venture in observation as well as into the personal impressions I would get. And I was impressed by that country. It's a very important part of America."

Museums As Harbingers Of Culture

which opened Oct. 3, was sought by residents who "think of going to the city as a big production and wanted their kids to have easy access to art," said Mrs. Schweninger, program director.

Operating on a $130,000 budget from foundation grants, the museum borrowed hieroglyphics from New York's Metropolitan Museum for its first exhibit, and aims at getting children to respond actively to what they see.

"After they look at the hierglyphics, we have an easel where they write their own symbols and, occasionally, dirty words," Mrs. Schweninger said. "There's another section where they can decorate their faces."

On the campus of the Navajo Community College in northeastern Arizona, Museum curator Walters has two floors of the Ned A. Hatahli Cultural Center to fill with indian artifacts.

The museum is part of what Mrs. Bannerman calls a "trend of ethnic groups responding to a lack of correct handling of their culture."

It opens in February with an exhibit of weavings lent by the University of New Mexico and a "Chant Room" where visitors can listen to tapes and records of war cries and other tribal chants.

In Texas, an unprecedented wave of museum fever sparked plans for 140 new museums in addition to the present 350. That's too many, says Cindy Sherrell, director of the museum services division for the Texas Historical Society. Most of the new ones specialize in local history, but 20 are primarily for display of painting and sculpture, she said.

"We're going through a great nostalgic era," she said, "Once a town starts a museum, you get the old American competitiveness where another town 30 miles away has to have one too."

For example, she said, in Yorktown, a south-central Texas community of 2,723 persons, "somebody donated two buildings, they raised $65,000 and now they have a museum."

Mrs. Sherrell said she "tries to discourage" museum projects in communities that may be unable to support them once the initial private contributions have disappeared.

"I'm afraid more than 20 per cent of the new art museums will be closed within a few years," she said. "Most of them are relying on traveling exhibitions, and they just don't have the funds for local paintings."

Other areas of the South besides Texas also are experiencing rapid cultural growth.

Atlanta's High Museum of Art keeps no precise attendance figures, but it reports steadily rising attendance as "we've had more and more exhibits and we've added two new galleries," a spokeswoman said. "We're growing with the city."

In Birmingham, Ala., the 17 year old Museum of Art is getting 1,500 more visitors a month than last year, when total attendance was 85,000. A new wing has expanded floor space from 68,000 to 88,000 square feet. And the museum recently presented the largest show ever in this country of the work of Israeli sculptor Yaacv Agam.

"It's really astonishing when you realize that 25 years ago there was not even a museum here," said director John Farmer.

One of the few museums reporting a major attendance decline is the Detroit Institute of Arts, where economic troubles forced a shutdown a year and a half ago. Three weeks later it reopened, but for only five days a week instead of six, and with a donation requested at the door.

Attendance this year is down 45 per cent, from 555,000 to 300,000 and officials say part of the reason is lingering public confusion about whether the museum is open at all.

Noble, who besides heading the national association is director of the Museum of the City of New York, said museums are "already beginning to come out of their budget crises. The arts always operate about a year behind the rest of the economy.

"But even with money scarce, art has kept its new place in American life. This was really brought home to me at a print shop in Oklahoma City," Noble said. "There they were selling good prints, everything from Georgia O'Keefe to Andrew Wyeth to abstract expressionists.

"The farmer's wife is no longer content to clip the cover of the Saturday evening Post."

Alaska's Arty Aspirations

Ready to go at last, Robert Farley, a 30-year-old native of St. Louis with wide experience in a number of leading groups, came aboard as artistic director. Actor auditions in New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco corralled a nucleus of trained talent to round out home-grown performers.

"We proved a curiosity beyond what I'd thought possible," says Farley of the 500 members of Equity who tried out for parts. "Some of them told me they just wanted to see what Alaska looked like."

After only six months up there himself, the artistic director still is awed by the state's size – "it stretches as wide as going from Savannah to San Diego."

Although most of the first season – "Private Lives" and "Clarence Darrow" are the other shows – will be in Anchorage, both the directors and the arts council want ART to function statewide, with engagements widening past Fairbanks to Ketchikan, Sitka and other communities which have shown interest.

ART already has taken over an "actors-in-the-school" program which the council initiated six years ago. Richard Clairmont is the one-man troupe this year working with pupils in nine communities that include Nome, Wainwright and Eskimo communities above the Arctic Circle.

"Getting youngsters interested is very important for future audience development," Farley points out.

High on priorities, too, is an apprentice program so that casting eventually may be all-Alaskan.

The operating budget for the first season is a modest $300,000, but at an $8.50 ticket top Brown expects that only one-third will come from the boxoffice. The Anchorage area, the state's commercial hub, has a population of about 200,000.

The legislature this year doubled ART support to $60,000, and the Anchorage municipal council has posted $55,000.

Brown and Farley on visits to New York reported enthusiastic community support for the venture. Curtain Raisers is a volunteer service organization growing rapidly under the supervision of Joan Saxton, who finds "large doses of fun and personal satisfaction."

Mrs. Saxton is not the only woman playing an important part in ART's genesis. Head of the state arts council is Jean Mackin. Her interest traces back to radio acting during childhood and involvement in Minneapolis with the community campaign that resulted in the renowned Guthrie Theater.

Another activist is Pamela Towill, a native of England who went to Anchorage because her husband is an oil company executive. Now she chairs the theater's 12-member board of directors.

No. Sumerset is a soap opera that has been rinsed away – NBC cancelled it.

DEAR DICK: In movie, "Imitation of Life," with Lana Turner and Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., can you please tell me who played the daughter of the black maid? We have a difference of opinion and would like you to settle it. MARY ANN EMS, Levittown, Pa.

In the first place, Zimbalist wasn't in that one. John Gavin was Lana's leading man. But to your question – that part was played by Susan Kohner.

DEAR DICK: I am a great fan of John Denver. Do you know that jacket that John is wearing on the cover of his album, "Spirit"? I wonder where he got it and how much? KATHY SMITH, Tucson, Ariz.

That's a one of a kind jacket. It was handmade for him by another one of his great fans, who sent it to him and he loves it.

More On Harris

plays. For example, just before I went down on location, I was in the Beverly Hills Hotel, and I met this actor, a very big star.

"He invited me for a drink and against my better judgment, I accepted. Right off, he starts bemoaning about a whole career of commercial parts, how his last picture, which grossed some $10 million, was trash. He said he did it because his wife needed money to feel secure.

"I had to leave at that moment," Harris continued. "He had wanted to be rich, wanted people to recognize him behind the sunglassas on the street. He's gotten what he wanted. Now in his 40s, he's complaining about never having played Hamlet, and blaming everyone except himself, even his wife.

"I hate that kind of dishonesty. I have no desire to be worth $20 million. I wasn't raised that way.

"As long as I can live comfortably, I don't care about the rest."

Harris has been living comfortably in the Bahamas where he has a home. But even there he does not remain the quiet-spoken gentleman. He wrote a letter to an editor about his support of Ireland's right to free itself of British rule just as the British prime minister visited the Bahamas.

"It wasn't an emotional diatribe," Harris said, "but an objective statement on the British government's unwillingness to stop the slaughter in Northern Ireland, except on their own terms.

"Apparently it caused a stir because when Queen Elizabeth was due for a visit, the Bahamian prime minister politely asked me to leave the island – for a while. He told me how bloody lovely it was having me reside there and all, but would I please get lost for a while – take a holiday or something.

"I told him I was leaving anyway to film 'Return of a Man Called Horse' in Mexico."

Harris, who usually portrays rebels and has acted the part in real life, said his own bouts with the devil have quieted to a small roar.

"I've calmed down, gave up drinking, and have absolutely no vices left except smoking three or four packs of cigarettes a day – oh, and politicis," Harris said.

Cliff Robertson 'Hyphenating'

By LUCRETIA STEIGER

HOLLYWOOD – The man in the dark blue suit loosened his blue polka-dot tie, then the top button of his white shirt. He slouched back in the chair, tapping his fingers restlessly on the table before him.

Glancing around, actor Cliff Robertson was at it again.

He was acting, pretending that he's still the newspaperman he once was, still in search of the big story, still the hard-bitten, heavy-drinking, questing reporter about whom all the plays are written.

And then he relaxed and talked about his marriage to actress Dina Merrill, their 8-year-old daughter, Heather, their apartment in New York and the beachfront adobe house in La Jolla, Calif., and his new movie "Obsessión."

Chameleon-like, Robertson projects the part that he is participating in at the moment. Now reporter, now editor, now actor, now Robertson. He also is an observant man with gray streaks in his hair who later talks about "Hollywood types."

The fact that he's made 33 movies, from portraying John F. Kennedy in "PT 109" to winning an Oscar for "Charly," a film he wrote, directed and believed in for seven years before production, doesn't seem to apply.

"Now I'm what they call a 'hyphen,' a writer-director-actor.

"It works, because when you're writing a film, you're living with it. And then if you're a director, you lead your actors into the mind of the writer," Robertson said in an interview.

For an actor to develop as a director-writer, Robertson said, means developing "the technical third eye," which he managed to do by shooting a television tape right alongside the movie film, then editing and redoing scenes as necessary.

"Ideally, the filmmaker needs the objective eye, because he's now representing the people. The ultimate critic is the film audience.

"You know," he said, settling back in his chair, "life seems to be a series of plateaus. After I had been acting about five years, I knew it all.

"Then after 15 years, I knew I had to say, 'Wait a minute, you don't know this or that.'

"Now, after 20 years, I'm convinced I know nothing. But the young sophomoric actor has all the answers."

He doesn't need to get away to relax from filmmaking, Robertson said – although he does enjoy tennis – because "being intensely involved in something you love is a form of inner peace." He does like to visit different parts of America.

"I get thinking 'let's evaluate,' and then I like to go to Kansas or some other region and see what's going on. Sometimes that's scouting for movie locations, but not always.

"I'm a pilot and fly my own plane. I have this business of renting old airplanes to movies and television for commercials, for example.

"I have four old biplanes, English and French, and a World War II Spitfire Mark 9, and a Messerschmitt-108 which I keep at Santa Paula, Calif.

"But I fly a Beechcraft Baron. I used to balloon, but when I married Dina 10 years ago I gave up ballooning. I also threw away my little black book.

"My wife and I have worked together six or seven times and I've written a role for her in a screenplay I'm working on. But I hope it won't take as long as 'Charly.' "

He believed in that film, for which he won an Academy Award, for seven years before getting it produced, Robertson said. "I believed that it was an unusual, human and compassionate story, a story that needed to be told. It gave me great personal gratification."

Avoiding what he calls "dystrophy of the head" is one of his main projects in Hollywood, Robertson said, and he feels that he's a private person as well as an actor.

"I like to walk around in casual clothes and meld into the crowd. Of course, you can do that easier in New York than in Hollywood. In Hollywood, there is the concept, particularly among some of the agents who go around like star-spangled dudes, that the American public expects movie stars.

"So they put their royal rainment on, cruise in their Ferrari convertibles and let the fortunate throngs gaze upon their eminence. Some of them love this, but I find it hogwash."

Big Brothers To Nickelodeons

By REX DALTON

LOS ANGELES – To Dick Carty they are more than nickelodeons, they are orchestrions, instruments of precision; and constructing and restoring them is his life.

In addition to restoring old orchestrions and player pianos, he also collects antique phonographs, builds new orchestrions, has initiated the development of a cassette converter kit for player pianos and is involved in the constructionof an unmatched line of player pianos.

What started as a hobby in the early 1950s for Carty, has become both a livelihood and a passion.

Carty's shop is a maze of pianos of every vintage and style in various states of repair.

He directs a business concern that services orchestrions and player pianos worldwide, while developing new systems to spread the joy of what he considers a dying art.

Pointing out the finer degrees of his pneumatic machines, he says, "For years after they had been made obsolete by electrical components, player pianos and orchestrions were eyesores around homes.

"People in the East cut them up and used them for firewood, just to get them out of the house.

"Their value has increased with the current acceptability of antiques; but what I want to do is insure the older ones are restored properly and enlighten people with new ones.

"To the best of my knowledge," Carty says, "no one is building new orchestrions except me."

Orchestrions are player pianos which in addition to the piano keyboard have various percussion instruments connected to the pneumatic system.

He is putting the finishing touches on the sixth orchestrion in the series of 11 he is building.

The other instruments within the raised-back portion of the upright piano include wood blocks, a triangle, a cymbal, a xylophone and a snare and bass drum.

When the orchestrions are plugged in, an electric pump, similar to a vacuum cleaner pump, develops a suction within the labyrinth of hoses which are connected to the bellows on various instruments and keys.

As the player roll turns, spaces on the roll activate an air control system causing the bellows connected to keys, wood blocks or drums to close, resulting in the desired note or notes.

Orchestrions were developed from player pianos around World War I.

The various instruments within his shop represent a chronology of pneumatic pianos.

While he owns many of them, most are shipped to him to rebuild.

Roaming around his shop, Carty discussed the background of a varied assortment of antique pianos.

Carty is involved with two separate projects which he says he hopes will allow a larger segment of the population to enjoy the pleasure of player pianos. While he doesn't sell his orchestrions, which are on display in amusement areas like the Disneyland Hotel and are available to rent, he does have a commercial aspect to his art.

"We started the engineering of components here in the shop to develop a cassette converter kit for upright Ampico player pianos," he says.

"I still own a third in the company, International Music Industries, Inc., that makes them, but the other two partners, who put the finishing touches on the kit, market and make it.

"The cassette fulfills the function of the roll, allowing a wider variety of tunes.

"I am also involved in a firm, Universal Piano Co., that is building 250 new player pianos, which will be constructed of the finest parts money can buy.

"When we get done, not one more dollar could be spent on these machines to make them any better."

Your Pet's Health

By H.P. JANS, D.V.M.

Q. I want to purchase an AKC white female toy poodle. So far I've been unable to locate one. The local pet store gave me names of two breeders. One had no white ones, and the other one didn't impress me but had a 2-week-old white one. She asked $150 or $200, which I would pay if I was sure of getting a good dog. But no one could tell me at 2 weeks. I've been studying library books on poodles and have learned what to look for. My question is, where do I locate a dog of my choice? — Mrs. T. D., Orange, Calif.

A. There are many poodles available, many of them with major medical problems.

To assure yourself of a healthy dog, do not make any purchase without having the pup checked by a veterinarian. To find available animals, you may check for breeders in major dog magazines such as Dog World or AKC Journal. You may also call veterinary hospitals in your area.

Q. At times our 7-year-old male poodle will wet on furniture and walls but not all the time. We have found the wet spots but have not caught him in the act. Still, we have rubbed his nose in it and spanked him. Do you have any idea how we can break him of this habit? — Mrs. H. G., London, Ohio

A. Your dog is merely establishing his territory on the walls and furniture.

If this is intermittent, it may be associated with some stress in his environment, such as a new animal or person. Punishment will not solve this problem. If it is some stressful situation, you may try reassuring him by spending some time in positive reinforcement like training to do a new trick, or even an old trick such as fetching or sitting up.

If this fails, castration will solve 90 per cent of the wetting problem. See your veterinarian for a discussion of its benefits.

Q. Why do I have to spend hundreds of dollars running to a vet for itches my poor dog has? The only medicine that veterinarians have anymore makes the dog dopey so he doesn't notice the itch. Until a few years ago there were prednisolone products available at pet stores which stopped these itches within 72 hours.

And without side-effects. Then the so-called "Pure Food and Drug" Administration took those off the market. — Mrs. H.P., Tacoma, Wash.

A. The Food and Drug Administration rules are designed to protect the public. Medications that contain prednisolone are very beneficial under the proper conditions, but these same medications when used in the wrong instance can make a minor problem flare into a major one. Because of this, the FDA feels that it is always wise to use prednisolone under a doctor's care. This drug is commonly avaiable in veterinary hospitals and does not usually make the animals drowsy. For further information in this regard, your veterinarian should be consulted.

INDIO – Many people will be coming by groups in chartered buses to the 1977 National Date Festival opening Friday, Feb. 18, for its 10-day run through Sunday, Feb. 27, at the Indio fairgrounds.

Already nearly 200 organized groups have indicated they will be traveling to the festival in chartered buses.

As in the past, many of the buses will be bringing senior citizen groups for the three Senior Citizen Days scheduled for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 22-23-24, with special entertainment booked for these days.

Major daily events at the Date Festival will be the afternoon National Horse Show featuring the popular camel and elephant races, the free evening performances of the new Arabian Nights Pageant outdoor musical production and many other special entertainment features, plus hundreds of exhibits.

Discount admission tickets are available to groups coming by bus or as organized groups of ten or more persons. Buses will be parked free of charge near main entrance gates.

For information and brochures listing major features and entertainment write: Betty Howard, Tour Director, National Date Festival, P.O. Drawer NNNN, Indio, Calif. 92201.

When making your exposure (especially at night) and shooting with the star filter, use the same setting you would normally use for a night shot and let the star filter take care of itself.

It is possible to use the star filter in daylight, using it to create a star effect on a point reflection such as the sun on a car bumper or reflection on the surface of water. Again, check your viewfinder to see what kind of effect you are getting before making the final exposure.

Remember, you will be shooting into a bright reflection so be sure of the exposure. Beware of exposing only for the highlight and the star, because the rest will go black.

Jerry Windle will answer questions of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of Sunday Department, The San Diego Union, P.O. Box 191, San Diego, CA 92112.

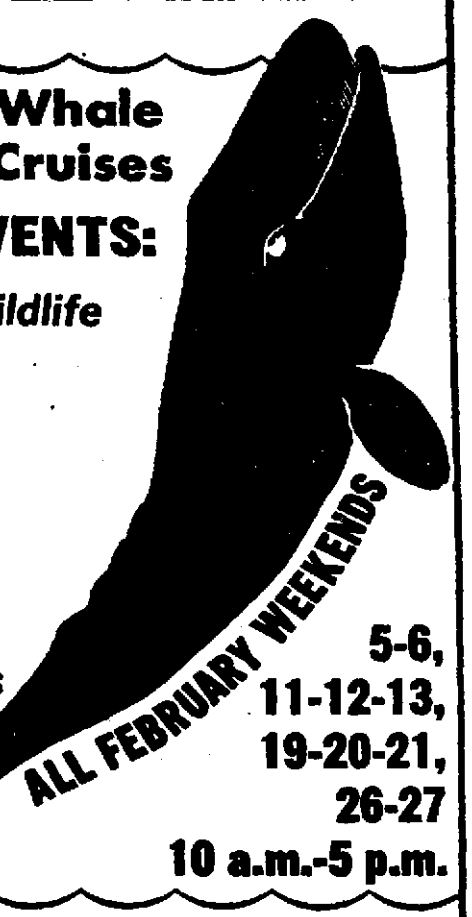
Have Leaks Checked

With a half-dozen fluids affecting the safety and dependability of your car, a leak can mean trouble.

One way to find out if a leak is serious, explains the National Automobile Club, is to slide a newspaper under the area of your car where you've discovered the leak. Leave the newspaper there overnight.



The next day take the newspaper to your mechanic. After examining the fluid, he will probably be able to tell you if the leak is coming from your car's transmission, engine, radiator, brakes, power steering, rear axle, or gas tank.

Orange County and the nation lost a good friend and prominent numismatist on January 8 when Gordon Greene passed away. Gordon held major offices in many numismatic organizations. He was the past president of state and city clubs and was serving as the Executive Director of the Numismatic Literary Guild which is regarded by many as a major prestige numismatic organization.

Gordon's help to the hobby was well-known. Those who knew Gordon also were aware of his many attentions given to helping beginners. He displayed his famous Lincolnia collection and was always there to answer questions.

The hobby will miss Gordon and his legion of friends can only bow their heads in memory of one who has left us much the better for having known him.

Recent columns indicating the possibility that the cent would be replaced resulted in mail from readers stressing the desire for the retention of our Lincoln cent. Many stated that the cent is used to buy a fraction of a gallon of gas, a fraction of an ounce of meat, etc. But the logic behind the elimination of the cent as quoted by outgoing Sectetary of Treasury William Simon is that the elimination of the cent will not add significantly to inflation. He stressed that items such as groceries could still be priced in units between one and five cents and rounding of the total would only be required on the final amount. The cost of the cent will be more than its face value in 1980 and some solution must be found.

(Incidentally, not a single reader sent a list of items which could be purchased for one cent.)

Simon also asked for the elimination of the half-dollar and reduction in the size of the dollar coin. His report emphasized that both coins are rarely used and two quarters substitute for the half-dollar while a paper dollar could be used instead of the Eisenhowers. The vending machine industry desires a new and smaller dollar because the problems of inflation make it obvious that the dollar coin has a future.

What does this mean to the coin collector? If the politicians have their way and replace the cent with a two-cent piece and/or eliminate the half-dollar, interest will quickly move to both denominations by hobbyists. This is a good time to select the best coins possible from circulation "just in case'.

Incidentally, the Lincoln cents are already receiving added attention and prices for uncirculated coins (especially the low mintage ones) are starting to rise. Surprisingly, the Indianhead cents, which are only available from coin dealers and fellow collectors, continue to be in demand and even the common dates(those made from 1900 to 1909 with the exception of the S-marked cents) are rising in price.

The interest that seemed to be making the Eisenhower dollars more valuable appears to have slackened somewhat but collectors visiting Las Vegas and

STAMPS

By SYD KRONISH

The first of the much heralded Silver Jubilee stamps commemorating the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the throne will be issued by Bermuda on Feb. 7. Bermuda has announced three special stamps for this royal celebration. The full color set of three will be in denominations of five cents, 20 cents and one dollar.

The five-center will feature the Queen during her state visit to Bermuda in February 1975. She is seen admiring the panoramic view from Gibb's Hill. This spot is now known as "Queen's View" in honor of Her Majesty's visit.

The 20-cent stamp bears the great gold crown known as King Edward's Crown. It contains some 440 precious and semi-precious stones weighing nearly five pounds. The original crown is believed to have been that of Edward the Confessor (reigned 1042-1066) but was dismantled in 1649. However, its name and traditions live in the crown shown on the stamp which was made for Charles II and has been used in every coronation ceremony since that time.

The one-dollar adhesive illustrates the Queen in her "Chair of Estate" in Westminster Abbey. She is seen surrounded by the Bishops of Durham, Bath and Wells, plus her Maids of Honor.

Coin collectors will be interested to know that the 1907 Indian Head $20 gold pattern coin, valued at one million dollars by its current owner, is on public display at the Old Mint Museum in San Francisco. It is on loan to the museum for six months in celebration of the completion of the restoration of the Old Mint, a national landmark building.

There is much mystery attached to this piece. It was commissioned by President Theodore Roosevelt, who rejected the design in favor of the standing Liberty fi-

Things Are Booming, But Dry

On Hawaii's Island State, Maui

BY ANN TERRILL

Spouting whales, dancing porpoises and deep blue water are highlights of a trip aboard one of Seaflite's jet powered hydrofoils in the island waters of Hawaii.

Just back from sampling a two and half hour trip on the hydrofoil from Maui to Honolulu, it is hard to overlook this method of travel between the major islands, and easy to recommend as something new and different.

We nearly lost our power a number of times as strong swells near Oahu offered less than the smooth sea conditions such boats demand. This two-decker vessel was making a shuttle run between Hilo, on the big island of Hawaii, from Lahaina to Maui, Oahu (Honolulu) and Kauai. On the way from Lahaina to Honolulu, you see a goodly portion of Lanai, the Dole Pineapple island, and Molokai, which is gaining in tourism these days.

The little island of Kahoolawe, which is directly opposite the resort zone of Maui with its densely built up coastline, is currently the center of controversy in Hawaii. The U.S. government uses it for a bombing target practice site, and has for many years. Many Hawaiians want this stopped. The small island has no water of its own, and any resort development would be costly.

Meanwhile, Hawaii is suffering from the worst drought in its history. Maui is turning brown, and the famed Seven Sacred Pools near Hano were jokingly referred to as the Seven Stagnant Pools during a recent press meeting on Maui.

The big island of Hawaii is undergoing a set-back in tourism, and hotels and other tourist facilities are underbooked at the present time.

Meanwhile, a recent meeting on tourism held in Honolulu emphasized the fact that tourism is bread and butter to Hawaii and that it must be promoted.

Maui, of all the lovely isles, seems to be riding high. With more than one million visitors last year, the island state is currently focusing on the development of a plush and well planned resort at Wailea. Alexander and Baldwin are developers of the facility which will include at least three hotels, apartments, condominiums, stores, clubs and so forth. Seven thousand persons will be expected to inhabit the town when finished. Prices for condominiums will range from $60 thousand up.

Down the road a Japanese development company is planning a similar resort, to house at least six thousand persons, though wild figures are running as high as 60,000. The two planned communities will occupy a site at the foot of inactive volcano Mt. Haleakala. These should do much to provide more accommodations for the popular vacation island. Further to the southwest, scores of hotels, motels, apartments, luxury resorts and private homes line the shore, and a new resort is currently under construction almost halfway around the western portion of the island.

Under unique pricing and leasing/selling systems one needn't be a millionaire to vacation in a nice condominium on Maui these days. And there is plenty to see and do here and on neighboring islands.

During the next few weeks Leisuretime will cover some of the high spots about enjoying life in Hawaii.

Keep Your Skis On

Wear your skis and keep to the side of the trail or slope, advises the National Automobile Club, when you're walking or climbing in a ski area.

Caldwell Winding Down His Writing?

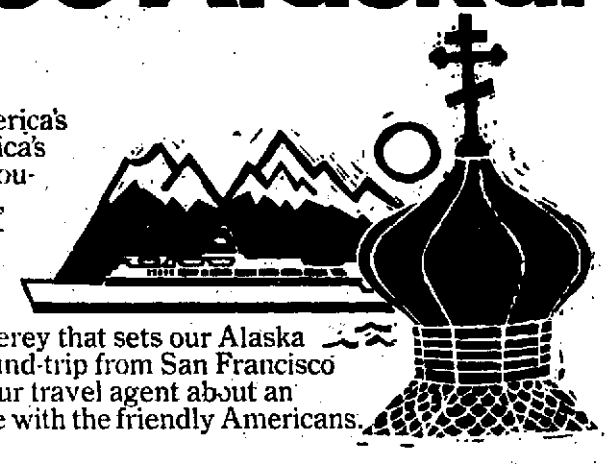
Caldwell has traveled much during his life. He was born in Georgia – "very close to where Jimmy Carter lives" – where his father served as a minister. "My father went from one church to another," he recalls, "and so my family moved all over the South. I lived everywhere down there."

In later years, he lived in Maine, Connecticut, Arizona, California, served as a war correspondent stationed in Russia during World War II and currently lives in Dunedin, Fla. "I've been in Florida six years," he laughs. "Maybe it's about time to move again."

After working as a newspaperman in his youth, he decided to write stories and books and moved from Georgia to Maine. "I gave up newspapering because I wanted to try writing fulltime, and I'm still trying. When I got to Maine it was during the Depression. It was hard but I raised potatoes and things and I also reviewed books. When I finished the books I sold them for cash and that gave me enough money to live on."

Caldwell published a couple of novelettes and a book of short stories before "Tobacco Road" – a realistic study of poor sharecroppers in the South – appeared in 1932.



"That book gave me enough to live on, but it was not a bestseller at the time. It was published during the Depression and people had no money to buy books in those days. But after it was made into a stage play – it ran for over seven years on Broadway – the book kept on selling and I still get royalties from it."

Caldwell says he "had trouble with the censors" with both "Tobacco Road" and "God's Little Acre." "They were banned across the country," he recalls, "but as the years passed the banning finally came off. The banning never really bothered me. I thought it was just part of being a writer. I didn't let it bother me. I figured someone doesn't like what you do so they try to ban it."

Caldwell concludes that even though he is best known as the author of those books "every one of my books is important to me. I say what I want to say, and I don't want to repeat myself. I put in a day's work for whatever it avails me. I don't believe in waiting for inspiration because it might not come and then I'd be lost."

Single Traveler Has Problems

By BETTY YARMON

What can a single traveler do to avoid the extra charges put on him or her by hotels all around the world?

Not very much. But the picture seems to be changing for the better, probably because singles have been complaining loudly and for a long time. As a result — as so often happens in American society — someone responds to a complaint by seeing an opportunity for a service business that will help others meet a need. In this case, enterprising travel agencies have been springing up to specialize in the needs of the single traveler.

The rationale for the extra charges is not hard to comprehend. Hotels, pressed economically like everyone else, explain that it costs them just as much to operate a room for one person as for two or more. Since the size of the single room generally is the same as that for two, the hotel pays the same portion of its real estate taxes. Then, heat and light and maintenance are approximately the same even though it is true that the maid has to make up just one bed rather than two.

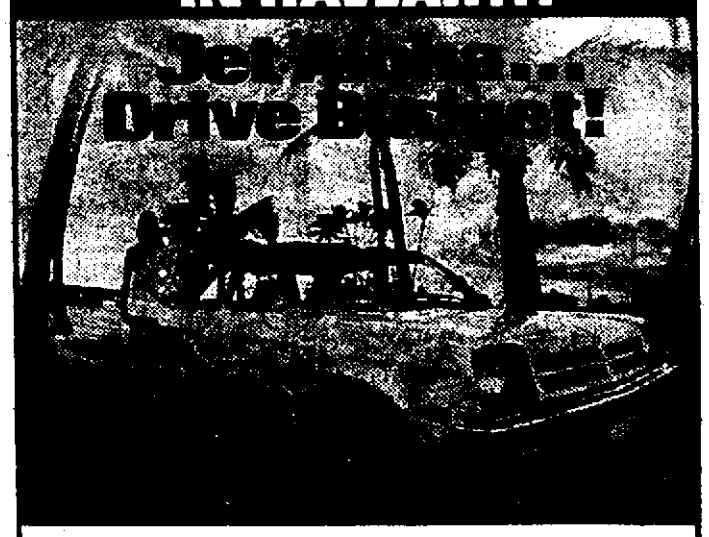
Whatever the rationale, single travelers often are charged as much as $200 or more on the more expensive tours. Beyond that, some singles complain of other discriminatory indignities, like being assigned inferior rooms, being relegated to the back of the bus, and others.

Nor is the problem going to disappear — not with as many as 50,000,000 single households already in existence in the United States. Whether they are of men and women who have never been married, liberated women who have given up family life, widows or widowers, or retired persons with the savings of a lifetime, generally they have fewer responsibilities than the rest of us, and therefore they are more able to get away.

What then can the single traveler do? Here are some possibilities:

1. — Find a compatible companion with whom to travel and share accomodations so that you will be considered a couple rather than two singles. In this way, you will, of course, avoid the surcharges. The advantage here is that your partner will be someone of your own choice, someone whose foibles and eccentricities you presumably know and understand — and who knows and understands yours.

2. — If for one reason or another you can't manage this for yourself, you can go to one or another of the travel agencies that have been forming just for the purpose of matchmaking. These agencies are in the business of trying to link up couples so that they will make up couples who will get along.



Here are a few such agencies:

Travel Mates, 580 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10036; Travel Match, P.O. Box 22, Lenox Hill Station, New York, N.Y. 10021; Company To Go, Suite 206-A, Benson East, Jenkintown,, Pa. 19046; Friends in Travel, 9300 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212; the Widows Travel Club, 17 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.; You may also be able to locate one in your own community, in business for the same purpose. If not, perhaps your local travel agency can do the job for you on a one-time basis, matching those who have come in for travel arrangements and who have explained their reluctance to pay the singles surcharge.

3. — Join one or another of the so-called singles tour clubs. The largest around is Gramercy Travel Systems, of 444 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, which runs Singleworld tours. You pay a fee to join, and for it Gramercy guarantees you will not have to pay any singles surcharges. Presumably, they have enough buying muscle so that hotels are prepared to agree to this stipulation. Gramercy's Singleworld tours, incidentally, are made available to other travel agents, so you may be able to arrange to join through your own local agency.

Along the way, you can take a dip on the ocean in our refreshing salt-water pool. Please your palate with international cuisine. Toast the town ten stories above the sea — in the Viking Crown Lounge. Dance the night away at the Captain's Gala Cocktail Party.

Or you can just lie back on almost an acre of sundeck, and let the Caribbean sun work its magic.

Carrying A Passenger

Carrying a passenger when driving your motorcycle may cause you to have balance and control problems. Those problems multiply, points out the National Automobile Club, if the passenger has had no motorcycle riding experience.

If you do carry a passenger with no riding experience, instruct him on proper riding procedures and safety procedures before he gets on your motorcyle.

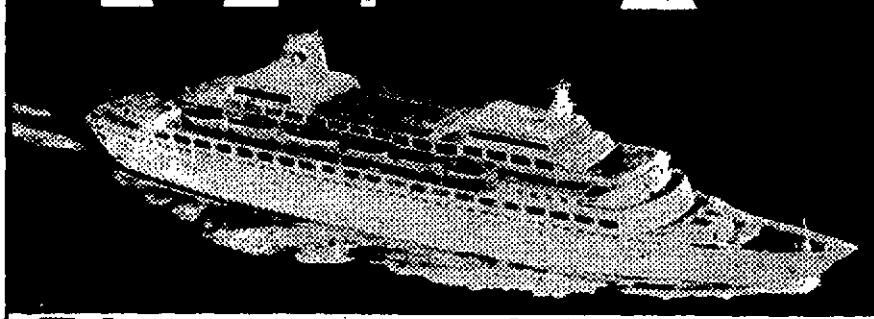
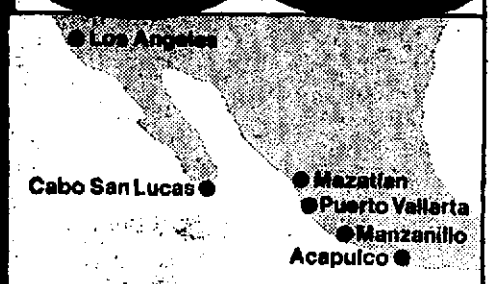
welcoming customers who were absent during the Christmas Holidays.

TAOS (New Mexico): A nine-day snowstorm at this resort was quickly spread around the country and for the first time there have been waiting lines at the lifts, according to an informant. The lack of snow in some parts of the nation brought an unusual bonanza to Taos. Records were set every day as beds in the Valley were turned into black market items and true Taos afficionados shrugged shoulders in dismay. It was situation "unwanted."

At the ski area, everyone prays for snow at brother resorts in order to reduce the mass inflow and allow a return to the more relaxed and cordial Taos ambience.



The final analysis is..."Skiing in the Rockies is not up to previous years — but resorts are in full swing and many skiers who aren't used to the Rockies superlative norm are finding the skiing and entire resort experience quite special."



Celebrity Quotebag

SHIRLEY TEMPLE BLACK: "When I was a little girl, I had many heroes. I met Eleanor Roosevelt when I was nine years old and I think she influenced me, got me interested in human rights and human dignity for all people. I admired Amelia Earhart for getting out on her own and doing something women hadn't ever done before."

PRINCE PHILIP, husband of Britain's Queen Elizabeth, on one of the biggest problems facing the world and the compromise we must make: "The most important compromise is to control our rate of breeding. The world is simply overpopulated, and either we get out of this by self-control or it will be solved for us by disaster. Meanwhile, it is only reasonable to save what we can out of the natural environment. Development planned with consideration need not damage the natural environment, and it is up to the communities to see that it does not damage the human environment. Like all good ideas, conservation has given rise to extremists. There are a lot of religious fanatics about, but they do not invalidate the basic message of, for example, the Christian gospel."

TRIP OF THE WEEK

Whiskey Gulch Where Action Is

In the old days, Kernville was known as Whiskey Flat. The name was earned when a bartender came to a small mining settlement nearby and set up his bar on a clear-off level spot near the Kern River. In those days, the region was wide-open and miners were busily gouging holes in the Greenhorn Mountains, as well as along the rocky riverbed. The gold and silver fever had gripped California and Kernville was not ignored.

Today, Kernville is actually under the waters of Lake Isabella, a man-made body of water formed from the Sierra run-off and from the waters of the Kern River, which meanders through the new town of Kernville. Some of the old buildings were moved from the lake to the dry shore where the town now sits. But visitors to Kernville are often amazed to see rows of trees and other things sticking up from the lake. Such bricabrac make good homes for fish, and fishing is good here, in season. So are raft-runs on the river, also in season (Inquire of the chamber of commerce for details).

Meanwhile, Kernville takes it annual nostalgic look at history Feb. 17-20 with Whiskey Flat Days. Events will include a barbecue, tours of old mining camps, beard growing contests, fiddlers, frog-jumping contests, and greased pig contests.

Motels are sparse but they're there. Secluded nooks along the river are often available.

The mountains, which are a backdoor to Sequoia National Forest (NOT the park of the same name) are covered with snow right now, though conditions may change almost overnight.

If planning to attend Whiskey Flat Days, it is best to phone ahead for reservations. Contact the chamber of commerce for information.

To reach Kernville, take Interstate 5 north of Bakersfield to the Kernville turnoff, and follow the highway which is part freeway, to town.

Fatalities, Injuries

Forty-six thousand fatalities and almost two million disabling injuries, reports the National Automobile Club, occurred as a result of motor vehicle accidents in the United States in 1975.

The total cost, including wage losses, medical costs, insurance administrative costs, and property damage costs, was more than $21 billion.

Shadow Run Phase II Starts In Yorba Linda

Construction of Phase II of the Shadow Run community of single family homes in Yorba Linda is under way.

At the same time, families are beginning to move to their new homes in the initial phase of building. Only nine homes remain to be sold at Phase I prices, according to Bob Mister, vice president sales and marketing for Warmington Development, Irvine.

"Our sales pace continues to be excellent, additional proof that our 'Three-Homes-In-One' concept of distinct sectors for family, formal and private enjoyment meet with homebuyer's approval."

The one and two story, three and four bedroom homes contain up to 2,992 square feet living space and are priced from $83,000.

Exteriors of each home are coordinated and Shadow Run/Yorba Linda has an outstanding choice of styling – handsomely decorated with wood, brick and stone, he said.

Woodburning fireplaces, vaulted ceilings, wall-to-wall carpeting, large master suites with dressing area and private bath, wet bars and open staircases in selected plans and kitchens with shadow-free luminous ceilings and continuous cleaning double oven, range, dishwasher and disposer are price-included amenities.

Schools, major as well as smaller convenience shopping centers, freeway and the other necessities of life are close at hand.

Model homes, decorated by Carole Eichen Interiors, are open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

From anywhere in Orange County, take any convenient way to the Riverside (91) Freeway. Exit at Imperial Boulevard and turn left (north) on Imperial about three miles to Yorba Linda Boulevard. Turn right (east) on Yorba Linda and proceed about two miles to Avenue Rio del Oro and Shadow Run Yorba Linda.

That home ownership is one of the foundations of a healthy, fiscally sound America all seem to agree.

But the means to attaining that goal is split with politicians and social planners calling for more government involvement in the home building business and most builders asking the government to "get off their backs."

This was the general climate during the recently held National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) meeting in Dallas.

Also prevalent were future concerns over the prospect of rent controls, passage of new bills in Congress that may futher affect money supplies, the prospect of situs picketing, rising land costs and futher governmentally imposed restrictions in the name of consumerism that will increase housing costs.

Hard costs now account for less than one-half the cost of building a house, Nathaniel Rogg, NAHB economist and former executive vice president said.

That 1976 had been a good year for the industry most agreed and that 1977 will be even better, most all agreed. Herb Stein, former economic adviser to President Nixon said the building industry "will be the star of the show" during 1977 and predicted 1.9 million starts.

County Story Unique

That California and more specifically Orange County, has a unique story to tell was most evident. The national new home sales price was quoted in the $40,000 range as opposed to the county's $80,000 plus.

One builder from Kansas City told The Register that he was building homes for $44,000 but escalating home prices in his area were being offset by "a 20 per cent appreciation in value over the past 10 years." He was shocked when told that 20 per cent is the annual average in Orange County.

Product marketing was a hot item at the conference with the story of the Irvine Co.'s Woodbridge taking most of the bows. Builders were told that with leadership and assistance of a dynamic and fiscally-able developer, a group of smaller builders could repeat that story anywhere in the U.S.

Douglas Gfeller, Irvine's vice president of residential development said that Woodbridge could be brought to market, four years of preliminary work was carried out and $18 million of front money spent.

Ken Agid, vice president of sales and marketing for Irvine Pacific said that while no homes are presently available for sale, "In order to be continuously successful, you must be in the market continuously. We are selling the future now."

Buyers Changing

One interesting comment Agid made is that buyers are changing fast. "Young families are well-heeled," he said. "They don't have children and don't care to have them. In just one year, our percentage of childless prospects has gone up from 40 to 58 per cent."

Agid's comment was agumented by Ed Akins, one of Woodbridge's builders who said buyers at his firm's project--Woodbridge Crossing--have come close to the target profile with the primary difference being that they have fewer children than expected. "The average size is 2.6 rather than the anticipated 3.1," Akins said.

Energy conservation was another big item with introduction of many new products in that field. Energy source curtailments also were cited as an issue that will dicate future home sizes and design.

NAHB's Rogg, cited the problems in the housing economy. He said the "frontier" has been in the suburbs and no attention has been paid to restoration of existing housing.

"We must develop a program to make cities viable," Rogg said. He termed the situation a "time bomb ticking because of housing costs which should be given top priority otherwise the nation will witness a large economic and social explosion."

To restore cities, Rogg suggests builder incentive, jawboning with leading institutions and as a last result which he termed "not a good way"--regulatory force.

Remove Income Limits

Rogg called for removal of governmentally imposed income limits on assisted housing and more benefit to lendors to compensate for added risks.

He said by removing income limits numerous persons from a wide economic, educational and social range, for one reason or another would move back to the cities thereby making them both economically and socially viable.

Broadmoor Park Final Phase Open

Today, marks the opening of the fourth and final phase of homes at Broadmoor Park, the multi-award-winning residential-recreational neighborhood being built by Broadmoor Homes, Inc. in Orange.

The last phase at Broadmoor Park consists of 56 homes, with three and four bedroom homes ranging in size from 1,722 to 2,592 square feet, with prices from $80,990 to $105,990.

Broadmoor Park, which formally opened in early 1976, received the Grand Award for innovative land planning during the Pacific Coast Builders' Conference last June. It was one of only six grand awards in various categories given to developments throughout the 14 western states.

Last month, during the National Association of Home Builders' conference in Dallas, Broadmoor Park was one of some 25 residential developments to be honored nationally for "Sensible Growth."

Equestrian trails, an equestrian riding ring, two village lakes, one bordered by a park outfitted with barbecues, four tennis courts and a swimming pool are the major amenities at Broadmoor Park. Stabling facilities for horses are available to residents near the equestrian ring.

Four floorplans are offered. The largest of these is the 2,592 square foot Crestview, with four bedrooms and three baths.

A two-story living room is capped by a vaulted, wood beamed ceiling. A massive masonry fireplace contributes to the elegance of the living room setting. A second floor balcony overlooks the living room and the adjoining dining room.

The home's master suite, with its bay window sitting area, is highlighted by Roman-style tub-shower combination in the bath, and a mirrored vanity dressing console, dividing the bath from the dressing area, with its two walls of wardrobes.

Next largest of the Broadmoor Park homes is the 2,319 square foot Brookfield, with four bedrooms and two and one half baths in two stories. The home's "Vista" kitchen, its step-down living room and master suite, and its family room fireplace are popular features.

Both the 1,992 square foot Glenbrook and the 1,722 square foot Woodland are single story homes. Each, however, contains a step-down living room. These three bedroom, two bath homes both have impressive masonry fireplaces in the living rooms.

The Glenbrook has a spacious family room and a versatile service room, while the Woodland contains an atrium that is visible from the entry, and with access from the breakfast nook and the master bedroom.

Fully furnished Broadmoor Park models are open daily from 10 a.m. until dusk. To reach the neighborhood take the Chapman Avenue-east offramp from the Newport Freeway and drive about three and a half miles to the intersection of Chapman and Newport avenues. Turn left on Newport to the community entrance.

Single-Family Detached Adult Homes Now Available In Mission Viejo

Soon-to-retire adults often must give up some of the amenities of a large home, such as formal dining areas and single-story detached design, when they move into a retirement community.

"Fiesta patio homes are the exception," said Jim Leishman, sales manager at Casta del sol, Mission Viejo's retirement community bordering the Casta del Sol public golf course.

"Fiesta homes have the advantages of a high security retirement community and the amenities of a single-family detached home. Three of the four plans offered have both separated formal dining rooms and breakfast areas in the kitchen. The fourth has a dining area adjoining the living room and a breakfast nook.

All single-story detached Fiesta homes have oversized two-car attached garages with direct access into the house, patios accented by low masonry walls, fireplaces, and vaulted ceilings in the living rooms and master suites.

Homes, priced from $58,500 to $67,115, currently are available for sale. The two- and three-bedroom, two-bath homes will be ready for occupancy in April.

Homes in the Fiesta series are built on cul-de-sacs with no more than eight homes on a street.

Models of each of the four Fiesta homes, furnished by Mel Grau Design Corp. of Newport Beach, are open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. The sales complex, on Casta del Sol Road, is above and adjacent to the Casta del Sol public golf course.

To reach the community, take the San Diego Freeway to the La Paz exit and drive east into Mission Viejo. Turn left onto Marguerite Parkway and follow the signs to Casta del Sol.

Features include the guard-gates entries providing 'round-the-clock security and the recreation center which is reserved for the use of Casta del Sol residents. Recreation amenities include a heated pool, hydrotherapy pool, card, craft and exercise rooms, and indoor and outdoor shuffleboard.

The Casta del Sol Homeowners Association maintains landscaping (except for patios and atriums) and building exteriors for a monthly fee of $74.50. At least one buyer must be over 45, and no children under 21 are permitted to reside at Casta del Sol, according to Leishman.

Ranging in size from 1,214 to 1,494, Fiesta homes include shag carpeting in most rooms, vinyl asbestos tile in kitchen, baths and entry, water-saving shower heads and water closets, cedar shake roofs, automatic garage door openers, concrete driveways and gas stubout for the barbecue.

Kitchens feature a five-cycle dishwasher, disposal, gas range, and two continuous cleaning double ovens with black glass doors.

Under present governmental assistance programs, only low-income persons are aided and a homogenous mix is not attained, he said.

Stein said, "I don't think housing economy needs government stimulus. Get rid of the whole government program in housing. It is one of the healthiest sectors of the economy."

Stein said the "way to handle the problem of the extremely poor is not housing, but income. Give them money and let them buy. It's more respectful and more efficient." he said.

Outgoing NAHB president John Hart along with most of the builder speakers struck at governmental involvement in housing.

I am worried that, that partnership (with the government) has changed to one of domination filled with regulations and restrictions," Hart said.

Most of the speakers including builders, Congressmen and quasi-governmental officials called upon a rechartering of FHA and a return of that program to an insurance function rather than a subsidy program for the poor.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Subsequent columns will cover new products, financing, building projections, legislation and other problems affecting both the industry and home buyer.

Timberline Stresses Quality, Environment

Developers, South Coast Community Development Corporation and Hanover Homes, attribute the success of the Timberline in Saddleback Valley to two main factors.

According to Ray J. Ziccardy, president of South Coast Timberline, homes have been built with emphasis on quality. The same principle has been extended to the immediate environment.

During initial planning of the Timberline development, it was decided that the undulating topography of the site be retained and exploited. The result is a residential community which has employed multi-level positions for the majority of its homes, greatly increasing visual interest and privacy.

Add to this, say the developers, "the fact that Timberline enjoys the special grace of over 3,000 mature and specimen trees and is rich in landscaped greenbelts complemented by a central park of close to one and one half acres, you begin to see what we consider is a most attractive place in which to live."

Other community pleasures include two swimming pools, one especially for children and adjacent to the pool area is a sun terrace on which a number of gas barbeques are positioned. Picnic areas, pedestrian paths and a children's play lot are included in built-in benefits of family living at Timberline.

Timberline homes, designed by Foster & O'Neill Architecture and Planning of Tustin, offer three of four bedrooms plus two and one half or three bathrooms and are priced from $83,300.

Eight floorplans containing from 1,957 to 2,194 square feet of living space are offered. Up to four level living is featured and the use of vaulted, sloping or cathedral ceilings in all living rooms lends interior excitement.

Kitchens are carefree. Ceramic tile counter tops, custom handcrafted solid-oak cabinetry surround the built-in range, double self-cleaning ovens, dishwasher, waste disposal and double stainless steel sinks. Plumbing for an icemaker is installed. Master suites have been designed with an eye to privacy.

Timberline enjoys easy freeway access and comprehensive amenities are but minutes away.

Laguna Hills Mall provides excellent shopping and additional commercial centers are nearby.

To reach Timberline, take the San Diego Freeway to Alicia Parkway and travel east to Muirlands Boulevard and turn left to Turf Avenue.

Delinquencies Drop Sharply

Mortgage loan delinquencies at the nation's savings and loan associations and cooperative banks dropped sharply in December to 0.89 per cent from the 0.93 recorded in November, the United States League of Savings Associations reports.

The trade association said that the December figure of 0.89 per cent compared to 0.97 in December, 1975 and 0.88 in December, 1974.

The League bases its delinquency figures on reports from some 900 savings associations and cooperative banks representing more than 51 per cent of the assets of the business. For survey purposes a loan is considered delinquent if payment has not been made within 60 days of the payment date stipulated in the mortgage contract. The League survey includes all types of mortgage loans — conventional, FHA and VA.

League president John A. Hardin, who also is president of First Federal Savings of Rock Hill, So. Carolina, said that a drop in delinquencies is not normally experienced in the month of December.

"It has been our experience that mortgage delinquencies usually rise in December," he said, "probably as a result of Christmas and general holiday season spending. last December's figure offers further evidence that the economy is getting straightened around."

Ponderosa Completes Plans For 3 Northwood Projects

Ponderosa Homes, largest land owner involved in development of Northwood/Irvine, has completed plans for three separate projects, representing over 600 homes, reports E. John Garcia, VP and general manager of the Irvine-based homebuilding firm.

A 130-acre parcel will be developed with two residential communities: Park Place, Ponderosa Homes' popular series of single-family detached homes, and Park Paseo, a patio home project which will be introduced with entirely new floorplans which will be shared by both residential communities.

Additionally, preliminary plans are completed for another 7.3-acre site which will feature the firm's newly-designed Sundance Townhomes. Conceived by award-winning Del Mar architect Paul Thoryk, the community will have 54 units involving both one-and-two story floorplans to continue the popular Park Place concept already established at Lake Forest, Cerritos and Westminster, 287 single-family homes will be available at the new village in Irvine. C R Design of Irvine created these dramatic three-and-four-bedroom homes.

Newest innovation for Ponderosa will be Park Paseo, a 326-home community of patio-styled residences. Four floorplans, designed by Bates-Bassenian-Pekarek, architecture and land planning of Newport Beach, will offer both one-and two-story homes with three of four bedrooms, two or two-and-one-half baths and family rooms.

Site preparation for the three projects is expected to begin within the next month. Decorated models are scheduled to open sometime this summer with the first occupancy slated for late fall.

As a master-planned community, The Village of Northwood also will include neighborhood parks, schools, bike trails, pedestrian paths, shopping facilities and a 20-acre community park.

A House-Sold Word

By Ruth Nippe

Many parents are finding living expenses for sons and daughters attending college in the 1970's often costs more than the tuition, so they're searching for ways to reduce these outlays.

Housing in particular has felt the pressure of spiraling inflation, and parents know that money spent for rent or dormitory fees can never be recaptured.

Average rent for a two-bedroom apartment near Cal State Fullerton today is a little over $200 monthly, or projected out over a four year period totals around $10,000.

With the appreciation build-up in real estate for that length of time, some parents now are considering purchasing income property near the schools attended by their children.

If more than one unit is involved they can be rented to help cover the monthly loan payments, with interest and taxes deducted from their income tax.

Even a modest condominium, considering the appreciation factor, would more than defray the cost of student housing when sold several years later. It makes "cents" to overcome college expenses with a sound investment.

FROST HARDY ANNUALS

Many annual flowers are frost hardy including: Alyssum, stock, viola, phlox, candy tuft, sweet pea, bachelor's button, snapdragon, Iceland poppy, pinks, pansy, California poppy and sweet pea.

After transplanting, be sure to bait the area for snails and slugs.

32 River-View Villas Ready For Occupancy

Sundance Shores, a community of 32 river-view villas, is located in an area where there is very little river property available anymore, according to Gordon Reddall, project manager for the Colorado River resort townhomes.

Located on Nevada's Colorado River shore, across from Bullhead City, the resort development features three and four bedroom townhomes with two baths, priced from $39,500 to $44,000. All of the homes are completed and ready for occupancy.

There are cathedral ceilings, wood-burning fireplaces, balconies, private patios and master suites with private baths. Select plans offer family rooms and all homes have smoke detectors, wall-to-wall carpeting, laundry closets and glass tub-/shower enclosures.

Sundance Shores kitchens are designed for convenience and easy care with built-in Hotpoint range and oven, dishwasher, disposal and refrigerator. Generous dining areas also are featured.

The homes' exteriors are complete with shake roofs, landscaped entry courts and covered parking areas with exterior storage. The homeowners association provides professional maintenance of the grounds and the townhomes' exteriors to allow residents maximum enjoyment of the recreation-oriented lifestyle.

Sundance Shores offers an abundance of fishing, boating, swimming and water sports along the river and at nearby Lake Mojave. Bullhead City, provides a golf course, shopping, a private airport and other community services.

Interested buyers are invited to view color photos of the project at the Walker & Lee Home Shoppers Information Center in Anaheim, where full information is available. Located just off the Santa Ana Freeway south of Harbor Blvd., the Center is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Information also may be obtained by writing Walker & Lee, 1477 Manchester, Anaheim, Calif., 92803.

Cal Coast 'Financing' Saves Time

Available financing is making it easier for clients and sales people of Cal Coast Enterprises, Inc., to move property and complete a smooth transaction.

"Because of our private financial connections, an added service to the client is provided by Cal Coast when it is needed to speed a home buyer or seller transactions," said W. D. "Wil" Gower, executive vice-president of the Fountain Valley-based organization flying the Red Carpet Realty banner.

Gower said Cal Coast now is able to provide short term funding at a low discount in emergency circumstances where ready cash will speed the transaction. "This is purely a service to the client. No profit on the loan is realized by the company."

"This is particularly valuable in providing swing loans which makes it possible for buyers to finance purchase of a new dwelling while waiting for their present one to sell," Gower said.

Such available funds are a boon to Cal Coast's sales team, and frequently are used to save a transaction that might otherwise be lost or fall out of escrow.

Nineteen Cal Coast real estate offices, two escrow offices and a license training school now are scattered over Orange, Riverside, Los Angeles and San Diego counties. Last year the organization, a group within Red Carpet, did approximately $200-million in resale volume.

LA LAMP PROJECT

NEED A LIGHT?

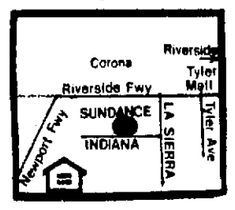
By STEVE ELLINGSON

Here's an easy-to-build lamp any do-it-yourselfer can tackle. It's a contemporary version of the traditional "swag lamp." The curve lines of the wood slats really make this style suitable for most any decor.

We built the prototype pictured here from birch plywood, stained to a walnut finish, but any of the veneered hardwoods may be used.

Measuring 18 inches long by 9 inches in diameter, this hanging lamp allows great flexibility in lighting design. It's equally handy above a chair or end-table for reading, brightening a work area, or simply decorating a problem corner.

With our complete step-by-step instructions, photographs and materials list, the lamp is a snap to build. Just trace the full-size parts onto wood, cut out and assemble (instructions for wiring are included).



To obtain No. 402 Swag Lamp, send $1.50 (includes 1st class postage & handling) by check or money order. To obtain our new 100-page book, PATTERNS FOR BETTER LIVING, send $1.50 (includes postage & handling) by check-or money order.

(Address all orders to Steve Ellingson, c/o: Santa Ana Register Pattern Dept. P. O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, California 91409

HANDY TIP: Rubber-coated electrical cords gain a longer life if you rub a fine coat of paraffin or wax on them every six months. It prevents premature cracking and drying out. (If you have a do-it-yourself question, send it to Steve Ellingson at the above address.)
